Memoir of

THOMAS DEKKER

HOMAS DEKKER was one of those unfortunate poets to whom the Mufe is a cruel stepmother. The little that we know of his life fuggefts a painful and continual struggle with poverty, in which he often fuccumbed, and from which he never arose victo-His stores of wisdom and his wealth of imagination were for forty years lavished on the world, but with little or no reward to himfelf. He wrote continually under the bitter stress of want, and was often compelled to feek friendly aid to release him from the walls of a debtor's prison. A wretched hand-to-mouth existence, a career made fordid by the conftant necessity of writing for daily bread, feems to have been his lot from first to last, relieved perhaps by occasional glimpfes of happiness and repose, such as he must have enjoyed when composing some of the choicest of the long series of dramas which constitute his chief title to same.

That he was born in the metropolis we may infer from a profe tract of his own, (I) where, apostrophising London, he says,—"O, thou beautifullest daughter of the two united Monarchies! from thy womb received I my being; from thy brests my nourishment." The exact date of his birth is uncertain; in a tract dated February, 1637, he speaks of "my three-score years," (2) but the expression is a vague one, and may mean any age from fixty on towards seventy. Indeed, in the (unique) tract entitled "Warres, Warres, Warres," of date almost ten years earlier (1628), Dekker had already spoken of himself as an old man; (3) and in the Dedication to his Tragi-

² English Villanies Seven Severall Times Prest to Death. In his Dedication of this tract to the Middlesex justices of the Peace, he says:—"I preach without a Pulpit: this is no Sermon, but an Epistle Dedicatory, which dedicates these Discoveries, and my threescore yeares devotedly yours in my best service."

Comedy, called Match mee in London (1631), to Lodowick Carlell, he pathetically fays: "I have beene a Priest in APOLLO's Temple, many yeares, my voyce is decaying with my Age, yet yours being cleare and aboue mine, shall much honour mee, if you but listen to my old Tunes." (4) This is hardly the language of a man who has only just passed his fiftieth year; though Dekker, with such a weight of forrow, if not of years, on his shoulders, might well feel old before his time. (5)

"A Dedication.

Dear, near and true—no truer Time himfelf
Can prove you, though he make you evermore
Dearer and nearer, as the rapid of life
Shoots to the fall—take this and pray that he
Who wrote it, honouring your fweet faith in him,
May truft himfelf, and after praife and fcorn,
As one who feels the immeasurable world,
Attain the wife indifference of the wife;
And after Autumn past—if left to pass
His autumn into feeming leasless days,
Draw toward the long frost and longest night,
Wearing his wifdom lightly, like the fruit
Which in our winter woodland looks a flower."

⁵ It is curious to compare with the above lament the expression of a similar one written at the age of sifty-sive (1864) by our greatest living poet:—

Another reason for fixing the date of his birth somewhat earlier than the "three-score years" of 1637 would seem to imply, is that his earliest acknowledged publication (6) had already appeared in 1600, and that we hear of him in Henslowe's Diary as a writer for the theatre as early as 1597. (7) We may fasely assume him to have been born, therefore, somewhere in the second decade of Elizabeth's reign; not earlier probably than 1570, and certainly not later than 1577.

We learn from the registers of St. Saviour's, Southwark, that the person who probably was Dekker's father, was buried there in 1594; and from the registers of St. Giles, Cripplegate (where Henslowe's and Alleyn's theatre, the Fortune, for which Dekker wrote, was situated), that Thomas Dycker, gent., had a daughter Dorcas christened there on 27th Oct., 1594, and that Thomas Decker, yeoman, had a daughter

Anne christened there on 14th Oct., 1602. Neither of these might be our poet, and it was not usual to designate an author "yeoman." Thomas Dekker had a daughter Elizabeth buried there in 1598, and a son of Thomas Dekker was buried at St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, on 19th April in the same year. The widow of old Thomas Dekker, who died in 1594, was living in Maid Lane, Southwark, near the Globe Theatre, in 1596. (7)

We have faid that Dekker began to write for the stage as early as 1597. His first attempts, however, in most of which he seems to have been associated with others, have not been preferved. (8)

⁷ COLLIER'S Bibliographical Account of Early English Literature (Lond. 1865), I., 195.

⁸ Henflowe records payments to Dekker and Chettle "in earneste of their boocke called Troyelles and creffida," on the 7th and 16th April, 1599. On the 2nd May, 1599, a payment of five shillings was made to Dekker "in earneste of a Boocke called orestes sures," a play in which he does not appear to have had any coadjutor. In May, 1599, there are two payments to Dekker and Chettle for "the tragedie of Agamemnone." In July and August, 1599, he is mentioned in connexion with a play called the "stepmothers tragedy," and on 1st August, 1599, he receives forty shillings "for a bookc called beare a braine."

His two earliest extant dramatic productions, The Shomaker's Holiday and The Comedie of Old Fortunatus — the first anonymous (9) and

In September, 1599, various payments are made to Dekker, Jonfon, and Chettle, and "another gentleman," on account of a play called "Robert the fecond, Kinge of Scottes tragedie."

In January, 1599—1600, Dekker receives a payment for a play called Truth's Supplication to Candlelight; in the following month payments are made to Dekker, Haughton, and Daye, for the The Spanish Moor's Tragedy [by fome fupposed to be identical with the play entitled Lust's Dominion, first printed in 1657, and ascribed to Marlowe]. In March, 1599—1600, Chettle, Dekker, Haughton, and Daye, received payment for a play called The Seven Wise Masters. All these pieces appear to have remained in manuscript, and to have perished.

9 The abfurdity of attributing this play to Barten Holiday (as in the Library Catalogue of the British Museum, in Lowndes, and elsewhere) must furely have arisen from some blundering binder having lettered one of the later editions "The Shoemakers."—HOLIDAY. The date of the first edition alone should have prevented the perpetuation of such a piece of sutility. Barten Holiday was born n 1593, and must have been, indeed, an infant prodigy to have produced such a play as The Shoemaker's Holiday at the age of seven. Dekker's authorship of this play is corroborated by the following entry in Henslowe's Diary:—"Lent unto Samewell Rowley and Thomas Dowton, the 15 of Julye, 1599, to bye a Boocke of Thomas Dickers, called the gentle Craft the some of iijl."

the fecond figned with his name at the end (10) -were published in 1600. With a single exception, to be mentioned prefently, he probably never furpaffed thefe earlier works, either in the lighter or the graverstrain. The Shoemaker's Holiday, both in the fcenes of wild fun and buffoonery, and in the tender love-story that runs through it like a filver thread, has all the charm of a Waverley novel, and possesses the very highest interest as an historical picture of manners. Simon Eyre is inimitable: there is no better type of jovial honest merriment in the whole range of English literature. He is as original and well-fustained a character as Falstaff himself. Of the Comedie of Old Fortunatus, Hazlitt might well fay that it has "the idle garrulity of age, with the freshness and gaiety of youth still upon its cheek and in its heart." The fongs in thefe two pieces are exquifitely beautiful, and the Prologues to ¹⁰ Tho. Dekker.—The name is thus fpelt in all the exifting autograph fignatures of the poet, and (we believe without exception) in all the original editions of those pieces of which he was the sole author. To this form we have ourselves uniformly adhered. By his contemporaries, by his publishers, and by his critics and annotators, the name of Dekker has been spelt with almost as many variations as that of his illustrious contemporary Shakespeare:—e.g., Decker, Deckers, Dickers, Dekker, Dekers, Dekker, Dekker, Dekkers, Deckar, Dekkar, &c.

both contain fome pleafant flattery of Queen Elizabeth, before whom they were performed.

The Comedic of Old Fortunatus received a German drefs in the prefent century. The translator, Dr. Schmidt, makes the following observations on its style and versification:—

"In Beziehung auf die Sprache will ich nur an Eins erinnern. Es ist dies der Gebrauch des Reims, des reimlosen Iambus und der Prosa. Wie in den edleren Naturen Einficht und höheres Gefühl beständig die Oberhand haben, fo schläft in den gemeinem dasselbe in fernster Tiefe, und giebt kein Zeichen. Aber wenn von auffen die Stimme des Höchsten donnert in plötzlich überraschendem Segen oder Verderben, da entbrennt auch bei diesen der göttliche Funken, und bricht hervor mit ungeahndeter Kraft, in treffendem Wort. So finden wir bei Shakspeare und Decker den Reim als Organ jener höchsten Lebensblitze, die reimlofen Iamben für alle anderen unendlich mannigfachen Gemüthfzustände, bis zu dem gewöhnlichen gleichgültigen hinab, wo der Mensch sich gehn lässt, da tritt die Profa ein, und ist recht eigentlich zu Hause in den scherzhaften Maffen. Denn die in demfelben abgespiegelte Kehrseite des Lebens kann nur erfreulich und bedeutend fein, wenn unbewusst dahinter wie im Traume der Ernst als Folie liegt, und nicht hervortritt mit seinem gewichtigen, gemessenen Wort. Dieses so natürliche Verhältnifs zwischen der Sprache und dem Wesen des Dinges hat gewifs auch feinen Theil an dem unergründlichen Wohlgefallen, mit welchem wir die Shakspeareschen Erzeugnisse geniessen. In unserm Drama spricht der nichtige Schatte nur den einzigen Vers

'Doch Herr, dass es nicht ende jämmerlich!'

In dem Augenblick ist er (ohne es zu wissen) und daran zu glauben, wirklicher Profet, wie Lichtenberg versichert, dass der gewöhnlichste Mensch wenigstens drei Mal im Jahr einen genialen Augenblick habe. Fortuna, Tugend, Laster, Ampedo, Orleans, dagegen kommen in ihrer Feierlich keit niemals heraus aus den künstlich gemessenen Worten."(11)

His next published play was Satiro-mastix, or The vntrussing of the Humorous Poet. As a perfonal fatire of considerable pungency directed against the supposed arrogant pretensions of Ben Jonson, it seems to have enjoyed great popularity. In reading it now, more than two centuries after the grave has closed over both the combatants, it is impossible to suppress a feeling of sorrowful wonder that two men so gifted should have prostituted their genius to the expression of such narrow jealousses and hatreds.

"Ah God! the petty fools of rhyme

And look'd at by the filent flars:
That flrain to make an inch of room
For their fweet felves, and cannot hear
The fullen Lethe rolling doom
On them and theirs and all things here."

That Dekker received provocation no one will deny. Unworthy personalities had been directed against him by his brother poet and former collaborator.(12) The Poetaster had been flung like a fire-brand among the wits and witlings, among the poets and the smaller fry who only aspired to that name. Dekker was chosen as the champion of all these, and acquitted himself of the

This tragedy was founded upon an event of comparatively recent occurrence. The play has been loft, but the flory has come down to us. The event happened in February, 1591, and it appears that Ben Jonson and Dekker had finished their tragedy in September, 1599, when the last payment of £6 was made to them."—Shake-speare Society's Papers, vol. II. (1845), p. 79.

office in a most effective manner. The elder Disraeli in his Quarrels of Authors has given the following account of the business, which we quote as containing some just and careful criticism:

"This quarrel is a fplendid inflance how genius of the first order, lavishing its satirical powers on a number of contemporaries, may discover among the crowd, some individual who may return with a right aim the weapon he has himself used, and who will not want for encouragement to attack the common affailant: the greater genius is thus mortisted by a victory conceded to the inserior, which he himself had taught the meaner one to obtain over him.

One of the 'fcreaming graffhoppers held by the wings,' boldly turned on the holder with a fcorpion's bite; and Dekker, who had been lashed in The Poetaster, produced his Satiromastix, or the untrusting of the humorous Poet. Dekker was a subordinate author, indeed; but, what must have been very galling to Jonson, who was the aggressor, indignation proved such an inspirer, that Dekker seemed to have caught some portion of Jonson's own genius, who had the art of making even Dekker popular; while he discovered that his own laurel-wreath had been dextrously changed by the Satiromastix into a garland of 'stinging nettles.'

In The Poetaster Crifpinus is the picture of one of those impertinent fellows who resolve to become Poets, having an equal aptitude to become anything that is in sashionable request. When Hermogenes, the finest singer in Rome, refused to sing, Crifpinus gladly seizes the occasion, and whispers the lady near him—'Entreat the ladies to entreat me to sing, I besech you.' This character is marked by a ludicrous peculiarity which turning on an individual characteriftic, must have affished the audience in the true application. It is probable that Dekker had some remarkable head of hair, and that his locks hung not like 'the curls of Hyperion;'(13) for the jeweller's wise admiring among the company, the persons of Ovid, Tibullus, &c., Crissianus acquaints her that they were poets, and since she admires them, promises to become a poet himself. The simple lady surther inquires, 'if when he is a poet his looks will change? and particularly if his hair will change, and be like those gentlemen's?' 'A man,' observes Crissianus, 'may be a poet, and yet not change his hair.' 'Well!' exclaims the simple jeweller's wise, 'we shall see your cunning; yet if you can change your hair, I pray do it.'

The Satiromastix may be considered as a parody on The Poetaster. Jonson, with classical taste, had raised his scene in the court of Augustus: Dekker, with great unhappines, places his in that of William Rusus. The interest of the piece arises from the dexterity with which Dekker has accommodated those very characters which Jonson has satirised in his Poetaster. This gratisted those who came every day to the theatre, delighted to take this mimetic revenge on the Arch Bard. Some censured Dekker for barrenness of invention, in bringing on those characters in his own play whom Jonson had stigmatised; but 'it was not improper,' he says, 'to set the same dog upon Horace, whom Horace had fet to worry others.' Dekker warmly concludes his spirited presatory address 'To the World' with defying the Jonsonians.

In Dekker's Satiromastix Horace junior is first exhibited in his fludy, rehearing to himfelf an Ode: fuddenly the Pindaric rapture is interrupted by the want of a rhyme; this is fatirically applied to an unlucky line of Ben Jonson's own. One of his fons, Asinius Bubo, who is blindly worshipping his great idol, or his Ningle, as he calls him, amid his admiration of Horace, perpetually breaks out into digreffive accounts of what fort of a man his friends take him to be. For one Horace in wrath prepares an epigram; and for Crispinus and Fannius, brother bards, who threaten 'they'll bring your life and death on the stage, as a bricklayer in a play,' he says, 'I can bring a prepared troop of gallants, who, for my fake, shall diftafte every unfalted line in their fly-blown comedies.' 'Ay,' replies Afinius, 'and all men of my rank!' Crifpinus Horace calls 'a light voluptuous reveller,' and Fannius 'the flightest cobweb-lawn piece of a poet.' Both enter, and Horace receives them with all friendship. is here conducted not without skill. To the complaints of the querulous fatirift, Crifpinus replies with dignified gravity, at which the galled Horace winces. Fannius too joins, and fhows Ben the abfurd oaths he takes, when he fwears to all parties that he does not mean them. Horace is awkwardly placed between these two friendly remonstrants, to whom he promises perpetual love.

Captain Tucca, a dramatic personage in Jonson's Poetasler, and a copy of his own Bobadil, is here continued with the same spirit; and as that character permitted from the extravagance of its ribaldry, it is now made the vehicle for those more personal retorts, exhibiting the secret history of Ben, which perhaps twitted the great bard more than the keenest wit, or the most solemn admonition which Dekker could ever attain. Jonson had cruelly touched on Dekker being out at elbows, and made himself too merry with the histrionic tribe: he who was himself a poet, and had been a Thespian!

The greatness of Ben's genius is by no means denied by his rivals; and Dekker makes Fannius reply with noble feelings, and in an elevated strain of poetry."

In the following year (1603) a play was published anonymously, of which Dekker is supposed to have written the principal portion, his assistants being Haughton and Chettle. This is entitled The Comodie of Patient Grissil (14). From internal evidence there is little doubt that he had a share in it; though, as the printed copy is entirely silent as to the authorship, which only rests on some vague entries in Henslowe's Diary, (15) this play has not been included in the prefent collection. The following Song, however, has decidedly the ring of Dekker about it:—

Art thou poore yet hast thou golden Slumbers:

Oh fweet content!

Art thou rich yet is thy minde perplexed?

Oh punnishment.

Doft thou laugh to fee how fooles are vexed?

To ad to golden numbers, golden numbers.

The following pretty lullaby Song was probably also written by Dekker:—

Golden flumbers kiffe your eyes, Smiles awake you when you rife: Sleepe pretty wantons doe not cry, And I will fing a lullabie, Rocke them rocke them lullabie.

Care is heauy therefore fleepe you, You are care and care must keep you:

In 1604 appeared the first part of that beautiful play which most critics have agreed in considering as Dekker's mafterpiece. As Mr. Swinburne has faid in regard to one of the finest plays of Ford, "it is fomewhat unfortunate that its very title should found fo strangely in the ears of a generation whose ears are the chastest part about them." (16) Although the name of Dekker stands alone on the titlepage of all the editions of The Honest Whore, an entry in Henflowe's Diary, corroborated by fome internal evidence, would feem to imply that in the composition of at any rate the first part of the play he received fome aid from Thomas Middleton, with whom he is known to have written conjointly on two other occasions. Dyce has accordingly affumed a joint author-

fhip in both parts, and has included them in his edition of Middleton's works, though he admits that that writer's fhare in the play was probably infignificant. (17)

Confidering, however, that the year before, when Middleton contributed a fpeech of only fixty lines to his Magnificent Entertainment given to King James, (1603) Dekker had gone out of his way to acknowledge the obligation, (18) I should be inclined to think the aid given in the present case was of a very limited character, and was probably confined to a sew suggestions on the general conduct and groundwork of the play; that at any rate it did not extend far enough to cast a doubt on Dekker's creation and authorship of those beautiful scenes and characters of which Hazlitt has spoken with fo much enthusiafm. I am most anxious to establish this point in the reader's mind, more especially because in the plays which Dekker afterwards avowedly wrote in conjunction with Webster, Middleton, Massinger, and Ford, it has been the fashion from the time of Langbaine down to that of Gifford and Dyce, to attribute to him all the coarse and careless scenes, and to assign all the tender and poetical passages to his collaborators, and thus to rob him of some of his chief claims to our consideration as a dramatic writer. (19)

The Second part of The Honest Whore does

^{19 &}quot;Thomas Dekker," fays old Gerard Langbaine, "was more famous for the contention he had with Ben Jonfon for the Bays, than for any great Reputation he had gained by his own Writings. Yet even in that age, he wanted not his Admirers nor his Friends amongst the Poets: in which number I reckon the Ingenious Mr. Richard Brome; who always styled him by the title of Father. He clubb'd with Webster in writing Three Plays; and with Rowley and Ford in another: and I think I may venture to fay, that these Plays as far exceed those of his own Brain, as a platted Whipcord exceeds a fingle Thread in strength. Of those which he writ alone I know none of much efteem, except The Untruffing of the Humorous Poet, and that chiefly on account of the Subject of it, which was the witty Ben Jonson. Of Fortunatus I can give no other account than that I once barely faw it, and not feem to have been printed until 1630; (20) at any rate no earlier edition is known to exist. As, however, the two plays succeed each other in proper and natural sequence, we have departed in this instance from our otherwise uniform chronological order of arrangement.

Of The Honest Whore Hazlitt, in his Lectures on the Dramatic Literature of the Age of Elizabeth, writes in the following terms:—

"Old honest Dekker's Signior Orlando Friscobaldo I shall never forget! I became only of late acquainted with (that it) is printed in quarto."—GERARD LANGBAINE: Account of the English Dramatick Poets, Oxford, 1691, p. 121.

What are we to think of the value of a man's criticism who pronounces so sweeping a judgment on works that he admits he has never read.

20 The text is very corrupt, as is also that of the later editions of the first part. Into the first edition of this (1604) some serious errors had crept, which were corrected in the excellent edition of 1605 (one of the most immaculate of Elizabethan plays in regard to accuracy of printing, and evidently superintended by the author himself). The later editions, however, repeated all the errors of the first, and gathered a good many more by the way (especially that of 1635). Mr. Dyce was the first to point out the existence and peculiarities of the edition of 1605, which appears to be of extraordinary rarity. It has, of course, formed the basis of our own text.

this last-mentioned worthy character; but the bargain between us is, I trust, for life. We fometimes regret that we had not fooner met with characters like this, that feem to raife, revive, and give a new zeft to our being. . . The execution is, throughout, as exact as the conception is new and mafterly. There is the least colour possible used; the pencil drags; the canvas is almost feen through: but then, what precision of outline, what truth and purity of tone, what firmness of hand, what marking of character! The words and answers all along are so true and pertinent, that we feem to fee the gestures, and to hear the tone with which they are accompanied. So when Orlando, difguifed, fays to his daughter, 'You'll forgive me,' and the replies, 'I am not marble, I forgive you;' or again, when she introduces him to her husband, faying fimply, 'It is my father,' there needs no ftage-direction to fupply the relenting tones of voice or cordial frankness of manner with which these words are spoken. It is as if there were fome fine art to chifel thought, and to embody the inmost movements of the mind in every-day actions and familiar speech. Simplicity and extravagance of flyle, homeliness and quaintness, tragedy and comedy, interchangeably fet their hands and feals to this admirable production. We find the fimplicity of profe with the graces of poetry. The stalk grows out of the ground; but the flowers fpread their flaunting leaves in the air. The mixture of levity in the chief character bespeaks the bitterness from which it feeks relief; it is the idle echo of fixed defpair, jealous of observation or pity. quivers on the lip, while the tear flands congealed on the eyelid. fessions of misanthropy, he watches over his daughter with kindly folicitude; plays the careful housewife; broods over her lifeless hopes; nurses the decay of her hutband's fortune, as he had supported her tottering infancy; faves the high-flying Matheo from the gallows more than once, and is twice a father to them. The flory has all the romance of private life, all the pathos of bearing up against filent grief, all the tenderness of concealed affection: there is much forrow patiently borne, and then comes peace. Bellafront, in the two parts of this play taken together, is a most interesting character. extreme, and I am afraid almost an ideal case. She gives the play its title, turns out a true penitent, that is, a practical one, and is the model of an exemplary wife. change of her relative position, with regard to Hippolito, who, in the first part, in the fanguine enthusiasm of youthful generofity, has reclaimed her from vice, and in the fecond part, his own faith and love of virtue having been impaired with the progrefs of years, tries in vain to lure her back again to her former follies, has an effect the most firiking and beautiful. The pleadings on both fides, for and against female faith and constancy are managed with great polemical skill, assisted by the grace and vividness of poetical illustration. As an instance of the manner in which Bellafront speaks of the miseries of her former situation, I might give the lines in which the contrasts the different regard shewn to the modest or the abandoned of her fex. Perhaps this fort of appeal to matter of fact and popular opinion, is more convincing than the fcholastic fubtleties of the Lady in Comus. The manner too in which Infelice, the wife of Hippolito, is made acquainted with her hufband's infidelity, is finely dramatic; and in the fcene where the convicts him of his injustice, by taxing herfelf with incontinence first, and then turning his most galling reproaches to her into upbraidings against his own conduct, she acquits herfelf with infinite spirit and address. The contrivance by which, in the first part, after being supposed dead, she is restored to life, and married to Hippolito, though perhaps a little far-setched, is affecting and romantic. There is uncommon beauty in the Duke her sather's description of her sudden illness. Candido, the good-natured man of this play, is a character of inconceivable quaintness and simplicity. His patience and good-humour cannot be disturbed by anything. The idea (for it is nothing but an idea) is a droll one, and is well supported. . . . The sudden turn of the character of Candido, on his second marriage, is, however, as amusing as it is unexpected.

"Matheo, the 'high-flying' hufband of Bellafront, is a masterly portrait, done with equal ease and effect. is a perfon almost without virtue or vice, that is, he is in ftrictness without any moral principle at all. He has no malice against others, and no concern for himself. He is gay, profligate, and unfeeling, governed entirely by the impulse of the moment, and utterly reckless of consequences. His exclamation, when he gets a new fuit of velvet, or a lucky run on the dice, ' Do we not fly high,' is an answer to all arguments. Punishment or advice has no more effect upon him, than upon the moth that flies into the candle. He is only to be left to his fate. Orlando faves him from it, as we do the moth, by fnatching it out of the flame, throwing it out of the window, and shutting down the casement upon it."

In comparing the genius of Dekker and Webfter, he adds:—

Memoir of Thomas Dekker. xxix

"Dekker has, I think, more truth of character, more inftinctive depth of fentiment, more of the unconfcious fimplicity of nature. He excels in giving expression to certain habitual, deeply-rooted feelings, which remain pretty much the same in all circumstances, the simple uncompounded elements of nature and passion."

The Whore of Babylon, which followed in 1607, is perhaps the worst and least interesting of Dekker's dramatic pieces. The allegory is without fitness or beauty, the introduction of Oueen Elizabeth, under the name of Titania, is clumfily managed; the personification of Time, Truth, and Plain-dealing is equally fo. There is no dramatic unity or interest, no infight into character, no beauty of dialogue. The fpeeches are either bald and profaic, or fwell into turgid The introduction of the Spanish bombaft. Armada is at once heavy and ridiculous. That this dull effusion of loyalty may have given pleasure at the time, is likely enough; but no one will read it now except for the fake of its antiquarian interest. The only scenes in any way relieved from the general infipidity are those in which Plain-dealing describes to Truth the fashions of the city; and here and there throughout the play one comes on a line or two of poetry flashing out for a moment in the darknefs.

In the same year (1607) appeared the three plays written conjointly by Dekker and Webster, viz., Westward Hoe, Northward Hoe, and Sir Thomas Wyat. The first two have little to diftinguish them from the ordinary comedies of the time; and the latter, whatever merit it may have poffeffed in its original form, has been fo mutilated by the transcriber or by the printer as to possess scarcely any value.

In his next dramatic production, The Roaring Girle (1611), Dekker was affociated with Middleton, who, as we have feen, in the opinion of Mr. Dyce, wrote the larger share of this play. Middleton's name is printed first on the title-page, if that be any criterion, and the Preface is figned by him: it is certain, however, that there are many places where the hand of Dekker may clearly be recognifed.

In 1612 Dekker was employed to write the Mayoralty Pageant, which he entitled Troia Nova Triumphans: London Triumphing. the same year appeared his play entitled If it be not good, the Diuell is in it; to which much the fame remarks apply as we have already made respecting The Whore of Babylon. The beginning of this play (observes Langbaine) feems to be written in imitation of Machiavel's novel. Belphegor, where Pluto fummons the devils to council.

From 1613 to 1616 we learn, on the authority of Oldys, that Dekker was in King's Bench Prifon. In connexion with this circumftance, an interefting letter has been preferved in the archives of Dulwich College. Mr. Payne Collier, in his "Memoirs of Alleyn," writes as follows:—

"By the autumn of 1616, the construction of Dulwich College, which Alleyn named "The College of God's gift," must have been considerably advanced, and ready for the reception of some of the objects of the founder's bounty. At this date Alleyn received a letter from one of Shakespeare's most popular and distinguished contemporaries,-Thomas Dekker. He was a playwright of great celebrity fome years before the death of Queen Elizabeth, and had written most of his pieces for companies with which Alleyn and Henflowe were connected. Like many of his class, he feems to have been a man of careless habits, as regarded his pecuniary affairs, living from hand to mouth, by turns affluent and needy, and fupplying his preffing wants by the produce of his prolific pen. At the date of the following communication he was a prisoner in the King's Bench; and it was, no doubt, intended to induce Alleyn to make him a prefent in return for fome enclosed verses "in praise of charity," and in celebration of the benevolent work which was now approaching completion. The verfes themselves have not furvived, but the letter containing them has:-

It is to be regretted that Dekker's tribute to Alleyn has fhared the fate of many things he and his contemporaries composed. Few things in the long and honourable annals of Dulwich College would possess greater interest. We need entertain little doubt that Alleyn took steps to relieve his old friend's necessities; and as it is stated that Dekker was released from prison in the very year his letter bears date, it may not be too much to suppose that Alleyn had a hand in his liberation. Alleyn's known liberality, and fent him fome laudatory verses, he was in confinement in the King's Bench, and we see that he was again a prisoner when he introduced a young man to Alleyn's notice as a servant. The expression, "I give you thanks for the last remembrance of your love," warrants the conclusion that Alleyn had sent pecuniary assistance to Dekker on more than one previous occassion. Respecting the date of the letter, we can give no information, and the back of the sheet having been torn off, the address has been lost; but, considering its contents and the place where it was found, there can be no doubt at all on the latter point. (22).

After his release from prison, Dekker appears to have been occupied with some of his innumerable prose pamphlets. His name is not connected with any new play until 1622, when The Virgin-Martyr, written conjointly with Massinger, appeared. Gifford has endeavoured to claim for Massinger nearly all the serious passages of this play, and to saften on Dekker the stigma of having contributed all the coarser scenes. Other critics have judged very differently. The reader shall hear both sides of the question, and form his own opinion.

Memoir of Thomas Dekker. xxxv

"It should be observed," fays Gifford, "in justice to our old plays, that few or rather none of them, are contaminated with fuch detestable ribaldry as the prefent one. To "low wit," or indeed to wit of any kind, it has not the flightest pretension; being, in fact, nothing more than a loathfome footerkin engendered of filth and dulnefs. was evidently the author's defign to perfonify Lust and Drunkenness in the characters of Hircius and Spungius, and this may account for the ribaldry in which they in-That Maffinger is not free from dialogues of low wit and buffoonery (though certainly he is much more fo than his contemporaries) may readily be granted; but the person who, after perusing this execrable trash, can imagine it to bear any refemblance to his flyle and manner, must have read him to very little purpose. affuredly written by Dekker, as was the rest of this act, in which there is much to approve.

On the passage beginning-

Dor. My booke and taper (vol. iv. p. 26),

he observes :---

"What follows, to the end of the scene, is exquisitely beautiful. What pity that a man so capable of interesting our best passions (for I am persuaded that this also was written by Dekker) should profitute his genius and his judgment to the production of what could only disgrace himself, and disgust his reader.

And he concludes :--

"With a neglect of precision which pervades all the arguments of Mr. Monck Mason, he declares it is easy to diffinguish the hand of Dekker from that of Massinger, xxxvi Memoir of Thomas Dekker.

yet finds a difficulty in appropriating their most characteristic language. With respect to the scenes between the two buffoons, it would be an injury to the name of Massinger to waste a single argument in proving them not to be his. In saying this I am actuated by no hostility to Dekker, who in this Play has many passages which evince that he wanted not talents to rival, if he had pleased, his friend and associate."

To this Mr. Kingsley rejoins:-

"Every pains has been taken to prove that the indecent fcenes in the play were not written by Massinger, but by Dekker: on what grounds we know not. We are aware of no canons of internal criticism which will enable us to decide, as boldly as Mr. Gisford does, that all the indecency is Dekker's, and all the poetry Massinger's."(23)

A recent writer on the "Minor Elizabethan Dramatifts," observes:—

"To prove how much finer, in its effence, his genius was than the genius of fo eminent a dramatist as Massinger, we only need to compare Massinger's portions of the play of The Virgin Martyr with Dekker's. The scene between Dorothea and Angelo, in which she recounts her first meeting with him as a "fweet-faced beggar-boy," and the scene in which Angelo brings to Theophilus the basket of fruit and flowers which Dorothea has plucked in Paradise, are inexpressibly beautiful in their exquisite

Memoir of Thomas Dekker. xxxvii fubtlety of imagination and artless elevation of sentiment." (24)

But a still better and earlier authority has settled the question. In his Specimens of the Elizabethan Dramatists, Charles Lamb extracts the scene between Angelo and Dorothea, and says:

"This fcene has beauties of fo very high an order that, with all my respect for Massinger, I do not think he had poetical enthusiasm capable of furnishing them. His associate Dekker, who wrote Old Fortunatus, had poetry enough for anything. The very impurities which obtrude themselves among the sweet pieties of this play have a strength of contrast, a raciness, and a glow in them, which are above Massinger. They set off the religion of the rest."

In 1628 and 1629 Dekker was, for two fucceffive years employed to write the Mayoralty Pageants Britannia's Honor and London's Tempe are the rareft, though certainly far from the best of his pieces. In 1631 appeared the Tragi-Comedy called, Match mee in London, the plot of which is thus sketched in Geneste's History of the Stage:—

"Tormiella is the daughter of Malevento—her father had promifed her to Gazetto—she elopes from Cordova with Cordolente—they are married—he is a citizen and

There is an underplot—Don John, the King's brother, wants to obtain the crown—in the last fcene he renounces his ambitious views, and gains the King's pardon. The title feems to be a challenge to match Tormiella in London, if one can—the King concludes the play with faying that Tormiella has no parallel."

In 1632 Dekker prefixed fome commendatory verses to Richard Brome's comedy of The Northern Lasse.

Of The Wonder of a Kingdom, published in 1636, the German critic(25) already quoted speaks as follows:

"Das gewaltige Jugendfeuer, welches den Fortunatus durch-dringt, ist in diesem Drama erloschen. Beständiger Mangel an den ersten Bedürsnissen des Lebens, Neid seiner Feinde, vielleicht eigene Schwäche und Sünde verbunden mit dem Alter, scheinen die Krast des so viel versprechenden Mannes gebrochen zu haben. Mit Wehmuth erinnern wir uns bei dieser Gelegenheit der Worte ienes Dichters:

"Nicht blofs erbleichen junge Rofenwangen, Dem Geist auch droht's, dass er sich überlebe!"

Hazlitt, however, speaks of the character of Iacomo Gentili in this play as "that truly ideal character of a magnificent patron."

The two remaining plays of Dekker, written in conjunction with Ford—The Sun's Darling and The Witch of Edmonton—were not published until some years after his death—the former in 1656, and the latter in 1658.

Of The Sun's Darling Gifford writes as follows:—

"I know not on what authority Langbaine speaks [we have seen in another case on what a slender one]; but he expressly attributes the greater part of this moral masque to Ford. As far as concerns the last two acts, I agree with him; and a long and clear examination of this poet's manner enables me to speak with some degree of considence. But I trace Dekker perpetually in the other three acts, and through the whole of the comic part. I think well of this poet, and should pause before I admitted the inferiority of his genius—as far, at least, as imagination is concerned—to that of Ford: but his rough vigour and his irregular metre generally enable us to mark the line between him and his more harmonious coadjutor."

He remarks thus on The Witch of Edmonton:—

"It is very eafy to fneer at the fupernatural portions of this play—which I confider creditable to the talents and feelings of both poets. I believe in witchcraft no more than the critics; neither, perhaps, did Ford and Dekker, but they dealt with those who did; and we are less concerned with the visionary creed of our forefathers than with the skill and dexterity of those who wrote in conformity to it, and the moral or ethical maxims which they enable us to draw from it.

"The ferious part of this drama is fweetly written. The character of Susan is delineated in Ford's [?] happiest manner; pure, affectionate, confiding, faithful, and forgiving; anxious as a wife to prove her love, but fearful to offend, there is a mixture of warmth and pudency in her language, particularly in the concluding scene of the fecond act, which cannot fail to please the most fastidious reader. Winnifride is only second to her unfortunate rival; for, though highly culpable before marriage, she redeems her character as a wife, and insensibly steals upon our pity and regard. Even Katherine, with any other sister, would not pass unnoticed.

Carter is no unfair representative of the respectable yeoman (freeholder) of those days; and his frank and independent conduct is well contrasted with that of Banks, a small farmer, as credulous and ignorant as his labourers, positive, overbearing, and vindictive. The character of Sir Arthur Clarington is sustained with care and ability. Terrified, but not reclaimed from his profligacy by the law, he is everywhere equally odious, and ends the same mean, heartless, avaricious wretch he showed himself at first.

"Of the two plays," fays Mr. Swinburne, "which bear conjointly the names of Ford and Dekker, The Sun's Darling is evidently, as Gifford calls it, a 'piece of patchwork' hastily stitched up for some momentary purpose; I suspect that the two poets did not work together on it, but that our present text is merely a recast by Ford of an earlier masque by Dekker: probably, as Mr. Collier has suggested, his lost play of Phaeton, for which we might be glad to exchange the 'loop'd and window'd nakedness' of this ragged version. In those parts which are plainly remnants of Dekker's handiwork there are fome scattered lines of great sweetness, such as those of lament for the dead spring. For the latter scenes, as Gifford observes, it is clear that Ford is in the main responsible; the intrusion in the fifth act of political fatire and adulation is singularly perverse and inselicitous. In the opening-scene, also, between Raybright and the Priest of the Sun, I recognise the moral tone and metrical regulation of Ford's verse. Whatever the original may have been—and it was probably but a thin and hasty piece of work—it has doubtless suffered from the incongruous matter loosely sewn on to it; and the masque as it stands is too lax and incoherent in structure to be worth much as a sample of its slight kind, or to shew if there was anything of more significance or value in the first conception.

The Witch of Edmonton is a play of rare beauty and importance both on poetical and focial grounds. It is perhaps the first protest of the stage against the horrors and brutalities of vulgar fuperflition; a protest all the more precious for the absolute faith in witchcraft and devilry which goes hand in hand with compassion for the inftruments as well as the victims of magic. . . . Victor Hugo could hardly flow a more tender and more bitter pity for the fordid and grovelling agonies of outcast old age and reprobate mifery, than that which fills and fires the speech of the wretched hag from the first scene where fhe appears gathering slicks to warm herfelf, starved, beaten, lamed and bent double with blows, pitiable and terrible in her fierce abjection, to the last moment when fhe is led to execution through the roar of the rabble. all this part of the play I trace the hand of Dekker; his intimate and familiar science of wretchedness, his great and gentle spirit of compassion for the poor and suffering, with whom his own lot in life was fo often caft, in prison and out. The two chief foliloquies of Mother Sawyer, her first and last invocations of the familiar, are noble famples of his passionate dramatic power; their style has a fiery impulse and rapidity quite unlike the usual manner of his colleague. . . . The part of Susan is one of Dekker's most beautiful and delicate studies; in three short scenes he has given an image fo perfect in its simple sweetness as hardly to be overmatched outfide the gallery of Shakefpeare's women. The tender freshness of his pathos, its plain frank qualities of grace and strength, never showed themselves with purer or more powerful effect than here; the afterscene where Frank's guilt is discovered has the fame force and vivid beauty. The interview of Frank with the difguifed Winnifrede in this scene may be compared by the student of dramatic style with the parting of the fame characters at the close; the one has all the poignant simplicity of Dekker, the other all the majestic energy of Ford. The rough buffoonery and horseplay of the clown and the familiar we may probably fet down to Dekker's account; there is not much humour or meaning in it, but it is livelier and less offensive than most of Ford's attempts in that line."(26)

The precise date of Dekker's death is as uncertain as that of his birth; but "we hear nothing of him," says Mr. Collier, "after 1638, and he is supposed to have died before the Civil Wars."

The only portrait of Dekker known to exist is in a rude woodcut on the title-page of Dekker his Dreame: Lond. 1620.

Mr. Halliwell, in the preface to his reprint (1860) of this pamphlet, fays: "There can be but little doubt that the woodcut on the title-page contains a genuine portrait of Dekker; and, as fuch, it is of great interest."

Some brief notices of a few of Dekker's profe productions, extracted from Mr. Payne Collier's Bibliographical Account of the Rarest Books in the English Language, may be not without interest here:—

The (unique) tract entitled Warres, Warres, Warres, 1628, 12mo, is dedicated to Hugh Hammersley, Lord Mayor, and to the two Sheriffs of London and Middlesex for the year; and Dekker states that, as City Poet, he had been employed to write the pageant for Hammersley's Mayoralty, and he seems to have been not a little proud of it. He says, "What I offred up then was a Sacrifice ex officio. Custome tooke my Bond for the Performance; and on the day of the Ceremony I hope the debt was fully discharged." If it were ever printed it has not survived.

The Ravens Almanacke (1609) is subscribed "T. Deckers," which was probably the printer's, certainly not the author's, mode of spelling his Memoir of Thomas Dekker. xlv name. There is a good "fong fung by an olde Woman in a Medowe."

Of the Double PP, 1606, 4to, published anonymously, a presentation copy, with Dekker's autograph, is in existence. It has little but its rarity to recommend it; it is a violent, and, as far as we can understand the allusions, not very witty attack upon the Catholics, provoked by the Gunpowder Plot of the year preceding its publication.

The Seven Deadly Sinnes of London. 1606. 4to.

This tract was one of those which Dekker produced on the spur of his necessities, and he makes it a boast on his title-page that it only cost him a week's work. . . . As if determined not to lose any credit, or perhaps profit, by this production, Dekker not only placed his name prominently on the title-page, but he, somewhat unusually, subscribed it at the end, thus:—

" Dii me terrent, et Jupiter hostis."

Finis

Tho. Dekker."

The Jupiter and Dii were, perhaps at this time a bailiff and his followers, in fearch of the author for the non-payment of fome debt.

The Guls Horne-booke, 1609, B. L. 4to. This is unquestionably the most entertaining, and, exclusive of his plays, perhaps the best of Dekker's numerous works in verse and prose. It is full of lively descriptions of the manners of the beginning of the reign of James I., including accounts of, or allusions to, most of the popular and fashionable amusements. The work is entirely prose, and is divided into eight chapters, which are introduced by a Proemium.

A writer, already quoted, has well fummed up the character and career of Dekker in these words:—

" A man whose inborn sweetness and gleefulness of foul carried him through vexations and miferies which would have crushed a spirit less hopeful, cheerful, and humane. He was probably born about the year 1575; commenced his career as player and playwright before 1598; and for forty years was an author by profession, that is, was occupied in fighting famine with his pen. The first intelligence we have of him is characteristic of his whole life. from Henflowe's Diary, under date of February, 1598: 'Lent unto the company, to discharge Mr. Decker out of the counter in the powltry, the fum of 40 shillings.' Oldys tells us that 'he was in King's Bench Prison from 1613 to 1616;' and the antiquary adds ominously, 'how much longer I know not.' Indeed, Dr. Johnson's celebrated condenfation of the fcholar's life would fland for a biography of Dekker :-

'Toil, envy, want, the patron, and the jail.'

"This forced familiarity with poverty and diffress does not feem to have imbittered his feelings or weakened the force and elasticity of his mind. He turned his calamities into commodities. If indigence threw him into the fociety of the ignorant, the wretched, and the depraved, he made the knowledge of low life he thus obtained ferve his purpose as dramatist or pamphleteer. Whatever may have been the effect of his vagabond habits on his principles, they did not stain the sweetness and purity of his fentiments. There is an innocency in his very coarseness, and a brisk, bright good-nature chirps in his very fcurrility. In the midst of distresses of all kinds, he seems, like his own Fortunatus, 'all felicity up to the brims;' but that his content with Fortune is not owing to an unthinking ignorance of her caprice and injustice is proved by the words he puts into her mouth." (27)

It is a fad ftory of genius allied to misfortune; of a man of the rareft gifts and infight, whom the iron tyranny of circumftance prevented from being wife for himfelf. Even the guerdon of Fame—that fallacious confolation and hope of the difappointed—feemed as if it were to evade him. The renewed impulse towards the study of our earlier poets has at last awakened a long-slumbering curiosity; but more than two centuries were to elapse after Thomas Dekker was laid in his grave before his immortal contributions to the English drama were destined to be placed within the reach of general readers.

Saint Hugh be our good fpeede:
Ill is the weather that bringeth no gaine,
Nor helpes good hearts in neede.

Trowle the boll, the iolly Nut-browne boll, And here kind mate to thee: Let's fing a dirge for Saint Hughes foule, And downe it merrily.

Downe a downe, hey downe a downe, Hey derie derie down a down, Close with the tenor boy:

Ho well done, to me let come, Ring compasse gentle ioy.

Trowle the boll, the Nut-browne boll, And here kind, &c. as often as there be men to drinke.

At last when all have drunke, this verse.

Cold's the wind, and wet's the raine, Saint Hugh be our good fpeede: Ill is the weather that bringeth no gaine, Nor helpes good hearts in neede.

The Prologue as it was pronounced before the Queenes

Maiestie.

S wretches in a storme (expecting day) With trembling hands and eyes cast vp to heauen, Make Prayers the anchor of their conquerd hopes, So we (deere Goddesse) wonder of all eyes, Your meanest vasfalls (through mistrust and feare, To fincke into the bottome of difgrace, By our imperfit pastimes) prostrate thus On bended knees, our failes of hope do strike, Dreading the bitter stormes of your dislike. Since then (vnhappy men) our hap is fuch, That to our felues our felues no help can bring, But needes must perish, if your faint-like eares (Locking the temple where all mercy fits) Refuse the tribute of our begging tongues. Oh graunt (bright mirror of true Chastitie) From those life-breathing starres your fun-like Eyes, One gratious fmile: for your celestiall breath Must fend vs life, or fentence vs to death.

A pleasant Comedie of the Gentle Craft.

Enter Lord Maior, Lincolne.

Lincolne.

Y Lord Maior, you haue fundrie times
Feasted my felse, and many Courtiers more,
Seldome, or neuer can we be so kind,
To make requitall of your curtesse:

But leaving this, I heare my cofen Lacie Is much affected to your daughter Rofe.

L. Maior. True my good Lord, and she loues him fo wel.

That I mislike her boldnesse in the chace.

Lincol. Why my lord Maior, think you it then a fhame,

To ioyne a Lacie with an Otleys name?

L. Maior. Too meane is my poore girle for his high birth,

Poore Cittizens must not with Courtiers wed, Who will in filkes, and gay apparrell spend More in one yeare, then I am worth by farre,

Therefore your honour neede not doubt my girle.

Lincolne. Take heede my Lord, aduise you what you do,

A verier vnthrift liues not in the world,

Then is my cosen, for Ile tel you what,

Tis now almost a yeare since he requested To trauell countries for experience, I furnisht him with coyne, billes of exchange, Letters of credite, men to waite on him, Solicited my friends in Italie Well to respect him: but to see the end: Scant had he iornied through halfe Germanie, But all his coyne was spent, his men cast off, His billes imbezeld, and my iolly coze, Asham'd to shew his bankerupt presence here, Became a Shoomaker in Wittenberg, A goodly science for a gentleman Of fuch discent: now judge the rest by this. Suppose your daughter have a thousand pound, He did confume me more in one halfe yeare, And make him heyre to all the wealth you haue, One twelue moneth's rioting wil waste it all, Then feeke (my Lord) fome honest Cittizen To wed your daughter to.

L. Maior. I thanke your Lordship, Wel Foxe, I vnderstand your subtiltie, As for your nephew, let your lordships eie But watch his actions, and you neede not feare, For I haue my daughter farre enough, And yet your cosen Rowland might do well Now he hath learn'd an occupation, And yet I scorne to call him sonne in law.

Lincolne. I but I have a better trade for him, I thanke his grace he hath appointed him, Chiefe colonell of all those companies Mustred in London, and the shires about, To serve his highnesse in those warres of France: See where he comes: Louel what newes with you?

Enter Louell, Lacie, and Askew.

Louell. My Lord of Lincolne, tis his highnesse will,

That presently your cosen ship for France
With all his powers, he would not for a million,

But they should land at Deepe within foure daies. Linc. Goe certifie his grace it shall be done:

Exit Louell.

Now cosen Lacie, in what forwardnesse

Are all your companies?

Lacie. All wel prepar'd, The men of Hartfordshire lie at Mile end, Suffolke, and Effex, traine in Tuttle fields, The Londoners, and those of Middlesex, All gallantly prepar'd in Finfbury,

With frolike spirits, long for their parting houre.

L. Maior. They have their imprest, coates, and furniture.

And if it please your cosen Lacie come To the Guild Hall, he shall receive his pay, And twentie pounds besides my brethren Will freely giue him, to approue our loues We beare vnto my Lord your vncle here.

Lacie. I thanke your honour.

Thankes my good Lord Maior. Lincoln.

At the Guild Hal we wil expect your comming.

Lincolne. To approue your loues to me? no

fubtiltie

Nephew: that twentie pound he doth beflow, For ioy to rid you from his daughter Rose: But cofens both, now here are none but friends, I would not haue you cast an amorous eie Upon fo meane a project, as the loue Of a gay wanton painted cittizen, I know this churle, euen in the height of scorne, Doth hate the mixture of his bloud with thine, I pray thee do thou fo, remember coze, What honourable fortunes wayt on thee, Increase the kings loue which so brightly shines, And gilds thy hopes, I have no heire but thee: And yet not thee, if with a wayward fpirit, Thou flart from the true byas of my loue.

Lacie. My Lord, I will (for honor (not defire

Of lands or liuings) or to be your heire) So guide my actions in purfuit of France, As shall adde glorie to the Lacies name.

Lincolne Coze, for those words heres thirtie Portugues,

And Nephew Askew, there's a few for you, Faire Honour in her loftiest eminence Staies in France for you till you fetch her thence,
Then Nephewes, clap swift wings on your dissignes,
Be gone, be gone, make haste to the Guild Hall,
There presently Ile meete you, do not stay,
Where honour becomes, shame attends delay. Exit.

Askew. How gladly would your vncle haue you gone?

Lacie. True coze, but Ile ore-reach his policies, I haue some serious businesse for three dayes, Which nothing but my presence can dispatch, You therefore cosen with the companies Shall haste to Douer, there Ile meete with you, Or if I stay past my presixed time, Away for France, weele meete in Normandie, The twentie pounds my Lord Maior giues to me You shall receiue, and these ten portugues, Part of mine vncles thirtie, gentle coze, Haue care to our great charge, I know your wisedome Hath tride it selse in higher consequence.

Askew. Coze, al my selse am yours, yet haue this Askew. Coze, al my felfe am yours, yet haue this care.

To lodge in London with al fecrefie, Our vncle Lincolne hath (besides his owne) Many a iealous eie, that in your face Stares onely to watch meanes for your difgrace. Lacic. Stay cosen, who be these?

Latte. Stay colen, who be there:

Enter Symon Eyre, his wife, Hodge, Firk, Jane, & Rafe with a peece.

Eyre. Leaue whining, leaue whining, away with this/whimpering, this pewling, these blubbring teares, and these wet eies, Ile get thy husband discharg'd, I warrant thee/sweete Jane: go to.

Hodge. Master, here be the captaines.

Eyre. Peace Hodge, husht ye knaue, husht.

Firke. Here be the caualiers, and the coronels, maister.

Eyre. Peace Firke, peace my fine Firke, fland by with your pishery pasherie, away, I am a man of the best presence! Ile speake to them and they were Popes, gentlemen, captaines, colonels, commanders: braue men, braue leaders, may it please you to giue me audience, I am Simon Eyre, the mad Shoomaker of Tower streete, this wench with the mealy mouth that wil neuer tire, is my wife I can tel you, heres Hodge my man, and my foreman, heres Firke my fine firking iourney-man, and this is blubbered Jane, al we come to be suters for this honest Rase keepe him at home, and as I am a true shoomaker, and a gentleman of the Gentle Crast, buy spurs your self, and Ile sind ye bootes these seven way.

Wife. Seuen yeares hufband?

Eyre. Peace Midriffe, peace, I know what I do, peace.

Firk. Truly master cormorant, you shal do God good service to let Rase and his wise stay together, shees a yong new/married woman, if you take her husband away from her a/night, you undoo her, she may beg in the day time, for hees as/good a workman at a pricke and awle, as any is in our trade.

Jane. O let him flay, else I shal be vndone.

Firke. I truly, she shal be laid at one side like a paire of old shooes else, and be occupied for no vse. Lacie. Truly my friends, it lies not in my power,

The Londoners are prest, paide, and set forth By the Lord Maior, I cannot change a man.

Hodge. Why then you were as good be a corporall, as a/colonel, if you cannot discharge one good fellow, and I tell/you true, I thinke you doe more then you can answere, to presse a man within a yeare and a day of his marriage.

Eyre. Wel faid melancholy Hodge, gramercy my fine foreman.

Wife. Truly gentlemen, it were il done, for such as you, to stand so sliffely against a poore yong wise: considering her case, she is newly married, but let that passe: I pray deale not roughly with her, her husband is a yong man and but newly entred, but let that passe.

Eyre. Away with your pisherie pasherie, your pols and your edipolls, peace Midasse, silence Cisly Bum-trincket, let your head fpeake.

Firke. Yea and the hornes too, master.

Eyre. Too foone, my fine Firk, too foone: peace fcoundrels, fee you this man? Captaines, you will not release him, well let him go, he is a proper shot, let him vanish, peace Jane, drie vp thy teares, theile make his powder dankish, take him braue men, Hector of Troy was a hackney to him, Hercules and Termagant scoundrelles, Prince Arthurs Round table, by the Lord of Ludgate, nere fed such a tall, such a dapper swordman: by the life of Pharo, a braue resolute swordman, peace Jane, I say no more, mad knaues.

Firk. See, fee Hodge, how my maister raues in commendation of Rafe.

Hodge. Raph, thou'rt a gull by this hand, an thou goest not.

Askew. I am glad (good master Eyre) it is my hap To meete so resolute a souldiour.

Trust me, for your report, and loue to him,

A common flight regard shall not respect him.

Lacie. Is thy name Raph?

Raph. Yes fir.

Lacie. Giue me thy hand,

Thou shalt not want, as I am a gentleman: Woman, be patient, God (no doubt) wil fend Thy husband safe againe, but he must go,

His countries quarrel fayes, it shall be fo.

Hodge. Thart a gull by my stirrop, if thou dost not goe, I/wil not have thee strike thy gimblet into these weake vessels,/pricke thine ememies Rase.

Enter Dodger. /

Dodger. My lord, your vncle on the Tower hill, Stayes with the lord Mayor, and the Aldermen, And doth request you with al speede you may To hasten thither.

Exit Dodger.

Askew. Cofin, come let vs go.

Lacy. Dodger, runne you before, tel them we come, This Dodger is mine uncles parafite,
The arrantft varlet that e're breathd on earth,
He fets more difcord in a noble house,
By one daies broching of his pick-thanke tales,
Then can be falu'd againe in twentie yeares,
And he (I feare) shall go with vs to France,
To prie into our actions.

Askew. Therefore coze,

It shall behoove you to be circumspect.

Lacy. Feare not good cofen: Raph, hie to your colours.

Raph. I must, because there is no remedie, But gentle maister and my louing dame, As you have alwaies beene a friend to me, So in mine absence thinke vpon my wife.

Jane. Alas my Raph.

Wife. She cannot speake for weeping.

Eyre. Peace you crackt groates, you mustard tokens, disquiet not the brave souldier, goe thy waies Raph./

Jane. I I, you bid him go, what shal I do when he is gone ?/

Firk. Why be doing with me, or my fellow Hodge, be not idle,

Eyre. Let me fee thy hand Jane, this fine hand, this white/hand, thefe prettie fingers must spin, must card, must worke,/worke you bombast cotten-candlequeane, worke for your living with a pox to you: hold thee Raph, heres five fixpences for thee, fight for the honour of the Gentle Craft, for the gentlemen Shoomakers, the couragious Cordwainers, the flower of S. Martins, the mad knaues of Bedlem, Fleetstreete, Towerstreete, and white Chappell, cracke me the crownes of the French knaues, a poxe on them, cracke them, fight, by the lord of Ludgate, fight my fine boy.

Firke. Here Rafe, here's three two pences, two carry into France, the third shal wash our soules at parting (for forrow is drie) for my sake, Firke the Bafa mon cues.

Hodge. Raph, I am heavy at parting, but heres a shilling for thee, God fend thee to cramme thy flops with French crownes, and thy enemies bellies with bullets.

Raph. I thanke you maister, and I thanke you all:
Now gentle wife, my louing louely Jane,
Rich men at parting, giue their wives rich gifts,
Jewels and rings, to grace their lillie hands,
Thou know'st our trade makes rings for womens

heeles:

Here take this paire of shooes cut out by Hodge, Sticht by my fellow Firke, feam'd by my felfe, Made vp and pinckt, with letters for thy name, Weare them my deere Jane, for thy husbands sake, And euerie morning when thou pull'st them on, Remember me, and pray for my returne, Make much of them, for I haue made them so, That I can know them from a thousand mo.

Sound drumme, enter Lord Maior, Lincolne, Lacy, Askewo, Dodger, and fouldiers, They paffe over the stage, Rafe falles in amongest them, Firke and the rest cry farewel, &c. and so Execunt.

Enter Rose alone making a Garland.

Rofe. Here fit thou downe vpon this flowry banke, And make a garland for thy Lacies head,

These pinkes, these roses, and these violets, These blushing gillislowers, these marigoldes, The faire embrodery of his coronet, Carry not halfe such beauty in their cheekes, As the sweete countnaunce of my Lacy doth. O my most vnkinde father! O my starres! Why lowrde you so at my natiuity, To make me loue, yet liue robd of my loue? Here as a theese am I imprisoned (For my deere Lacies sake) within those walles, Which by my sathers cost were builded vp For better purposes: here must I languish For him that doth as much lament (I know) Mine absence, as for him I pine in woe.

Enter Sibil.

Sibil. Good morrow yong Mistris, I am fure you make/that garland for me, against I shall be Lady of the Harnest.

Rofe. Sibil, what news at London?

Sibil. None but good: my lord Mayor your father, and maister Philpot your vncle, and maister Scot your coosin, and mistris Frigbottom by Doctors Commons, doe all (by my troth) fend you most hearty commendations.

Rofe. Did Lacy fend kind greetings to his loue? Sibil. O yes, out of cry, by my troth, I fcant knew him,/here a wore a fcarffe, and here a fcarfe, here a bunch of fethers,/ and here pretious stones and iewells, and a paire of garters:/O monstrous! like one of our yellow filke curtains, at home/here in Old-ford house, here in maister Bellymounts chamber, I stoode at our doore in Cornehill, lookt at him, he at me/indeed, spake to him, but he not to me, not a word, mary gup/thought I with a wanion, he pass by me as prowde, mary/soh, are you growne humorous thought I? and so shut the/doore, and in I came.

Rofe. O Sibill, how dost thou my Lacy wrong?

My Rowland is as gentle as a lambe,

No doue was euer halfe fo milde as he.

Sibil. Milde? yea, as a bushel of stampt crabs, he lookt vpon me as fowre as veriuice: goe thy wayes thought I, thou maist be much in my gaskins, but nothing in my neather stockes: this is your fault mistris, to loue him that loues not you, he thinkes scorne to do as he's done to, but if I were as you, Ide cry, go by Ieronimo, go by, Ide set mine olde debts against my new driblets, and the hares soot against the goose giblets, for if euer I sigh when sleepe I should take, pray God I may loose my mayden-head when I wake.

Rofe. Will my loue leave me then and go to - France ?

Sibill. I knowe not that, but I am fure I fee him stalke before the fouldiers, by my troth he is a propper man, but he is proper that proper doth, let him goe snicke-vp yong mistris.

Rose. Get thee to London, and learne perfectly,

Whether my Lacy go to France, or no: Do this, and I wil give thee for thy paines, My cambricke apron, and my romish gloves, My purple slockings, and a stomacher, Say, wilt thou do this Sibil for my fake?

Sibil. Will I quoth a? at whose fuite? by my troth yes, Ile go, a cambricke apron, gloues, and a paire of purple flockings, and a flomacher, Ile sweat in purple mistris for you, ile take any thing that comes a Gods name, O rich, a Cambricke apron; faith then haue at vp tailes all, Ile go, Jiggy, Joggy to London, and be here in a trice yong Mistris.

Exit.

Rofe. Do fo good Sibill, meane time wretched I Will fit and figh for his loft companie. Exit.

Enter Rowland Lacy like a Dutch Shooe-maker.

Lacy. How many fhapes have gods and kings deuifde,

Thereby to compasse their desired loues? It is no shame for Rowland Lacy then,

To clothe his cunning with the Gentle Craft, That thus difguifde, I may vnknowne possesse, The onely happie prefence of my Rofe: For her haue I forfooke my charge in France, Incurd the kings difpleafure, and ftir'd vp Rough hatred in mine vncle Lincolnes breft: O loue, how powerfull art thou, that canst change High birth to basenesse, and a noble mind, To the meane femblance of a shooemaker: But thus it must be, for her cruell father, Hating the fingle vnion of our foules, Hath fecretly conueyd my Rofe from London, To barre me of her presence, but I trust Fortune and this difguife will furder me Once more to view her beautie, gaine her fight, Here in Towerstreete with Eyre the shooe-maker, Meane I a while to worke, I know the trade. I learn't it when I was at Wittenberge: Then cheere thy hoping sprites, be not dismaide, Thou can't not want, do fortune what she can, The Gentle Craft is liuing for a man. Exit.

Enter Eyre making himselfe readie.

Eyrc. Where be these boyes, these girles, these drabbes, these scoundrels, they wallow in the fat brewisse of my boutie, and licke vp the crums of my table, yet wil not rise to see my walkes cleansed: come out you powder-beese-queanes, what Nan, what Madge-mumble-crust, come out you satte Midrisse-swagbelly whores, and sweepe me these kennels, that the noysome stench offende not the nose of my neighbours: (1) what Firke I say, what Hodge? open my shop windowes, what Firke I say.

Enter Firke.

Firke. O Master, ist you that speake bandog and ⁽I) The later Editions read "that the noyfome filth offend not the nofes of neighbors."

Bedlam this morning, I was in a dreame, and mused what mad-man was got into the street fo earely, haue you drunk this morning that your throat is so cleere?

Eyre. Ah well faid Firke, well faid Firke, to worke my fine knaue, to worke, wash thy face, and thou'lt be more bleft.

Firke. Let them wash my face that will eate it, good Master send for a Souse-wise, if you will have my face cleaner.

Enter Hodge.

Eyre. Away flouen, auant fcoundrell, good morrow Hodge, good morrow my fine Fore-man.

Hodge. O Master, good morrow, y'are an earely stirrer, heere's a faire morning, good morrow Firke, I could haue slept this houre, heer's a braue day towards.

Eyre. O hast to worke my fine Fore-man, hast to worke.

Firke. Mafter, I am drie as dust to heare my fellow Roger talke of saire weather, let vs pray for good leather, and let Clownes and Plow-boyes, and those that worke in the fields pray for braue daies, wee worke in a drie shoppe, what care I if it raine?

Enter Eyres wife.

Eyre. How now dame Margerie, can you fee to rife? trip and go, call up the drabs your maides.

Wife. See to rife? I hope tis time enough, tis early enough for any Woman to bee feene abroad, I maruell how many wives in Tower fireet are vp fo foone: Gods me tis not noone, heeres a yawling.

Eyre. Peace Margerie, peace, wher's Cifly Bumtrinket your maid ? shee hath a privile fault, shee farts in her sleepe, call the queane vp, if my men want shooe threed, He swinge her in a stirrop.

Firke. Yet that's but a drie beating, heere's still a figne of drought.

Enter Lacy finging.

Lacy. Der was een bore ban Gelder= land, Frolick fi byen,

He was als dronke he cold nyet stand, by folce se byen,

Tap eens de canneken drinck schone mannekin.

Firke. Maister, for my life yonders a brother of the Gentle Craft, if hee beare not Saint Hughes bones Ile forfeit my bones, hee's fome vplandish workeman, hire him good master, that I may learne some gibble gabble, 'twill make vs worke the faster.

Eyre. Peace Firke, a hard world, let him passe, let him vanish, we have iournymen enow, peace my fine

I irke.

Wife. Nay nay y'are best follow your mans councell, you shall fee what will come on't, we have not men enow, but wee must entertaine every butterboxe; but let that passe.

Hodge. Dame, fore God if my master follow your counsell hee'le consume little beese, he shall be glad of men, and he can catch them.

Firke. I that he shall.

Hodge. Afore God a proper man, and I warrant a fine workeman: Master farewell, dame adue, if such a man as he cannot find worke, Hodge is not for you.

Offer to goe.

Eyre. Stay my fine Hodge.

Firke. Faith and your foreman goe, dame you must take a journey to seeke a new journeyman, if Roger remoue, Firke followes, if Saint Hughes bones shall not be fet a worke, I may pricke mine awle in the wals, and goe play: fare ye wel master, God buy dame.

Eyre. Tarrie my fine Hodge, my brifke foreman, flay Firke peace pudding broth, by the Lord of Ludgate I loue my men as my life, peace you gallimafrey, Hodge if hee want worke Ile hire him, one of you to him, stay he comes to vs.

Lacy. Gorden dath meester, ende b bro oak.

Firke. Nailes if I should speak after him without drinking, I should choak, and you friend Oake, are you of the gentle craft?

Lacy. Paw, yaw, ich beene den shoos maker.

Firke. Den shoomaker quoth a, and hearke you shoomaker, haue you all your tooles, a good rubbing pin, a good slopper, a good dresser, your foure forts of Aules, and your two balles of waxe, your paring knife, your hand and thum-leathers, and good Saint Hughes bones to smooth vp your worke.

Lacy. Daw, yaw, bee niet bor beard, ik hab all de dingen, bour mark shooes groot and cleane.

Firke. Ha, ha, good master hire him, heele make me laugh so that I shall worke more in mirth than I can in earnest.

Eyre. Heere you friend, haue you any skill in the mystery of Cordwainers?

Lacy. Ick weet niet wat you feg ich berstaw you niet.

Firk. Why thus man, Ich verste v niet, quoth a.

Lacy Paw, yaw, yaw, ick can dat well doen.

Firke. Yaw, yaw, he fpeakes yawing like a Jack daw, that gapes to be fed with cheese curdes, O heele giue a villanous pull at a can of double beere, but Hodge and I have the vantage, wee must drinke first, because wee are the eldest Iourneymen.

Eyre. What is thy name? Lacy. Hans, Hans, Meulter.

Eyre. Giue me thy hand, thou art welcome, Hodge, entertaine him, Firke bid him welcome, come Hans, run wife, bid your maids, your trulli-bubs, make ready my fine mens breakfasts: to him Hodge.

Hodge. Hans, th'art welcome, vie thy felfe friendly, for we are good fellowes, if not, thou shalt be fought with, wert thou bigger than a Gyant.

Firk. Yea, and drunk with, wert thou Gargantua, my mafter keeps no Cowards, I tell thee: hoe, boy, bring him an heele-blocke, heers a new iourneyman.

Enter Boy.

Lacy. Of ich wersto you, ich moet een halbe dossen Cans betalen: here boy nempt dis skilling, tap eens freelicke.

Exit Boy.

Eyre. Quicke fnipper fnapper, away Firk, fcowre thy throat, thou shalt wash it with Castillian liquor.

Enter Boy.

Come my last of the fiues, give mee a Can, haue to thee Hans, here Hodge, here Firke, drinke you mad Greekes, and worke like true Troyans, and pray for Simon Eyre the Shoomaker, heere Hans and th'art welcome.

Firke. Lo dame, you would have loft a good fellow that will teach vs to laugh, this beere came hoping in well.

Wife. Simon, it is almost seuen.

Eyre. Ift fo dame clapper dudgeon, ift feuen a clocke, and my mens breakfast not readie? trip and go you fowst cunger, away, come you madde Hiperboreans, follow me Hodge, follow me Hans, come after my fine Firke, to worke, to worke a while, and then to breakfast.

Exit.

Firke. Soft, yaw, yaw, good Hans, though my master haue no more wit but to call you afore me, I am not so foolish to go behind you, I being the elder iourneymen.

Execunt.

Hollowing within. Enter Warner and Hammon, like hunters.

Hammon. Cofen beate euery brake, the game's not farre,

This way with winged feet he fled from death, Whilft the purfuing hounds fenting his fleps, Find out his high way to deftruction. Befides, the Millers boy told me euen now, He faw him take foile and he hallowed him: Affirming him fo emboft, That long he could not hold.

Warner. If it be fo, Tis best we trace these meddowes by Old-Ford.

A noife of hunters within, enter a boy.

Hammon. How now boy, where's the Deere?

fpeak, fawst thou him?

Boy. O yea, I faw him leape through a hedge, and then ouer a ditch, then at my Lord Maiors pale ouer he skipt mee, and in he went me, and holla the hunters cride, and there boy, there boy, but there he is a mine honestie.

Ham. Boy God a mercie, Cosen lets away, I hope we shall find better sport to day. Exeunt.

Hunting within, enter Rose and Sibill.

Rofe. Why Sibill, wilt thou proue a Forrester? Sibill. Upon some no. Forrester go by: no faith mistris, the Deere came running into the Barne, through the Orchard and ouer the pale, I wot well, I look't as pale as a new cheese to see him, but whip saies goodman Pinclose, vp with his staile, and our Nicke with a prong, and downe he fell, and they vpon him, and I vpon them, by my troth wee had fuch fport, and in the end we ended him, his throat wee cut, flead him, vnhorned him, and my Lord Maior shall eate of him anon when he comes.

Hornes found within.

Rofe. Heark, heark, the hunters come, y'are best take heed,

They'l haue a faying to you for this deed.

Enter Hammon, Warner, huntfmen, and boy.

Ham. God faue you faire Ladies.

Sibill. Ladies, Ogroffe!

War. Came not a Bucke this way?

Rose. No, but two Does.

Ham. And which way went they? faith wee'l hunt at those.

Sibill. At those ? vpon fome no: when, can you tell?

War. Vpon fome, I. Sibill. Good Lord!

War. Zounds then farewell.

Ham. Boy, which way went he?

Boy. This way fir he ran.

Ham. This way he ran indeed, faire Mistris Rofe, Our game was lately in your orchard seene.

War. Can you aduife which way he tooke his flight?

Sibili. Follow your nose, his hornes will guide you right.

War. Th'art a mad wench.

Sibill. O rich!

Rofe. Trust me, not I,

It is not like that the wild forrest deere, Would come so neere to places of resort, You are deceiv'd, he fled some other way.

War. Which way my fugar-candy, can you flew ? Sibill. Come vp good honnifops, vpon fome, no.

Rofe. Why do you flay and not purfue your game?

Sibill. Ile hold my life their hunting nags be lame.

Ham. A deere, more deere is found within this place.

Rofe. But not the Deere (fir) which you had in chace.

Ham. I chac'd the deere, but this deere chafeth me.

Rofe. The strangest hunting that euer I see, But where's your parke?

She offers to go away.

Ham. Tis here: O stay.

Rose. Impale me, and then I will not stray.

War. They wrangle wench, we are more kind than they.

Sibill. What kind of heart is that (deere heart) you feeke ?

War. A Hart, deere heart.

Sibill. Who euer faw the like?

Rose. To lose your heart, is't possible you can?

Ham. My heart is loft.

Rofe. Alacke good Gentleman.

Ham. This poore loft heart would I wish you might find.

Rose. You by fuch luck might proue your heart a hind.

Ham. Why Lucke had hornes, fo haue I heard fome fay ?

Rofe. Now God and't be his will fend luck into your way.

Enter L. Maior, and feruants.

L. Ma. What M. Hammon, welcome to Old Ford. Sibill. Gods pittikins, hands off fir, heeres my Lord. L. Ma. I heare you had ill lucke, and loft your game.

Ham. Tis true my Lord.

L. Ma. I am forrie for the fame.

What gentleman is this?

Ham. My brother in law.

L. Ma. Y'are welcome both, fith Fortune offers you

Into my hands, you shall not part from hence, Untill you have refresht your wearied limbes. Go Sibill couer the boord, you shall be guest To no good cheere, but even a hunters feast.

Ham. I thanke your Lordship: cousen, on my life, For our lost venison I shall find a wife. Exeunt.

L. Ma. In gentlemen, Ile not be abfent long. This Hammon is a proper gentleman, A citizen by birth, fairely allide, How fit a huf band were he for my girle? Well, I will in, and do the best I can, To match my daughter with this gentleman. Exit.

Enter Lacy, Skipper, Hodge, and Firk.

Skip. Ick fal yow wat seggen Hans, dis skip dat comen from Candy is alwol, by gots sacrament, ban sugar, ciuet, almonds, Cambricke, end alle dingen tows sand towsand ding, nempt it Hans, nempt it bor b meester, daer be bils ban saden, your meester Symon Gyre sal hae good copen, wat seggen yow Hans?

Firke. What feggen de reggen de copen, flopen, laugh Hodge laugh.

Lacie. Mine lieuer broder Firke, bringt meester Eyre lot det signe bn swannekin, dare sal you finde dis skipper end me, wat seggen yow broder Firke? doot it Hodge come Skipper.

Exeunt.

Firke. Bring him qd. you, heeres no knauerie, to bring my maister to buy a ship, worth the lading of 2. or 3. hundred thousand pounds, alas that's nothing, a trifle, a bable Hodge.

Hod. The truth is Firke, that the Marchant owner of the Ship dares not shew his head, and therfore this Skipper that deales for him, for the loue he beares to Hans, offers my master Eyre a bargaine in the commodities, he shal have a reasonable day of payment, he may sell the wares by that time, and be an huge gainer himselfe.

Firk. Yea, but can my fellow Hans lend my mafter twenty porpentines as an earnest pennie.

Hod. Portegues thou wouldst fay, here they be

Firke,

hark, they gingle in my pocket like S. Mary Queries bels.

Enter Eyre and his Wife.

Firk. Mum, here comes my Dame and my Master, sheele foold on my life, for loytering this Monday, but al's one, let them all fay what they can, Monday's our holyday.

Wife. You fing fir fauce, but I beshrew your heart,

I feare for this your finging we shall smart.

Firk. Smart for me dame, why dame, why?

Hod. Master, I hope yowle not suffer my Dame to take downe your Journeymen.

Firk. If the take me downe, Ile take her vp, yea and take her downe too, a button-hole lower.

Eyrc. Peace Firke, not I Hodge, by the life of Pharao, by the Lord of Ludgate, by this beard, enery haire whereof I value at a Kings ranfome, the shall not meddle with you, peace you bumbast-cotten-candle queane, away Queene of Clubs, quarrel not with me and my men, with me and my fine Firke, ile firke you if you do.

Wife. Yea yea man, you may vse me as you please: but let that passe.

Eyre. Let it paffe, let it vanish away: peace, am I not Simon Eyre? are not these my braue men? braue Shoomakers, all gentlemen of the Gentle Craft? Prince am I none, yet am I nobly borne, as being the sole sonne of a Shoomaker, away rubbish, vanish, melt, melt like kitchin suffe.

Wife. Yea, yea, tis well, I must be cald rubbish, kitchin-stuffe, for a fort of knaues.

Firke. Nay dame, you shall not weepe and waile in woe for me: master Ile stay no longer, heere's a vennentorie of my shop tooles: adue master, Hodge farewell.

Hodge. Nay stay Firke, thou shalt not go alone.

Wife. I pray let them go, there be more maids than Mawkin, more men than Hodge, and more fooles than Firke.

Firke. Fooles? nailes if I tarrie now, I would my guts might be turned to floo-thread.

Hodge. And if I stay, I pray God I may be turnd to a Turk, and set in Finsburie for boyes to shoot at:

come Firke.

Eyre. Stay my fine knaues, you armes of my trade, you pillars of my profession, What, shall a tittle tattles words make you forsake Simon Eyre? auaunt Kitchinstuffe, rippe you browne bread tannikin, out of my sight, moue mee not, haue not I tane you from selling Tripes in Eastcheape, and set you in my shop, and made you haile sellow with Simon Eyre the Shoomaker? and now doe you deale thus with my Journey-men? Looke you powder-beese queane on the sace of Hodge: heeres a face for a Lord.

Firke. And heere's a face for any Lady in Christen-dome.

Eyre. Rip you chitterling, auaunt boy, bid the Tapf-ter of the Bores head fill me a doozen Cannes of beere for my journeymen.

Firke. A doozen Cans? O braue, Hodge now Ile

ftay.

Eyre. And the knaue fils any more than two, hee payes for them: a doozen Cans of beere for my Journemen, heere you mad Mefopotamians, wash your liuers with this liquour, where bee the odde ten? no more Madge, no more, well faid, drink & to work: what work dost thou Hodge? what work?

Hod. I am a making a paire of shooes for my Lord

Maiors daughter, mistresse Rose.

Firk. And I a paire of shooes for Sibill my Lords maide, I deale with her.

Eyre. Sibill? fie, defile not thy fine workemanly fingers with the feet of Kitchin stuffe, and basting ladles, Ladies of the Court, fine Ladies, my lads, commit their feet to our apparelling, put groffe worke to Hans: yarke and feame:

Firk. For yarking and feaming let me alone, & I

I come toot.

Hod. Well master all this is from the bias, doe you remember the Shippe my fellow Hans told you of, the Skipper and he are both drinking at the Swan? here be the Portigues to giue earnest, if you goe through with it, you cannot choose but be a Lord at least.

Firk. Nay dame, if my master proue not a Lord, and you a Lady, hang me.

Wife. Yea like enough, if you may loyter and tipple thus.

Firke. Tipple Dame ? no we have beene bargaining with Skellum Scanderbag: can you Dutch fpreaken, for a Shippe of Silke Cipreffe, laden with Sugar Candy.

Enter the boy with a veluet coat, and an Aldermans gowne, Eyre puts it on.

Eyr. Peace Firk, filence tittle tattle: Hodge, ile go through with it, heers a feale ring, and I haue fent for a garded gown and a damaske casocke, see where it comes, looke heere Maggy, helpe me Firk, apparrell me Hodge, silke and satten you mad Philistines, silke and satten.

Firk. Ha, ha, my master will be as proud as a dogge in a doublet, all in beaten damaske and veluet.

Eyr. Softly Firke, for rearing of the nap, and wearing thread-beare my garments: how doft thou like mee

Firke? how do I looke my fine Hodge?

Hod. Why now you looke like your felfe mafter, I warrant you, ther's few in the citie, but will give you the wall, and come vpon you with the right worshipfull.

Firk. Nailes my master lookes like a thread-beare cloake new turn'd, and drest: Lord, Lord, to see what good raiment doth? dame, dame, are you not enamoured?

Eyr. How faift thou Maggy, am I not brifk?

am I not fine?

Wife. Fine? by my troth fweet heart very fine: by my troth I neuer likt thee fo well in my life fweet heart. But let that paffe, I warrant there bee many women in the citie haue not fuch handsome hufbands, but onely for their apparell, but let that paffe too.

Enter Hans and Skipper.

Hans. Godden day mester, dis be de skipper dat heb de skip van marchandize, de commodity ben good, nempt it mester, nempt it.

Eyr. God a mercy Hans, welcome Skipper, where lies this ship of marchandize?

Skip. De skip beene in rouere: dor be van sugar, ciuit, Almonds, Cambricke, and a towsand towsand tings, gots sacrament, nempt it mester, yo sal heb good copen.

Firk. To him maister, O sweet maister, O sweet wares, Prunes, Almonds, Suger-candy, Carret roots, Turnips, O braue fatting meat, let not a man buy a nutmeg but your felf.

Peace Firke, come Skipper, Ile goe aboord with you, Hans have you made him drinke? Skip. Yaw, yaw, ic heb veale ge drunke.

Eyre. Come Hans follow me: Skipper thou shalt haue my countenance in the citie. Exeunt.

Firke. Yaw heb veale ge drunke, quoth a: they may well be called butter-boxes, when they drinke fat veale, and thicke beere too: but come Dame, I hope youle chide vs no more.

No faith Firke, no perdy Hodge, I do feele honour creepe vpon me, and which is more, a certaine rifing in my flesh, but let that passe.

Firke. Rifing in your flesh do you feele say you? I you may be with child, but why should not my master feele a rifing in his flesh, having a gowne and a gold ring on, but you are fuch a fhrew, youle foone pull him downe.

Ha, ha, prethee peace, thou makft my worship laugh, but let that passe: come ile goe in Hodge, prethee goe before me, Firke follow me.

Firke. Firke doth follow, Hodge passe out in state.

Exeunt.

Enter Lincolne and Dodger.

Lincoln. How now good Dodger, whats the newes in France?

Dodg. My Lord, vpon the eighteenth day of May, The French and English were prepared to fight, Each fide with eager furie gaue the figne Of a most hot encounter, five long houres Both armies fought together: at the length, The lot of victorie fell on our fides, Twelve thousand of the Frenchmen that day dide, Four thousand English, and no man of name, But Captaine Hyam, and young Ardington, Two gallant gentlemen, I knew them well.

Lin. But Dodger, prethee tell me in this fight,

How did my cozen Lacy beare himselfe?

Dod. My Lord, your cozen Lacy was not there.

Lin. Not there ?

Dod. No, my good Lord. Sure thou mistakest,

I faw him shipt, and a thousand eyes beside Were witneffe of the farewells which he gaue, When I with weeping eyes bid him adew:

Dodger take heed.

Dodg. My Lord I am aduifde That what I speake is true; to proue it so, His cozen Askew that supplied his place, Sent me for him from France, that fecretly He might conuey himfelfe hither.

Ist euen so,

Dares he fo careleffely venture his life, Upon the indignation of a King? Hath he defpif'd my loue, and fpurnd those fauours Which I with prodigall hand powr'd on his head? He shall repent his rashnesse with his soule, Since of my loue he makes no estimate, Ile make him wish he had not knowne my hate, Thou hast no other newes?

Dodg. None elfe, my Lord.

Linc. None worfe I know thou haft: procure the

To crowne his giddie browes with ample honours, Send him chiefe Colonell, and all my hope Thus to be dasht? but tis in vaine to grieue, One euill cannot a worfe releeue: Upon my life I have found out this plot, The old dog Loue that fawnd vpon him fo, Loue to that puling girle, his faire cheekt Rofe, The Lord Maiors daughter hath diffracted him. And in the fire of that loues lunacie, Hath he burnt vp himfelfe, confum'd his credit, Loft the Kings loue, yea and I feare his life, Onely to get a wanton to his wife: Dodger, it is fo.

Dodg. I feare fo, my good Lord. Linco. It is fo, nay fure it cannot be. I am at my wits end Dodger.

Yea my Lord. Dodg.

Thou art acquainted with my Nephewes Len.

Spend this gold for thy paines, go feeke him out, Watch at my Lord Maiors, there (if he liue) Dodger, thou shalt be fure to meet with him: Prethee be diligent. Lacy, thy name Liu'd once in honour, now dead in shame: Be circumfpect.

Dod. I warrant you my Lord.

Exit. Exit.

Enter Lord Major, and Master Scot.

L. Ma. Good master Scot, I have been bold with you, To be a witnesse to a wedding knot, Betwixt young mafter Hammon and my daughter. O fland afide, fee where the louers come.

Enter Hammon and Rofe.

Rofe. Can it be possible you loue me fo No, no, within those eye-balls I espie, Apparant likelyhoods of flatterie, Pray now let go my hand.

Ham. Sweet mistres Rose,

Misconstrue not my words, nor misconceiue Of my affection, whose denoted soule Sweares that I loue thee deerer than my heart.

Rose. As deere as your owne heart? I judge it right.

Men loue their hearts best when th' are out of fight. Ham. I loue you by this hand.

Rofe. Yet hands off now:

If flesh be fraile, how weak and frail's your yow? Ham. Then by my life I fweare.

Rofe. Then do not brawle,

One quarrell loofeth wife and life and all,

Is not your meaning thus?

Ham. In faith you iest.

Rofe. Loue loues to fport, therefore leave loue y'are best.

L. Ma. What? I fquare they master Scot?

Scot. Sir, never doubt,

Louers are quickly in, and quickly out.

Ham. Sweet Roje, be not so strange in fansying me.

Nay neuer turne aside, shun not my sight, I am not growne so fond, to fond my loue, On any that shall quit it with disdaine,

If you will loue me, fo: if not, farewell.

L. Ma. Why how now louers, are you

L. Ma. Why how now louers, are you both agreed?

Ham. Yes faith my Lord.

L. Ma. Tis well, giue me your hand, give me yours daughter.

How now, both pull backe, what meanes this, Girle ? Rofe. I meane to liue a maide.

Ham. But not to die one, pawse ere that be said.

aside.

L. Ma. Will you still crosse me? still be obstinate?

Ham. Nay chide her not my Lord for doing well, If the can liue an happie virgins life, Tis far more bleffed than to be a wife.

Rofe. Say fir I cannot, I have made a vow,

Who euer be my hufband, tis not you.

L. Ma. Your tongue is quicke, but M. Hammon know,

I bade you welcome to another end.

Ham. What, would you have me pule, and pine, and pray,

With louely Lady mistris of my heart, Pardon your feruant, and the rimer play, Rayling on Cupid, and his tyrants dart?

Or fhall I vndertake fome martiall fpoile, Wearing your gloue at Turney, and at Tilt, And tell how many gallants I vnhorst, Sweet, will this pleasure you?

Rofe. Yes, when wilt begin i

What loue-rimes man? fie on that deadly finne.

L. Ma. If you will haue her, Ile make her agree.

Ham. Enforced loue is worfe than hate to me,
There is a wench keeps shop in the old change,
To her will I, it is not wealth I feeke,
I haue enough, and will prefer her loue
Before the world: my good Lord Maior adew, Old loue for me, I haue no luck with new.

Exit

L. Ma. Now mammet you haue well behau'd your felfe.

But you shall curse your coynesse if I liue: Who's within there? see you conuey your mistris Straight to th' old Ford, Ile keepe you straite enough, Fore God I would haue sworne the puling girle Would willingly accepted Hammons loue; But banish him my thoughts, go minion in.

Exit Rofe.

Now tell me mafter Scot, would you have thought That mafter Symon Eyre the Shoomaker Had beene of wealth to buy fuch merchandize?

Scot. 'Twas well my Lord, your honour, and my felfe,

Grew partners with him, for your billes of lading Shew that Eyres gaines in one commoditie Rife at the leaft to full three thousand pound, Besides like gaine in other merchandize.

L. Ma. Well, he shall spend some of his thousands

For I have fent for him to the Guild Hall,

Enter Eyre.

See where he comes: good morrow mafter Eyre.

Eyre. Poore Simon Eyre, my Lord, your shoomaker.

L. Ma. Well well, it likes your felfe to terme you fo, Enter Dodger.

Now M. Dodger, whats the newes with you?

Dodg. Ide gladly fpeake in private to your Honor. L. Ma. You shall, you shall: master Eyre, and M. Scot,

I have fome bufinesse with this gentleman, I pray let me intreat you to walke before To the Guild hall, Ile follow presently, Maister Eyre, I hope ere noone to call you Sherife.

Eyre. I would not care (my Lord) if you might call me king of Spaine, come master Scot.

L. Ma. Now mafter Dodger, what's the newes you bring?Dod. The Earle of Lincolne by me greets your

Dod. The Earle of Lincolne by me greets your Lordship,

And earnefuly requests you (if you can) Informe him where his nephew Lacy keepes.

L. Ma. Is not his nephew Lacy now in France?

Dod. No I affure your Lordship, but difguis'd

Lurkes here in London.

L. Ma. London? ift euen fo? It may be; but vpon my faith and foule, I know not where he liues, or whether he liues, So tell my Lord of Lincolne: lurke in London? Well mafter Dodger, you perhaps may ftart him, Be but the meanes to rid him into France, Ile giue you a dozen angells for your paines, So much I loue his honor, hate his nephew, And prethee fo informe thy Lord from me.

Dodger. I take my leaue. Exit Dodger.

L. Ma. Farewell good mafter Dodger.

Lacie in London? I dare pawne my life,
My daughter knowes thereof, and for that caufe,
Denied young Mafter Hammon in his loue,
Well, I am glad I fent her to old Forde,
Gods Lord tis late, to Guild Hall I must hie,
I know my Brethren stay my companie. (2) Exit,

(2) lacke my companie. 1631.

Enter Firke, Eyres wife, Hans and Roger.

Wife. Thou goest too fast for me Roger. O Firke.

Firke. I forfooth.

Wife. I pray thee run (doe you heare) run to Guild Hall, and learne if my hufband mafter Eyre will take that worshipfull vocation of M. Sherife vpon him, hie thee good Firke.

Firke. Take it? well I goe, and he should not take it, Firke sweares to forsweare him, yes forsooth I goe to Guild Hall.

Wife. Nay when? th'art two compendious and tedious.

Firk. O rare, your excellence if full of eloquence, how like a new Cart wheele my dame fpeakes, and the lookes like an old mustic Ale-bottle going to calding.

Wife. Nay when? thou wilt make me melancholy. Firke. God forbid your Worship should fall into that humour, I run. Exit.

Wife. Let me fee now Roger and Hans.

Ro. I forfooth dame, (miftris I should fay) but the old terms fo slickes to the roofe of my mouth, I can hardly licke it off.

Wife. Euen what thou wilt good Roger, Dame is a faire name for any honest Christian, but let that passe, how dost thou Hans?

Hans. Me tanck you vro.

Wife. Well Hans and Roger, you fee God hath bleft your maifter, and perdie if euer he come to be M. Sherife of London, (as we are all mortall) you shall fee, I will have some odde thing or other in a corner for you, I will not bee your backe friend, but let that passe, pray thee tye my shoe.

Hans. Yaw ic fal vro.

Wife. Roger, thou knowest the length of my foote, as it is none of the biggest, so I thanke God it is handsome enough, prethee let me haue a paire of shooes made, Corke good Roger, woodden heele too.

Hodge. You shall.

Wife. Art thou acquainted with neuer a Fardingale-maker, nor a French-hood maker, I must enlarge my bumme, ha, ha, ha, how shall I looke in a hood I wonder? perdie odly I thinke.

Roser. As a Cat out of a Pillory, very wel I warrant you Mistresse.

Wife. Indeed all flesh is grasse, and Roger, canst thou tell where I may buy a good haire?

Roger. Yes forfooth, at the Poulterers in Gracious streete.

Wife. Thou art an vngracious wag, perdye, I meane a false haire for my perewig.

Roger. Why Mistris, the next time that I cut my beard, you shall have the shauings of it, but mine are all true haires.

Wife. It is very hot, I must get me a fan or else a maſke.

Roger. So you had need to hide your wicked face. Wife. Fie vpon it, how costly this world's calling, is, perdie, but that it is one of the wonderfull workes of God, I would not deal with it: is not Firke come yet? Hans, be not so fad, let it passe and vanish as my husbands worship saies.

Hans. Ick bin vrolicke, lot see you soo.

Roger. Mistris, will you drinke a pipe of Tobacco? Wife. O sie vpon it Roger, perdy, these filthy Tobacco pipes are the most idle slauering bables that euer I selt: out vpon it, God blesse vs, men looke not like men that vse them.

Enter Raph being lame.

Roger. What fellow Raph? Mistresse looke hee re Janes husband: why how now, lame? Hans make much of him, hee's a brother of our Trade, a good workeman, and a tall Souldier.

Hans. You be welcome broder.

Wife. Pardie I knew him not, now dost thou good Raph?

I am glad to fee thee well.

Raph. I would God you faw me dame as well

As when I went from London into France.

Wife. Trust mee I am forrie Raph to see thee impotent, Lord how the warres have made him Sunburnt: the left leg is not well, 'twas a faire gift of God, the infirmitie took not hold a little higher, considering thou camst from France, but let that passe.

Raph. I am glad to fee you well, and I rejoyce

To heare that God hath bleft my mafter fo

Since my departure.

Wife. Yea truely Raph, I thanke my maker: but let that passe.

Roger. And firra Raph, what news, what news in France?

Raph. Tell me good Roger first what newes in England ?

How does my Jane? when didft thou fee my wife? Where liues my poore heart? sheele be poore indeed, Now I want limbs to get whereon to feed.

Rog. Limbes? haft thou not hands man? thou shalt neuer see a shoomaker want bread, though he haue but three fingers on a hand.

Raph. Yet all this while I heare not of my Jane.

Wife. O Raph your wife, perdie wee know not what's become of her: she was here a while, and because she was married, grew more stately than became her, I checkt her, and so forth, away she flung, neuer returned, nor said bih nor bah: and Raph you know, ka me, ka thee, And so as I tell ye, Roger is not Firke come yet?

Roger. No forfooth.

Wife. And so indeed we heard not of her, but I heare shee liues in London: but let that passe. If shee had wanted, shee might haue opened her case to me or my husband, or to any of my men, I am sure there is not any of them perdie, but would haue done her good to his power. Hans, looke if Firke bee come.

Hans. Yaw ic fal vro.

Exit Hans.

Wife. And fo as I faid: but Raph, why dost thou weepe? thou knowest that naked we came out of our mothers womb, and naked we must returne, and therefore thanke God for all things.

Roger. No faith, Jane is a stranger heere, but Raph pull vp a good heart, I know thou hast one, thy wife man is in London, one told me he saw her a while agoe very braue and neat, wee'le ferret her out, and London hold her.

Wife. Alas poore foule, hee's ouercome with forrow, he does but as I doe, weepe for the loffe of any good thing: but Raph, get thee in, call for fome meat and drink, thou shalt find me worshipfull towards thee.

Raph. I thanke you dame, since I want limbs and lands,

Ile trust to God, my good friends, and to my hands. (3)

Exit.

Enter Hans and Firke running.

Firke. Runne good Hans, O Hodge, O Mistris; Hodge heaue vp thine eares, mistresse surger support lookes, on with your best apparell, my master is chosen, my master is called, nay condemned by the cry of the Countrie to be sherise of the Citie, for this samous yeare now to come: and time now being, a great many men in black gownes were askt for their voices, and their hands, and my master had all their fists about his eares presently, and they cried I, I, I, I, and so I came away, wherefore without all other grieue, I doe salute you mistris Shrieue.

Hans. Yaw, my meester is de groot man, de

Shrieue.

Roger. Did not I tell you Mistris, now I may boldly fay, good morrow to your worship.

Wife. Good morrow good Reger, I thanke you my good people all, Firke, hold vp thy hand, heer's a three pennie peece for thy tydings.

(3) Ile to God, my good friends, and to these my hands.

1600-1610.

Firk. Tis but three halfe pence, I think: yes, tis three pence, I fmell the Rofe.

Hodge. But Mistris, be rul'd by me, and do not fpeake fo pulingly.

Firk. 'Tis her worship speakes so and not she, no faith mistris speake mee in the old key, to it Firke, there good Firke, ply your businesse Hodge, Hodge with a full mouth: Ile fill your bellies with good cheare till they cry twang.

Enter Simon Eyre wearing a gold chaine.

Hans. See mine lieuer broder, heere compt my meester.

Wife. Welcome home maister Shrieue, I pray

God continue you in health and wealth.

Eyre. See here my Maggy, a Chaine, a gold Chaine for Simon Eyre, I shall make thee a lady, heere's a French hood for thee, on with it, on with it, dresse thy browes with this slap of a shoulder of mutton, to make thee looke louely: where be my fine men? Roger, Ile make ouer my shop and tooles to thee: Firk, thou shalt be the foreman: Hans, thou shalt haue an hundred for twenty, be as mad knaues as your maister Sim Eyre hath beene, and you shall liue to be Sherises of London: how dost thou like mee Margerie? Prince am I none, yet am I princely borne, Firke, Hodge, and Hans.

All 3. I forfooth, what fayes your worship mistris

Sherife?

Eyre. Worship and honour ye Babilonian knaues, for the Gentle Craft: but I forgot my felse, I am bidden by my Lord Maior to dinner to old Foord, hees gone before, I must after: come Madge, on with your trinkets: now my true Troians, my fine Firke, my dapper Hodge, my honest Hans, fome deuice, some odde crochets, some morris, or such like, for the honour of the gentle Shoo-makers, meet mee at old Foord, you know my mind: come Madge, away, shut vp the shop knaues, and make Holiday.

Exeunt

Firke. O rare, O braue, come Hodge, follow me Hans, Wee'le be with them for a Morris dance. Exeunt.

Enter Lord Maior, Eyre, his wife in a French hood, Sibill and other Servants.

L. Maior. Trust me you are as welcome to old Foord, as I myselfe.

Wife. Truely, I thanke your Lordship.

L. Maior. Would our bad cheere were worth the thankes you give.

Eyre. Good cheere my Lord Maior, fine cheere, a fine house, fine walles, all fine and neat.

L. Ma. Now by my troth, Ile tell thee maister Eyre,

It does me good and all my Brethren, That fuch a mad-cap fellow as thy felfe Is entred into our focietie.

Wife. I but my Lord hee must learne now to put on grauitie.

Eyre. Peace Maggy, a fig for grauitie, when I goe to Guild Hall in my Scarlet gowne, i'le looke as demurely as a Saint, and speake as grauely as a Justice of Peace, but now I am here at old Foord, at my good Lord Maiors house, let it goe by, vanish Maggy, i'le be merrie, away with slip slap, these sooleries, these gulleries: what hunny? Prince am I none, yet am I Princely borne: what sayes my Lord Maior?

L. Ma. Ha, ha, I had rather than a thousand pound.

I had an heart but halfe fo light as yours.

Eyre. Why what should I doe my Lord? a pound of care payes not a dram of debt: hum, let's be merrie whiles wee are young, old Age, sacke and sugar will steale vpon vs ere we be aware.

L. Ma. Its well done, Mistris Eyre, pray give good counsell to my daughter.

Wife. I hope mistris Rose will have the grace to take nothing that's bad.

L. Ma. Pray God she doe, for ifaith mistris Eyrc, I would bestow vpon that peeuish girle A thousand markes more than I meane to giue her, Upon condition sheed be rul'd by me. The Ape still crosseth me: there came of late A proper gentleman of faire reuenewes, Whom gladly I would call Sonne in law:

But my fine Cockney would have none of him, Youle proue a Cockfcombe for it ere you die, A Courtier or no man must please your eye.

Eyrc. Bee rul'd fweet Rôfe, th'art ripe for a man: marrie not with a boy that has no more haire on his face than thou hast on thy cheekes: a Courtier, wash, goe by, stand not vpon pishery pasherie; those silken fellowes are but painted Images, outsides, outsides, Rose, their inner linings are torne: no my fine mouse, marrie me with a Gentleman Grocer like my Lord Maior your father, a Grocer is a sweet trade, plums, plums: had I a sonne or daughter should marrie out of the generation and blood of the shoomakers, he should pack: what, the gentle trade is a liuing for a man through Europe, through the world.

A noyfe within of a Taber and a Pipe.

L. Ma. What noyfe is this?

Eyre. O my Lord Maior, a crue of good fellowes that for loue to your honour, are come hither with a Morrisdance; come in my Mesopotamians cheerily.

Enter Hodge, Hans, Raph, Firke, and other Shoomakers in a morris: after a little dancing the Lord Maior speaks.

L. Ma. Maister Eyre, are all these Shoomakers? Eyre. All Cordwainers my good Lord Maior. Rose. How like my Lacie lookes yond Shoomaker. Hans. O that I durst but speake vnto my loue!

L. Ma. Sibill, go fetch fome wine to make these drinke.

You are all welcome.

All. We thanke your Lordship.

Roje takes a cup of wine and goes to Hans.

Rofe. For his take whose faire shape thou reprefentst,

Good friend I drinke to thee.

Hans. Ic be dancke good frister.

Eyres Wife. I fee mitris Rofe you do not want iudgement, you have drunke to the properest man I keepe.

Firke. Here be fome have done their parts to be as proper as he.

L. Ma. Well, vrgent businesse cals me backe to London:

Good fellowes, first go in and tast our cheare, And to make merrie as you homeward goe, Spend these two angels in beere at Stratford Boe.

Eyre. To thefe two (my mad lads) Sim Eyre addes another, then cheerily Firke, tickle it Hans, and all for the honour of Shoomakers.

All go dancing out.

L. Ma. Come maister Eyre, let's haue your company.

Execunt,

Rofe. Sibill, what shall I doe? Sibil Why whats the matter?

Rofe. That Hans the shoo-maker is my loue Lacy,

Difguisd in that attire to find me out,

How should I find the meanes to speake with him?

Sib. What mistris, neuer feare, I dare venter my maidenhead to nothing, and thats great oddes, that Hans the Dutchman when we come to London, shall not onely fee and speake with you, but in spight of all your Fathers pollicies, steale you away and marrie you, will not this please you?

Rofe. Do this, and euer be affured of my loue. Sibil. Away then, and follow your father to London, left your abfence cause him to suspect something:

To morrow if my counfell be obaide, Ile bind you prentife to the gentle trade.

Enter Iane in a Semsters shop working, and Hammon muffled at another doore, he stands aloofe.

Yonders the shop, and there my faire loue fits,

Shee's faire and louely, but she is not mine. O would she were, thrice have I courted her, Thrice hath my hand beene moistned with her hand, Whilft my poore famisht eyes do feed on that Which made them famish: I am infortunate, I still loue one, yet no bodie loues me, I muse in other men what women see, That I fo want? fine mistris Rose was cov. And this too curious, oh no, she is chast, And for the thinkes me wanton, the denies. To cheare my cold heart with her funny eyes, How prettily fhe workes, oh prettie hand! Oh happie worke, it doth me good to stand Unfeene to fee her, thus I oft have flood, In frosty euenings, a light burning by her, Enduring biting cold, only to eye her, One onely looke hath feem'd as rich to me As a Kings crowne, fuch is loues lunacie: Muffeled Ile paffe along, and by that try Whether she know me. Fane. Sir, what ift you buy?

What ift you lacke fir? callico, or lawne, Fine cambricke shirts, or bands, what will you buy?

Ham. That which thou wilt not fell, faith yet ile trie:

How do you fell this handkercher ?

Fane. Good cheape. Ham. And how these ruffes?

Fane. Cheape too.

Ham. And how this band?

Fane. Cheape too.

Ham. All cheape, how fell you then this hand?

Fane. My hands are not to be fold.

Ham. To be given then, nay faith I come to buy.

Fane. But none knowes when.

Ham. Good fweet, leave worke a little while, lets play.

Fane. I cannot liue by keeping holliday.

Ham. Ile pay you for the time which shall be lost.Fane. With me you shall not be at so much cost.Ham. Looke how you wound this cloth, so you wound me.

Fane. It may be fo.

Ham. Tis fo.

Fane. What remedy?

Ham. Nay faith you are too coy.

Fane. Let go my hand.

Ham. I will do any taske at your command,

I would let go this beautie, were I not In mind to difobey you by a power That controules Kings: I loue you.

Fane. So, now part.

Ham. With hands I may, but neuer with my heart,

In faith I loue you.

Fane. I beleeue you doe.

Ham. Shall a true loue in mee breed hate in you?

Fane. I hate you not. Ham. Then you must loue.

Fane. I doe, what are you better now? I loue not you.

Ham. All this I hope is but a womans fray, That meanes come to me, when she cries, away:

In earnest mistris I do not iest,

A true chast loue hath entred in my brest,

I loue you dearely as I doe my life, I loue you as a huf band loues a wife,

That, and no other loue my loue requires,

Thy wealth I know is little, my defires

Thirst not for gold, fweet beautious Jane what's mine, Shall (if thou make my felfe thine) all be thine,

Say, iudge, what is thy fentence, life, or death?

Mercy or crueltie lies in thy breath.

Fane. Good sir I do beleeue you loue me well:

For tis a feely conquest, feely pride,

For one like you (I mean a gentleman)

To boast, that by his loue tricks he hath brought, Such and such women to his amorous lure:

I thinke you do not fo, yet many doe,

And make it euen a very trade to wooe, I could be coy, as many women be,

Feed you with fun-shine smiles, and wanton lookes,

But I detest witch-crast; say that I

Doe constantly beleeve you, constant haue.

Ham. Why doest thou not believe me?

Fane. I beleeue you,

But yet good fir, because I will not greeue you, With hopes to taste fruit which will neuer fall, In simple truth this is the summe of all, My hus band liues, at least I hope he liues, Prest was he to these bitter warres in France, Bitter they are to me by wanting him, I haue but one heart, and that heart's his due, How can I then bestow the same on you? Whilest he liues, his I liue, be it neere so poore, And rather be his wife, than a kings whore.

Ham. Chast and deare woman, I will not abuse thee,

Although it cost my life, if thou refuse me,

Thy huf band preft for France, what was his name?

Fane. Rafe Damport.

Ham. Damport, heres a letter fent

From France to me, from a deare friend of mine, A gentleman of place, here he doth write,

Their names that have beene flaine in every fight.

Fanc. I hope deaths fcroll containes not my loues name.

Ham. Can you not read?

Fanc. I can.

Ham. Peruse the same.

To my remembrance fuch a name I read

Amongst the rest; see here.

Fane. Aye me, hee's dead,

Hee's dead, if this be true my deare hearts flaine.

Ham. Haue patience, deare loue.

Fane. Hence, hence.

Ham. Nay sweet Fane,

Make not poore forrow prowd with these rich teares, I mourne thy hus bands death because thou mournst.

Fane. That bill is forgde, tis fignde by forgerie. Ham. Ile bring thee letters fent befides to many

Carrying the like report: Fane tis too true,

Come, weep not: mourning though it rife from loue, Helpes not the mourned, yet hurts them that mourne.

Fane. For Gods fake leaue me. Ham. Whither dost thou turne?

Forget the dead, loue them that are aliue. His loue is faded, trie how mine will thriue.

Fane. Tis now no time for me to think on loue. Ham. Tis now best time for you to thinke on loue, because your loue liues not.

Fane. Though he be dead, my loue to him shal not be buried:

For Gods fake leaue me to my felfe alone.

Ham. T'would kill my foule to leave thee drownd in mone:

Answere me to my sute, and I am gone, Say to me, yea, or no.

Fane. No.

Ham. Then farewell: one farewell will not ferue. I come againe, come drie these wet cheekes, tell me faith fweete Jane, yea, or no, once more.

Fane. Once more I fay no, once more begone I pray, else will I goe.

Ham. Nay then I will grow rude by this white hand.

Untill you change that cold no, here ile fland, Till by your hard heart.

Fane. Nay for Gods loue peace,

My forrowes by your prefence more increase, Not that you thus are present, but all griese Desires to be alone, therefore in briese Thus much I say, and saying bid adew, If euer I wed man it shall be you.

Ham. Oh bleffed voice, deare Jane, ile urge no more.

Thy breath hath made me rich.

Fane. Death makes me poore.

Exit.

Enter Hodge at his shop boord, Rafe, Firke, Hans, and a boy at worke.

All. Hey downe, a downe dery.

Hodge. Well faid my hearts, plie your worke to day, wee loytred yesterday, to it pell mell, that we may liue to be Lord Maiors, or Aldermen at least.

Firk. Hey downe a downe dery.

Hodge. Well said is is thou Hans, doth not Firk tickle it?

Hans. Yaw mester.

Firke. Not fo neither, my organe pipe fqueaks this morning forwant of licoring: hey downe a downe dery.

Hans. Forward Firk, tow best vn iolly yongster hort I mester ic bid yo cut me vn paire vanpres vor mester iffres boots.

Hodge. Thou fhalt Hans.

Firke. Maister.

Hodge. How now, boy ?

Firke. Pray, now you are in the cutting vaine, cut me out a paire of counterfeits, or elfe my worke will not paffe currant, hey downe a downe.

Hod. Tell me firs, are my cozen M. Prifcillaes fliooes done?

Firke. Your cozen? no master, one of your aunts, hang her, let them alone.

Rafe. I am in hand with them, she gaue charge that none but I should do them for her.

Firke. Thou do for her? then twill be but a lame doing, and that she loues not: Rafe, thou might'st haue fent her to me, in faith I would haue yearkt and firkt your Prifcilla, hey downe a downe dery, this geere will not hold.

Hodge. How faist thou Firk? were we not merry at Old-Ford?

Firke. How merry? why our buttockes went Iiggy ioggy like a quagmire: well fir Roger Oatemeale, if I thought all meate of that nature, I would eate nothing but Bag puddings.

Raph. Of all good fortunes, my fellow Hans had the best.

Firke. Tis true, because mistris Rose dranke to him.

Hodge. Well, well, worke apace, they fay feuen of the Aldermen be dead, or very fick.

Firke. I care not, ile be none.

Rafe. No nor I, but then my M. Eyre will come quickly to be L. Maior.

Enter Sibill.

Firke. Whoope, yonder comes Sibill.

Hodge. Sibill, welcome if aith, and how doft thou madde wench?

Firke. Sib whoore, welcome to London.

Sibill. Godamercy fweet Firke: good Lord, Hodge, what a delicious fhop you have got, you tickle it ifaith.

Rafe. God a mercy Sibill for our good cheere at old Ford.

Sibill. That you shall have Rafe.

Firke. Nay by the maffe, we had tickling cheere Sibill, and how the plague dost thou and mistris Rose, and my L. Maior? I put the women in first.

Sibill. Well Godamercy: but gods me, I forget my felfe, where's Hans the Flemming ?

Firke. Hearke butter-boxe, now you must yelp out fome spreken.

Hans. Vat begaie gon vat vod gon Frister.

Sibill. Marry you must come to my young mistris, to pull on her shooes you made last.

Hans. Var ben your egle fro, vare ben your miftris?

Sibil. Marrie here at our London house in Corne-

Firke. Will no bodie ferue her turne but Hans? Sibil. No fir, come Hans I fland vpon needles. Hod. Why then Sibill, take heed of pricking.

Sibill. For that let me alone, I have a tricke in my budget, come Hans.

Hans. Yaw, yaw ic fall meete yo gane.

Exit Hans and Sibill.

 $\it Hodge.$ Goe $\it Hans,$ make hast againe: come, who lackes worke ?

Firke. I master, for I lacke my breakefast, tis munching time, and paft.

Hodge. Ist fo, why then leave worke Raph, to breakefast, boy looke to the tooles, come Rafe, come Firke.

Execunt.

Enter a Servingman.

Ser. Let me fee now, the figne of the Last in Tower-street, mas yonders the house: what haw, whoes within?

Enter Rafe.

Rafe. Who calls there, what want you fir?

Scr. Marrie I would have a paire of shooes made for a Gentlewoman against to morrow morning, what, can you do them?

Rafe. Yes fir, you shall have them, but what length's her foote?

Ser. Why, you must make them in all parts like this shooe, but at any hand saile not to do them, for the Gentlewoman is to be married very early in the morning.

Rafe. How? by this shooe must it be made? by this? are you fure fir by this?

Ser. How, by this am I fure, by this? art thou in thy wits? I tell thee I must have a paire of shooes, dost thou marke me? a paire of shooes, two shooes, made by this very shooe, this same shooe, against to morrow morning by source a clocke, dost vndersland me, canst thou do it?

Rafe. Yes fir, yes, I, I, I can do't, by this shooe you say: I should know this shooe? yes fir, yes, by this shooe, I can do't, source a clocke, well, whither fhall I bring them ?

Ser. To the figne of the golden ball in Watling-ftreet, enquire for one maister Hammon, a Gentleman, my master.

Raph. Yea fir, by this shooe you fay.

Ser. I fay mafter Hammon at the golden Ball, hee's the Bride-groome, and those shoes are for his bride.

Raph. They shall be done by this shooe; well, well, master Hammon at the gold shooe, I would say the golden Ball, wel, very well, but I pray you sir, where must master Hammon be married?

Ser. At Saint Faith's Church vnder Paules: but what's that to thee I prethee difpatch those shooes, and fo farewell.

Raph. By this shooe said he, how am I amazd At this strange accident? vpon my life, This was the very shooe I gaue my wise When I was prest for France; since when, alas, I neuer could heare of her. 'Tis the same, And Hammons bride no other than my Fane.

Enter Firke.

Firke. Snailes Raph thou hast lost thy part of three pots, a countrieman of mine gaue me to breakefast.

Raph. I care not, I have found a better thing. Firke. A thing? away; is it a mans thing or a womans thing?

Raph. Firke, dost thou know this shooe ? Firke. No by my troth, neither doth that know me: I have no acquaintance with it, tis a meere stranger to me.

Raph. Why then I doe; this shooe I durst be fworne

Once covered the instep of my Fane: This is her fize, her breadth, thus trod my loue, These true-loue knots I prickt, I hold my life, By this old shooe I shall find out my wife.

Ha, ha old shooe that wert new, how a murren came this ague fit of foolishnesse vpon thee?

Raph. Thus Firke even now here came a feruing-man.

By this shooe would be haue a new paire made, Against to morrow morning for his mistris, That's to be married to a gentleman, And why may not this be my fweet Fane?

And why maiest not thou be my sweet Asse?

Raph. Well, laugh and spare not, but the truth is this.

Against to morrow morning Ileprouide A lufty crew of honest shoomakers, To watch the going of the bride to Church: If the proue Fane, Ile take her in dispite Of Hammon and the Deuill, were he by, If it be not my Fane, what remedy? Hereof I am fure, I shall liue till I die, Although I neuer with a woman lie.

Firke. Thou lie with a woman to build nothing but Cripplegates? Well God fends fooles fortune, and it may be hee may light upon his matrimony by fuch a deuice, for wedding and hanging goes by deftinie.

Enter Hans and Rofe arme in arme.

Hans. How happie am I by embracing thee, O I did feare fuch crosse mishaps did raigne, That I should neuer see my Rose againe.

Rose. Sweet Lacy, fince faire opportunitie, Offers her selfe to surther our escape, Let not too ouer-fond esteeme of me, Hinder that happie houre, inuent the meanes, And Rose will sollow thee through all the world.

Hans. Oh how I furfet with excesse of ioy, Made happie by thy rich perfection:
But fince thou payst sweet interest to my hopes, Redoubling loue on loue, let me once more Like to a bold-fac'd debtor craue of thee, This night to steale abroad, and at Eyres house, Who now by death of certaine Aldermen, Is Maior of London, and my maister once, Meete thou thy Lacy, where in spight of change, Your fathers anger, and mine vncles hate, Our happy nuptials will we consummate.

Enter Sibil.

Sibill. Oh God, what will you do mistris? shift for your felse, your father is at hand, hee's comming, hee's comming, master Lacy hide your felse in my mistris, for Gods sake shift for your selues.

Hans. Your father come, fweet Rofe, what shall I doe?

Where shall I hide me? how shall I escape?

Rose. A man, and want wit in extremitie,
Come come, be Hans still, play the shoomaker,
Pull on my shooe.

Enter Lord Maior.

Hans. Mas and that's well remembred.

Sibill. Here comes your father.

Hans. For ware metreffe, 'tis vn good fkow, it fall vel fute, or ye fal neit betallen.

Rose. O God it pincheth me, what will you do? Hans. Your fathers prefence pincheth, not the shooe.

L. Ma. Well done, fit my daughter well, and she shall please thee well.

Hans. Yaw, yaw, ick weit dat well, for ware tis vn good skoo, tis gi mait van neits leither, se euer mine here.

Enter a Prentife.

L. Maior. I do beleeue it, whats the newes with you?

Pren. Pleafe you the Earle of Lincolne at the gate is newly lighted, and would fpeake with you.

L. Ma. The Earle of Lincolne come speake with me?

Well, well, I know his errand: daughter Rose
Send hence your shoomaker, dispatch, haue done:
Sib make things handsome, fir boy follow me. Exit.

Hans. Mine vncle come: O what may this portend?

Sweet Rofe, this of our loue threatens an end.

Rofe. Be not difmaid at this, what ere befall,
Rofe is thine owne, to witneffe I fpeake truth,
Where thou appoints the place, Ile meet with thee;
I will not fixe a day to follow thee,
But prefently fleale hence: do not replie,
Loue which gaue ftrength to beare my fathers hate,
Shall now adde wings to further our escape. Execute

Enter Lord Maior and Lincolne.

L. Maior. Beleeue me on my credit I fpeake truth, Since first your nephew Lacy went to France, I have not feene him: It feem'd strange to me, When Dodger told me that he staied behind, Neglecting the high charge the king imposed.

Linc. Trust me (fir Roger Otley) I did thinke Your counsell had given head to this attempt, Drawne to it by the love he beares your child,

Here I did hope to find him in your house, But now I see mine error, and confesse My judgement wrong'd you by conceiuing so.

L. Ma. Lodge in my house, say you? trust me my

Lord,

I loue your nephew Lacy too too dearely,
So much to wrong his honour: and he hath done fo,
That first gaue him aduice to staie from France.
To witnesse I speake truth, I let you know
How carefull I haue beene to keepe my daughter
Free from all conference or speech of him,
Not that I scorne your nephew, but in loue
I beare your honor, lest your noble blood,
Should by my meane worth be dishonoured.

Line. How far the churles tongue wanders from his heart,

Well, well fir Roger Otley, I beleeue you, With more than many thankes for the kind loue, So much you feeme to beare me: but my Lord, Let me request your helpe to feeke my nephew, Whom if I find, i'le straight imbarke for France; So shall your Rose be free, my thoughts at rest, And much care die which now lies in my brest.

Enter Sibill.

Sibill. O Lord, helpe for Gods fake my mistris, Oh my young mistris.

L. Ma. Where is thy mistris i what's become of her i Sibill. Shee's gone, shee's fled.

L. Ma. Gone? whither is the fled?

Sibill. I know not forfooth, flee's fled out of doores with Hans the Shoomaker, I faw them fcud, fcud, fcud, apace, apace.

L. Ma. Which waie? what γ_{ohn} ? where be my men? which waie?

Sibill. I know not and it please your worship.

L. Ma. Fled with a shoomaker, can this be true?

Sibil. O Lord fir, as true as you are L. Maior.(4)

Lin. Her loue turned shoomaker, I am glad of this.

L. Ma. A Flemming butter-boxe, a shoomaker.

Will she forget her birth? requite my care

With such ingratitude? scorn'd she young Hammon,

To loue a honnikin, a needy knaue?

Well let her slie, ile not slie after her,

Let her starue if she will, shee's none of mine.

Lin. Be not so cruell fir.

Enter Firke with shooes.

Sibill. I am glad fhee's fcapt.

L. Ma. Ile not account of her as of my child, Was there no better object for her eyes, But a foule drunken lubbery fwill-bellie, A shoomaker, that's braue.

Firke. Yea forfooth 'tis a verie braue shooe, and as fit as a pudding.

L. Ma. How now, what knaue is this, from whence commest thou?

Firke. No knaue fir, I am Firke the shoomaker, lustie Rogers chiefe lusty journey-man, and I come hither to take vp the prettie legge of sweet mistris Rose, and thus hoping your worship is in as good health as I was at the making hereof, I bid you farewell, yours

Firke.

L. Ma. Stay, flay, fir knaue. Lin. Come hither floomaker.

Firke. Tis happie the knaue is put before the shoomaker, or else I would not have vouchfased to come backe to you, I am moued, for I stirre.

L. Ma. My Lord, this villaine calls vs knaues by craft.

Firke. Then 'tis by the Gentle Craft, and to call one knaue gently is no harme: fit your worship merrie: Sib your young mistris. I'le so bob them, now my maister M. Eyre is Lord Maior of London.

⁽⁴⁾ as true as Gods in heauen. 1600.

L. Ma. Tell me firra, whose man are you?

Firke. I am glad to fee your worship so merrie, I haue no maw to this geere, no stomacke as yet to a red petticoat.

Pointing to Sibil.

Lin. He meanes not fir to wooe you to his maid,

But onely doth demand whose man you are. Firke. I fing now to the tune of Rogero, Roger my fellow is now my maister.

Linc. Sirra knowst thou one Hans a shoomaker?

Fir. Hans Shoomaker, oh yes, stay, yes I haue him, I tell you what, I speake it in secret, mistris Rese and he are by this time, no not so, but shortly are to come ouer one another, with Can you dance the shaking of the sheets? it is that Hans, Ile so gull these diggers.

L. Ma. Knowst thou then where he is ?

Firke. Yes forfooth, yea marry. Lin. Canst thou in sadnesse?

Firke. No forfooth, no marry.

L. Ma. Tell me good honest fellow where he is,

And thou shalt see what Ile bestow of thee.

Firke. Honest fellow, no fir, not so fir, my profession is the Gentle Craft, I care not for seeing, I loue seeling, let me feel it heere, aurium tenus, ten peeces of gold, genuum tenus, ten peeces of siluer, and then Firke is your man in a new paire of stretchers.

L. Ma. Here is an angell, part of thy reward,

Which I will give thee, tell me where he is.

Firke. No point, shall I betray my brother? no, shal I proue Judas to Hans? no; shal I crie treason to my corporation? no, I shall be firkt and yerkt then, but give me your angell, your angell shall tell you.

Lin. Doe so good fellow, 'tis no hurt to thee.

Firke. Send fimpring Sib away.

L. Ma. Huswife get you in. Exit Sib.

Firke. Pitchers haue eares, and maids haue wide mouthes: but for Hans praunce, vpon my word to morrow morning hee and young mistris Rose goe to this geere, they shall be married together by this rush, or elfe turne Firk to a firkin of butter to tan leather withall.

L. Ma. But art thou fure of this?

Firke. Am I fure that Paules-steeple is a handfull higher than London stone? or that the pissing Conduit leaks nothing but pure mother Bunch? am I sure I am lusty Firk? Gods nailes do you thinke I am so base to gull you?

Lincolne. Where are they married? dost thou know the Church?

Firke. I neuer goe to Church, but I know the name of it, it is a fwearing Church, ftay a while, 'tis, I by the mas: no, no, tis I by my troth, no nor that, tis I by my faith, that that, tis I by my Faiths Church vnder Paules Croffe, there they shall bee knit like a paire of stockings in matrimony, there theyle be in cony.

Linc. Upon my life my Nephew Lacy walkes,

In the difguise of this Dutch Shoomaker.

Firke. Yes forfooth.

Linc. Doth he not honest fellow?

Firke. No forfooth I thinke Hans is no body but Hans, no fpirit.

L. Ma. My mind mifgiues me now tis fo indeed.

Linc. My Cofen fpeaks the language, knowes the trade.

L. Ma. Let me request your company my Lord, Your honorable presence may, no doubt, Refraine their head-strong rashnesse, when my selfe Going alone, perchase may be ore-borne:

Shall I request this fauour?

Lin. This, or what elfe.

Firk. Then you must rise betimes, for they meane to fall to their hey passe, and repasse, pindy pandy, which hand will you haue, very early.

L Ma. My care shall every way equal their hast, This night accept your lodging in my house, The earlier shal we stir, and at Saint Faiths Prevent this giddy hare-braind Nuptiall,

This trafficke of hot love shall yeeld cold gaines, They ban our loves and weele forbid their baines.

Exit.

Lin. At Saint Faiths Church thou faist?

Firk. Yes, by their troth. Linc. Be fecret on thy life.

Exit.

Firk. Yes when I kiffe your wife, ha, ha, heres no craft in the Gentle Craft, I came hither of purpose with shooes to Sir Rogers worship, whilst Rose his daughter be cony-catcht by Hans: foft now, thefe two gulles wil be at Saint Faithes Church to morrow morning to take maifter Bridegroome, and miftris Bride napping, and they in the meane time shall chop vp the matter at the Sauoy: but the best sport is, Sir Roger Otley will find my fellow lame Raphs wife going to marrie a Genman; and then heele flop her in flead of his Daughter; O braue, there will bee fine tickling fport: foft now, what haue I to do? O I know, now a meffe of shoomakers meate at the Wooll-sacke in Iuy lane, to cozen my Gentleman of lame Raphs wife, that's true, alacke alacke, girles hold out tacke, for now fmockes for this iumbling shall go to wracke. Exit Enter Eyre, his wife, Hans and Rofe.

Eyre. This is the morning then, stay my bully, my honest Hans, is it not?

Hans. This is the morning that must make vs two happie or miferable, therefore if you---

Eyre. Away with these ifs and ands Hans, and these et ceteraes, by mine honor Rowland Lacy, none but the king shall wrong thee: come seare nothing, am not I Sim Eyre? Is not Sim Eyre Lord Maior of London? seare nothing Rose, let them say all what they can, daintie come thou to mee, laughest thou?

Wife. Good my Lord stand her friend in what thing you may.

Eyre. Why my fweete Ladie Madgy, thinke you Simon Eyre can forget his fine Dutch iourneyman? No vah. Fie I fcorne it, it shall neuer be cast in my teeth, that I was vnthankefull. Lady Madgy, thou hadft neuer couered thy Saracens head with this French flappe, nor loaded thy bumme with this farthingale, tis trash, trumperie, vanitie, Simon Eyre had neuer walkt in a red petticoate, nor wore a chaine of Gold but for my fine Journeymans Portigues, and shall I leaue him? No: Prince am I none, yet beare a Princely minde.

Hans. My Lord, 'tis time to part from hence.

Eyre. Lady Madgy, Lady Madgy, take two or three of my Pie-crust eaters, my Buffe-ierkin varlets, that doe walke in blacke gownes at Simon Eyres heeles, take them good Ladie Madgy, trip and go, my browne Queene of Perriwigs, with my delicate Rose, and my iolly Rowland to the Sauoy, see them linkt, countenance the marriage, and when it is done, cling cling together, you Hamborow Turtle Doues, Ile beare you out, come to Simon Eyre, come dwell with me Hans, thou shalt eate minc'd pies, and marchpane. Rose, away cricket, trip and goe, my Lady Madgy to the Sauoy. Hans, wed, and to bed, kisse and away, go vanish.

Wife. Farewell my Lord. Rofe. Make hast sweet loue.

Wife. Sheede faine the deed were done.

Hans. Come my fweet Rofe, faster than Deere weele run.

They goe out.

Eyre." Goe, vanish, vanish, auant I say: by the Lord of Ludgate, it's a mad life to be a Lord Maior, it's a stirring life, a sine life, a veluet life, a carefull life. Well Simon Eyre, yet set a good sace on it, in the honour of Saint Hugh. Soft, the king this day comes to dine with me, to see my new buildings, his maiestie is welcome, hee shall haue good cheere, delicate cheere, princely cheere. This day my sellow prentices of London come to dine with me too, they shall haue sine cheere, gentlemanlike cheere. I promised the mad Cappadosians, when we all serued at the Conduit together, that if euer I came to bee

Maior of London, I would feast them all, and i'le doot, i'le doot by the life of Pharaoh, by this beard Sim Eyre will be no flincher. Besides, I haue procured, that vpon euery Shrouetuesday at the found of the Pancake bell, my fine dapper Assirian lads shall clap vp their shop windowes, and away, this is the day, and this day they shall doot, they shall doot: boyes, that day are you free, let maisters care, and prentises shall pray for Simon Eyre.

Enter Hodge, Firke, Raph, and five or fix Shoomakers, all with cudgels, or fuch weapons.

Hodge. Come Rafe, stand to it Firke: my masters, as wee are the braue bloods of the Shoomakers, heires apparant to Saint Hugh, and perpetuall benefactors to all good fellowes: thou shalt haue no wrong: were Hammon a King of Spades, he should not delue in thy close without thy sufferance; but tell me Rafe, art thou sure tis thy wife?

Rafe. Am I fure this is Firke? This morning when I ftrokt on her shooes, I lookt vpon her, and she vpon mee, and sighed, askt me if euer I knew one Rafe. Yes said I: for his sake said she (teares standing in her eyes) and for thou art somewhat like him, spend this peece of gold: I tooke it: my lame leg, and my trauell beyond sea made me vnknowne, all is one for that, I know's shee's mine.

Firk. Did shee giue thee this gold? O glorious glittering gold: shees thine owne, tis thy wife, and shee loues thee, for Ile stand toot, there's no woman will giue gold to any man, but she thinkes better of him than shee thinkes of them shee giues siluer to: and for Hammon, neither Hammon nor Hangman shall wrong thee in London: Is not our old Master Eyre Lord Maior? Speake my hearts.

All. Yes, and Hammon shall know it to his cost.

Enter Hammon his man, Fane, and others. Hodge. Peace my bullies, yonder they come.

Stand toot my hearts, Firk, let me speake Rafe. first.

No Rafe, let me: Hammon, whither away Hodge.

fo earely?

Ham. Unmannerly rude flaue, what's that to thee ? To him fir? yes fir, and to me, and others: good morrow Fane, how dost thou? good Lord, how the world is changed with you, God be thanked.

Villaines, hands off, how dare you touch Ham.

my loue?

Villaines: downe with them, cry clubs for AII.

prentifes.

Hold, my hearts: touch her Hammon? yea Hod.and more than that, weele carrie her away with vs. My maifters and gentlemen, neuer draw your bird fpits, shoomakers are steele to the backe, men enery inch of them, all spirit.

All of Hammons fide. Well, and what of all this?

Hod. Ile shew you: Fane, doost thou know this man? tis Rafe I can tell thee: nay, tis he in faith, though he be lam'd by the warres, yet looke not ftrange, but run to him, fold him about the necke and kisse him.

Fane. Liues then my hufband? oh God let me go,

Let me embrace my Rafe.

Ham. What meanes my Fane?

Fane. Nay, what meant you to tell me was he flaine ?

Pardon me deare loue for being misled, Ham. Twas rumord here in London thou wert dead.

Thou feeft he lives: Laffe, go packe home with him? now M. Hammon, wheres your mistris your wife ?

Swounds M. fight for her, will you thus lofe Seru.

her?

Downe with that creature, clubs, downe with All. him.

Hold, hold. Hodee.

Hold foole: firs he shall do no wrong,

Will my Fane leaue me thus, and breake her faith?

Firke. Yes fir, the must fir, the shall fir, what then?

mend it.

Hod. Hearke fellow Rafe, follow my counfell, fet the wench in the midft, and let her chuse her man, and let her be his woman.

Fane. Whom should I chuse? whom should my thoughts affect?

But him whom Heauen hath made to be my loue, Thou art my hufband, and these humble weedes, Makes thee more beautifull than all his wealth, Therefore I will but put off his attire, Returning it into the owners hand, And euer after be thy constant wise.

Hodge. Not a ragge Fane, the law's on our fide, hee that fowes in another mans ground forfeits his haruest, get thee home Raph, follow him Fane, hee shall not have so much as a buske point from thee.

Firke. Stand to that Rafe, the appurtenances are thine owne, Hammon, looke not at her.

Seru. O fwounds no.

Firke. Blew coate be quiet, weele giue you a new liuerie elfe, weele make Shroue Tuefday Saint Georges day for you: looke not Hammon, leare not, Ile firke you, for thy head now, one glance, one sheepes eye, any thing at her, touch not a ragge, lest I and my brethren beate you to clowtes.

Ser. Come maister Hammon, theres no striuing

here.

Ham. Good fellowes, heare me fpeake: and honest Rafe,

Whom I have injured most by louing Fane, Marke what I offer thee: here in faire gold, Is twentie pound, Ile give it for thy Fane,

If this content thee not, thou shalt have more.

Hodge. Sell not thy wife, Rafe, make her not a whore.

Ham. Say, wilt thou freely cease thy claime in her, And let her be my wise?

All. No do not Raph.

Raph. Sirra Hammon Hammon, dost thou thinke a shooe-maker is so base, to be a bawd to his own wise for comodity take thy gold, choake with it: were I not lame, I would make thee eate thy words.

Firke. A shoomaker sell his slesh and blood, oh indignitie!

Hodg. Sirra, take vp your pelfe, and be packing. Ham. I will not touch one pennie, but in liew, Of that great wrong I offered thy Fane, To Fane and thee I giue that twentie pound, Since I haue faild of her, during my life, I vow no woman elfe shall be my wife: Farewell good fellowes of the Gentle trade,

Your morning mirth my mourning day hath made.

Exit.

Firke. Touch the gold creature if you dare, y'are best be trudging: here Fane take thou it, now lets home my hearts.

Hodge. Stay, who comes here? Fane, on againe with thy maske.

Enter Lincolne, L. Maior, and feruants.

Lin. Yonders the lying varlet mockt vs fo.

L. Ma. Come hither firra.

Firke. I fir, I am firra, you meane me, do you not?

Linc. Where is my Nephew married?

Firke. Is he married? God giue him ioy, I am glad of it: they haue a faire day, and the figne is in a good Planet, Mars in Venus.

L. Ma. Villaine, thou toldst me that my daughter Rose,

This morning fhould be married at Saint Faiths, Wee haue watcht there these three houres at the least, Yet see we no such thing.

Firke. Truely I am forry fort, a Bride's a prettie thing.

Hodge. Come to the purpose, yonder's the Bride and Bridegroome you looke for I hope: though you be Lords, you are not to barre, by your authoritie, men from women, are you?

L. Ma. See fee my daughter's maskt. Lin. True, and my nephew,

To hide his guilt, counterfeits him lame.

Firke. Yea truely, God helpe the poore couple, they are lame and blind.

L. Ma. Ile ease her blindnesse.Lin. Ile his lamenesse cure.

Firke. Lye downe firs, and laugh, my fellow Raph is taken for Rowland Lacy, and Fane for mistris damaske Rose, this is all my knauerie.

L. Ma. What have I found you minion?

Lin. O base wretch,

Nay hide thy face, the horror of thy guilt Can hardly be washt off: where are thy powers? What battells haue you made? O yes I fee,

Thou foughtst with shame, and shame hath conquer'd thee;

This lamenesse with not serue.

L. Ma. Unmaske your selfe.

Lin. Lead home your daughter.

L. Ma. Take your nephew hence

L. Ma. Take your nephew hence.

Raph. Hence, fwounds, what meane you? are you mad? I hope you cannot enforce my wife from me, wher's Hammon?

L. Ma. Your wife ?
Lin. What Hammon?

Raph. Yea my wife, and therefore the proudest of you that laies hands on her first, Ile lay my Crutch crosse his pate.

Firke. To him lame Raph, here's braue fport.

Raph. Rose call you her? why her name is Fane, looke here selfe, do you know her now?

Lin. Is this your daughter?

L. Ma. No nor this your nephew: My Lord of Lincolne, we are both abuf'd, By this base crastie varlet.

Firke. Yea forfooth no varlet, forfooth no bafe, forfooth I am but meane, not craftie neither, but of the Gentle Craft.

L. Ma. Where is my daughter Rofe? where is my child?

Linc. Where is my Nephew Lacy married?

Firke. Why here is good lac'd mutton as I promift you.

Linc. Villaine Ile haue thee punisht for this wrong. Firke. Punish the Iourneyman villaine, but not the Iourneyman Shoomaker.

Enter Dodger.

Dodg. My Lord, I come to bring vnwelcome newes,

Your Nephew Lacy and your daughter Rofe, Earely this morning wedded at the Sauoy, None being prefent but the Lady Mayresse: Besides I learnt among the Officers,

The Lord Maior vowes to stand in their defence, Gainst any that shall feeke to crosse the match.

Lin. Dares Eyre the Shoomaker vphold the deed? Firk. Yes fir, Shoomakers dare fland in a womans quarrel

I warrant you, as deepe as another, and deeper too.

Dod. Befides his Grace to day dines with the Mayor.

Who on his knees humbly intends to fall, And beg a pardon for your Nephews fault.

Lin But Ile preuent him, come Sir Roger Otley, The King will do vs iustice in this cause,

How ere their hands have made them man and wife, I will difioyne the match, or lofe my life. Exeunt.

Firk. Adue Monfieur Dodger, farewell fooles, ha. ha.

Oh if they had ftaid I would have fo lamb'd them with flouts, O heart, my Codpecce-point is ready to flye in peeces every time I thinke vpon mistris Rofe, but let that passe, as my Ladie Mayresse faies.

Hodge. This matter is answerd: come Raph, home with thy wife, come my fine Shoomakers, lets to our masters the new Lord Mayor, and there swagger this Shroue Tuesday, Ile promise you wine enough, for Madge keepes the Seller.

All. Oh rare! Madge is a good wench.

Firk. And Ile promife you meat enough for fimpring Sufan keeps the Larder, Ile lead you to victuals my braue fouldiers, follow your Captaine, O braue, harke, harke.

Bell rings.

All. The Pancake bell rings, the Pancake bell, tri-lill my hearts.

Firke. O braue, oh fweet bell, O delicate Pancakes, open the doores my hearts, and shut vp the windowes, keepe in the house, let out the Pancakes, oh rare my hearts, let's march together for the honour of S. Hugh, to the great new hall in Gracious streete corner, which our master the new Lord Maior hath built.

Rafe. O the crew of good fellowes that will dine at my Lord Maiors cost to day!

Hodge. By the lord, my Lord Maior is a most braue man, how shall Prentises be bound to pray for him and the honor of the Gentlemen Shooemakers? lets feed and bee fat with my Lordes bountie.

Firke. O muficall Bell ftill; O Hodge, O my brethren; there's cheere for the heauens, venifon pasties walke vp and downe piping hot like Serieants: Beefe and brewes comes marching in drifattes, fritters and pancakes come trowling in in wheele-barrowes, hens and orenges hopping in Porters baskets, collops and egges in scuttles, and tarts and custards comes quauering in in malt shouels.

Enter more Prentifes.

All. Whoop, looke here, looke here.

Hodge. How now mad lads whither away fo fast?

Pren. Whither? why to the great new Hall, know you not why? the Lord Maior hath bidden all the prentifes in London to breakfast this morning.

All. Oh braue Shoomaker, oh braue Lord of incomprehensible good fellowship, whoo, hearke you, the Pancake-Bell rings. Cast vp Caps.

Firk. Nay more my hearts, euerie Shroue-tuesday is our yeare of Jubile: and when the Pancake-Bell rings, we are as as free as my Lord Maior, wee may shut up our shoppes and make holiday: I'le haue it cal'd Saint Hughs Holiday.

All. Agreed, agreed, Saint Hughs Holiday. Hodge. And this shall continue for euer.

All. Oh braue; come come my hearts, away, away.

Firke. O eternall credit to vs of the Gentle Craft, march faire my hearts, O rare. Exeunt.

Enter the King and his traine ouer the flage.

King. Is our Lord Maior of London fuch a gallant?

Nobleman. One of the merriest madcaps in your Land,

Your Grace will thinke when you behold the man, Hees rather a wild Ruffian than a Maior: Yet thus much Ile enfure your Majestie, In all his actions that concerne his state, He is as serious, prouident, and wise, As full of grauitie amongst the graue,

As any Maior hath been these many yeares.

King. I am with child till I behold this huffecap,
But all my doubt is when we come in presence,
His madnesse will be dasht cleane out of countenance.

Noblem. It may be fo, my Liege.

King. Which to preuent, Let fome one giue him notice 'tis our pleafure, That he put on his wonted merriment:

Set forward.

All. On afore.

Exeunt.

Enter Eyre, Hodge, Firke, Raph, and other Shoomakers, all with napkins on their shoulders.

Eyre. Come my fine Hodge, my iolly Gentlemen Shoomakers, foft, where be these Caniballes, these varlets my officers, let them all walke and wait vpon my brethren, for my meaning is, that none but Shoomakers, none but the liuerie of my Companie shall in their sattin hoods wait vpon the trencher of my Soueraigne.

Firke. O my Lord, if will be rare.

Eyre. No more Firke, come liuely, let your fellow prentifes want no cheere, let wine be plentifull as beere, and beere as water, hang these penny pinching fathers, that cram wealth in innocent Lambes skinnes, up knaues, auant, looke to my guests.

Hodge. My Lord, we are at our wits end for roome, those hundred Tables will not feast the fourth part of them.

Eyre. Then couer me those hundred Tables againe and againe, till all my iolly prentises be feasted: auoyd Hodge, runne Raph, friske about my nimble Firke, carowse mee fadome healths to the honour of the shooemakers, doe they drinke liuely Hodge? do they tickle it Firke?

Firke. Tickle it? fome of them have taken their liquor standing so long, that they can stand no longer:

but for meat they would eat it and they had it.

Eyre. Want they meat? where's this fwag-belly, this greafie kitchinsuffe cooke, call the varlet to me: want meat? Firke, Hodge, lame Rafe, runne my tall men, beleaguer the Shambles, begger all East-cheape, ferue me whole Oxen in Chargers, and let Sheepe whine vpon the tables like Pigs, for want of good fellowes to eat them. Want meat? vanish Firke, auant Hodge.

Hodge. Your Lordship mistakes my man Firke, he meanes their bellies want meat, not the boords, for they haue drunke fo much they can eat nothing.

Enter Hans, Rofe, and Wife.

Wife. Where is my Lord?
Eyre. How now Lady Maggy?

Wife. The Kings most excellent Maiestie is new come, he fends me for thy honor, one of his most worshipfull Peeres bad me tell thou must be merrie, and fo forth: but let that paffe.

Eyre. Is my Soueraigne come? vanish my tall Shoomakers, my nimble brethren, looke to my guests the prentizes: yet stay a little, how now Hans, how lookes my little Rose?

Hans. Let me request you to remember me, I know your honour easily may obtaine, Free pardon of the King for me and Rose, And reconcile me to my Uncles grace.

Eyre. Haue done my good Hans, my honest Journeyman, looke cheerily, I'le fall vpon both my knees until they be as hard as horne, but I'le get thy pardon.

Wife. Good my Lord haue a care what you fpeake to his Grace.

Eyre. Away you Islington whitepot, hence you hopper-arfe, you Barly pudding full of maggots, you broild Carbonado, auant, auant, auoyd Mephistophiles: shall Sim Eyre learne to speake of you Lady Maggy? vanish mother Mineuer-Cap, vanish, goe, trip and goe, meddle with your platters and your pisherie pasherie, your flewes and your whirligigs, goe, rub out mine ally: Sim Eyre knowes how to speake to a Pope, to Sultan Solyman, to Tamberlaine and he were here: and I shall melt, shall I droope hefore my Soueraigne? no, come my Lady Maggy, follow me Hans, about your businesse my frolike freebooters: Firke, friske about, and about, and about, for the honour of mad Simon Eyre, Lord Mayor of London.

Firke. Hey for the honour of the Shooemakers.

Exeunt.

A long flourish or two, enter the King, Nobles, Eyre, his Wife, Lacy, Rose; Lacy and Rose kneele.

King. Well Lacy, though the fact was very foule, Of your revolting from our Kingly loue,

And your owne dutie, yet we pardon you, Rife both, and Mistris Lacy, thanke my Lord Mayor

For your young bridegroom here.

Eyre. So my deare Liege, Sim Eyre and my brethren the Gentlemen Shoomakers shall set your sweet Maiesties image cheeke by iole by Saint Hugh, for this honour you have done poore Simon Eyre, I beseech your Grace pardon my rude behauiour, I am a handicrafts man, yet my heart is without craft, I would be forrie at my soule that my boldnesse should offend my King.

King. Nay, I pray thee good Lord Mayor, be euen

as merry

As if thou wert among thy Shoomakers,

It does me good to fee thee in this humour.

Eyre. Saift thou me fo my fweet Dioclesian? then humpe, Prince am I none, yet am I Princely borne, by the Lord of Ludgate my Liege, I'le be as merrie as a Pie.

King. Tell me in faith mad Eyre, how old thou art?

Eyre. My Liege, a very boy, a stripling, a yonker, you see not a white haire on my head, nor a gray in this beard, euery haire I assure thy Maiesly that stickes in this beard, Sim Eyre valews at the King of Babilons ransome, Tamar Chams beard was a rubbing brush too't, yet I'le shave it off, and stuffe tennis balls with it to please my bully King.

King. But all this while I do not know your age. Eyre. My Liege, I am fix and fifty yeare old, yet I can cry humpe, with a found heart, for the honour of Saint Hugh: marke this old wench my King, I danc't the shaking of the sheets with her fix and thirtie yeares agoe, and yet I hope to get two or three yong

Lord Mayors ere I die: I am lusty still, Sim Eyre still: care and cold lodging brings white haires. My sweet Maiesty, let care vanish, cast it vpon thy Nobles, it will make thee looke always young like Apollo, and cry humpe: Prince am I none, yet am I Princely borne.

King. Ha, ha, fay Cornewall, didst thou euer fee his like ?

Noblem. Not I my Lord.

Enter Lincolne and Lord Mayor.

King. Lincolne what newes with you?

Lin. My gracious Lord haue care vnto your felfe, For there are Traitors here.

All. Traitors, where? who?

Eyre. Traitors in my house? God forbid, where be my Officers? I'le spend my soule ere my King feele harme.

King. Where is the Traitor, Lincolne?

Lin. Here he stands.

King. Cornewall, lay hold on Lacy: Lincolne fpeake,

What canft thou lay vnto thy Nephewes charge?

Lin. This my deare Liege, your Grace to do me honour.

Heapt on the head of this degenerous boy, Defertleffe fauours, you made choyce of him, To be Commander ouer powers in France,

But he:

King. Good Lincolne, prethee pause a while, Euen in thine eyes I read what thou wouldst speake, I know how Lacy did neglect our loue, Ran himselfe deepely (in the highest degree) Into vile treason.

Lin. Is he not a Traitor?

King. Lincolne, he was, now have we pardoned him,

'Twas not a base want of true valours fire That held him out of France, but loues desire.

Lin. I will not beare his shame vpon my backe. King. Nor shalt thou Lincolne, I forgive you both.

Lin. Then good my Liege forbid the boy to wed One whose meane birth will much disgrace his bed.

King. Are they not married?

Lin. No my Liege.

Both. We are.

Shall I divorce them then? O be it farre. King.

That any hand on earth should dare vntie The facred knot knit by Gods Maiestie;

I would not for my Crowne difform their hands,

That are conjoyn'd in holy nuptiall bands:

How faift thou Lacy, woulft thou loofe thy Rofe? Hans. Not for all Indians wealth, my Soueraigne. King. But Rofe I am fure her Lacy would forgoe. Rofe. If Rofe were askt that question, shee'd fay no.

King. You heare them Lincolne.

Lin.Yea my Liege I do.

King. And canst thou finde ith heart to part these two?

Who feekes befides you to divorce thefe louers?

L. Ma. I do (my gratious Lord) I am her father. King. Sir Roger Oteley, our last Mayor I thinke.

Nob.The fame my Liege.

King. Would you offend Loues lawes? Well you shall have your wills: you fued to me To prohibit the match: Soft, let me fee,

You both are married, Lacy art thou not?

Hans. I am dread Soueraigne. King. Then vpon thy life,

I charge thee not to call this woman wife.

L. Ma. I thanke your Grace.

Rofe. O my most gracious Lord. kneele. King. Nay Rose neuer wooe me, I tell you true, Although as yet I am a Batchelor, Yet I beleeue I shall not marrie you.

Rofe. Can you divide the body from the foule,

Yet make the body liue?

King. Yea, fo profound?

I cannot Rofe, but you I must diuide, Faire maid this Bridegroome cannot be your Bride, Are you pleas'd Lincolne's Otley, are you pleas'd?

Both. Yes my Lord.

King. Then must my heart be eas'd, For credit me, my conscience liues in paine, Till these whom I diuorc'd be ioyned againe:
Lacy giue me thy hand, Rose lend me thine, Be what you would be: kisse now: so, that's fine, At night (Louers) to bed: now let me see, Which of you all missikes this harmony?

L. Ma. Will you then take from me my childe perforce?

King. Why tell me Otley shines not Lacys name, As bright in the worlds eye, as the gay beames Of any Citizen?

Lin. Yea but my gracious Lord,
I doe mislike the match farre more than he,

Her bloud is too too bafe.

King. Lincolne no more,
Dost thou not know, that loue respects no bloud?
Cares not for difference of birth or state,
The maid is young, well borne, faire, vertuous,
A worthy Bride for any Gentleman:
Besides your Nephew for her sake did stoope
To bare necessitie; and as I heare,
Forgetting honours and all Courtly pleasures,
To gaine her loue became a shoomaker:
As for the honour which he lost in France,
Thus I redeeme it: Lacy kneele thee downe,
Arise Sir Rowland Lacy: tell me now,
Tell me in earnest Otley, canst thou chide?
Seeing thy Rose a Lady and a Bride.

L. Ma. I am content with what your Grace hath done.

Linc. And I my Liege fince there's no remedy.
King. Come on then, all fhake hands, I'le haue you friends

Where there is much loue all discord ends:

What faies my mad Lord Mayor to all this loue?

Eyre. O my Liege, the honour you have done to my fine Journeyman here, Rowland Lacy, and all these favours which you have showne to me this day in my poore house, will make Simon Eyre live longer by one dozen of warme Summers more than he should.

King. Nay my mad Lord Mayor, (that shall be thy name)

If any grace of mine can length thy life, One honour more I'le doe thee, that new building, Which at thy cost in Cornehill is erected,

Shall take a name from vs, wee'le haue it call'd,

The Leaden Hall, because in digging it, You sound the lead that couereth the same.

Eyre. I thanke your Maiefty. Wife. God bleffe your grace. King. Lincolne, a word with you.

Enter Hodge, Firke, Rafe, and more Shoomakers.

Eyre. How now my mad knaues? Peace, fpeake foftly, yonder is the King.

King. With the old troope which there we keepe in pay,

We will incorporate a new fupply:

Before one Summer more passe ore my head, France shall repent England was injured,

What are all those?

Hans. All Shoomakers my Liege, Sometimes my fellowes, in their companies I liu'd as merry as an Emperor.

King. My mad Lord Mayor, are all these Shoo-makers ?

Eyre. All Shoomakers my Liege, all Gentlemen of the Gentle Craft, true Troyans, couragious Cordwainers, they all kneele to the Shrine of holy Saint Hugh.

All. God faue your Maiesty all shoomakers.

King. Mad Simon, would they any thing with vs?
Eyre. Mum, mad knaues not a word, I'le doo't I warrant you. They are all Beggers my Liege, all for themselues and I for them all, on both my knees doe intreat, that for the honour of poore Simon Eyre, and the good of his Brethren these mad knaues your Grace would vouchsafe some privilege to my new Leaden hall, that it may be lawfull for vs to buy and sell Leather there two dayes in a weeke.

King. Mad Sim, I grant your fute, you shall have

Patent

To hold two market dayes in Leaden-Hall, Mondayes and Fridays, those shall be the times: Will this content you?

All. Jefus bleffe your Grace.

Eyre. In the name of these my poore brethren Shoomakers, I most humblie thanke your Grace. But before I rise, seeing you are in the giuing veine, and we in the begging, grant Sim Eyre one boone more.

King. What is it my Lord Mayor?

Eyre. Vouchfase to tast of a poore Banquet, that's fweetly waiting for your fweet presence.

King. I shall vndoe thee Eyre only with this, (5)

Alreadie haue I beene too troublesome,

Say, haue I not?

Eyre. O my deare King, Sim Eyre cannot fay so; vpon a day of shrouing which I promist to all the merrie Prentises of London: for an't please you when I was prentise (6)

I bare the water-tankard, and my coat Sits not a whit the worfe vpon my backe: And then vpon a morning, fome mad boyes (It was Shroue-tuefday, euen as 'tis now)

Gaue me my breakfast, and I swore then by the ⁽⁵⁾ only with feafts. 1600.

stopple of my Tankard, if euer I came to be Lord Mayor of London, I would feast al the Prentises. This day my Liege I did it, and the slaues had an hundred Tables fiue times couered, they are gone home and vanisht.

Yet adde more glorie to the Gentle Trade, Tafte of Eyres Banquet, Simon's happie made.

King. I will taste of thy Banquet, and will say, I have not met more pleasure on a day; Friends of the Gentle Crast, thankes to you all, Thankes my kinde Lady Mayresse for our cheere: Come Lords a while let's reuell it at home, When all our sports, and banquetings are done Warres must right wrongs which Frenchmen have begun. THE

Pleafant Comedie of Old Fortunatus.

As it was plaied before the Queenes Maiestie this Christmas, by the Right Honourable the Earle of Nottingham, Lord high Admirall of England his Seruants, Aut Nunc Aut Nunquam.

LONDON

Printed by S. S. for William Afpley, dwelling in Paules Church-yard at the figne of the Tygers head. 1600.

The Prologue at Court: Enter two old men.

Re you then trauelling to the temple of Eliza?

2. Euen to her temple are my feeble limmes trauelling. Some cal her Pandora: fome Gloriana, fome Cynthia: fome Delphæbe, fame Aftræa: all by feuerall names to expresse feuerall loues: Yet all those names make but one celestiall body, as all those loues meete to create but one foule.

1. I am one of her owne countrie, and we adore her by the name of Eliza.

2. Bleffed name, happie countrie: Your Eliza makes your land Elizium: but what doe you offer?

I. That which all true Subjects should: when I was young, an Armed hand; now I am crooked, an vp-right heart: But what offer you?

2. That which all straungers doe: two eyes strucke blinde with admiration: Two lips (proud to found her glorie:) Two hands held vp full of prayers and praises: What not, that may expresse loue? what not, that may make her beloued?

1. How long ift fince you last beheld her?

2. A iust yeere: yet that yeere hath seemd to me but one day, because her glorie hath beene my howrely contemplation, and yet that yeere hath seemd to me more then twice seuen yeres, because so long I haue beene absent from her. Come therefore, good father, lets goe saster, least we come too late: for see, the Tapers of the night are already lighted, and stand brightly burning in their sarrie Candlestickes: See howe gloriously the Moone shines upon vs. Both kneele.

I. Peace foole: tremble, and kneele: The Moone faift thou?

Our eyes are dazled by Elizaes beames,

See (if at least thou dare see) where shee sits: This is the great Panthæon of our Goddesse, And all those faces which thine eyes thought starres, Are Nymphes attending on her deitie. Prithee begin, for I want power to speake.

2. No, no, fpeake thou, I want words to begin.

Weepes.

1. Alacke what shall I doe? com'st thou with me, And weepst now thou beholdst this Maiestie?

2. Great land-lady of hearts, pardon me.

 Blame not mine eyes, good father, in thefe teares.

2. My pure loue shines, as thine doth in thy feares: I weepe for joy to fee fo many heads Of prudent Ladies, clothed in the liuerie Of filuer-handed age, for feruing you, Whilft in your eyes youthes glory doth renue: I weepe for joy to fee the Sunne looke old, To fee the Moone mad at her often change, To fee the Starres onely by night to shine, Whilft you are still bright, still one, still divine: I weepe for ioy to fee the world decay, Yet fee Eliza flourishing like May: O pardon me your Pilgrim, I haue meafurd Many a mile to find you: and haue brought, Old Fortunatus and his family, With other Cipnots (my poore countrie men) To pay a whole yeeres tribute: O vouchfafe, Dread Queene of Fayries, with your gracious eyes, T'accept theirs and our humble facrifice.

1. Now ile beg for thee too: and yet I need not: Her facred hand hath euermore beene knowne, As foone held out to straungers as her owne.

2. Thou doeft incourage me: He fetch them in, They have no princely gifts, we are all poore, Our offrings are true hearts, who can wish more?

Exeunt.

THE PROLOGUE.

OF Loues sweete war, our timerous Muse doth sing, And to the bosome of each gentle deare, Offence her Artles tunes, borne on the wing Of sacred Poesy. A benumming seare, (That your nice soules, cloyd with dilicious sounds, Will loath her lowly notes) makes her pull in Her fainting pineons, and her spirit consounds Before the weake voice of her song begin. Yet since within the circle of each eye, (Being like so many Suns in his round Sphere) No wrinckle yet is seene, sheele dare to slie, Borne vp with hopes, that as you oft do reare With your saire hands, those who would els sinke down,

So fome will deigne to fmile, where all might frown:
And for this fmal Circumference must stand,
For the imagind Sur-face of much land,
Of many kingdomes, and fince many a mile,
Should here be measurd out: our muse intreats,
Your thoughts to helpe poore Art, and to allow,
That I may serue as Chorus to her scences,
She begs your pardon, for sheele send one foorth,
Not when the lawes of Poesy doe call,
But as the storie needes, your gracious eye
Giues life to Fortunatus historie.

THE COMEDIE OF

Olde Fortunatus.

Enter Fortunatus meanely attired, hee walkes ere he fpeake once or twice about cracking Nuts.

Fortunatus.

O, ho, ho, ho, ho. Eccho within. Ho, ho, ho, ho. Fortun. There boy.

Eccho. There boy.

Fort. And thou bee'st a goodfellow, tel me how cal'st this wood.

Eccho. This wood.

Fort. I this wood, & which is my best way out.

Eccho. Best way out.

Fort. Ha, ha, ha, thats true, my best way out, is my best way out, but how that out will come in, by this Maggot I know not, I see by this we are all wormes meate: well, I am very poore and verie patient, Patience is a vertue: would I were not vertuous, thats to say, not poore, but full of vice, (thats to say, ful of chinckes) Ha, ha, so I am, for I am so full of chinckes, that a Horse with one eye may looke through and through me, I haue sighed long, and that makes me windie: I haue fasted long, and that makes me chast, marie I have praied little, and that makes mee I still daunce in this coniuring circle: I haue wandred long, and that makes me wearie; but for my wearineffe, anon Ile lie down, in fleade of fashing ile feede vpon Nuts, and in flead of fighing will laugh and bee leane, Sirra, Eccho.

Eccho. Sirra Eccho.
Fort. Heres a Nut.
Eccho. Heres a Nut.
Fort. Cracke it
Eccho. Cracke it.
Fort. Hang thy felfe.

Eccho. Hang thy felfe. Fort. Th'art a knaue, a knaue.

Eccho. A knaue, a knaue. Fort. Ha, ha, ha, ha. Eccho. Ha, ha, ha, ha.

Fortunat. Why fo, two fooles laugh at one another, I at my tittle tattle gammer eccho, and shee at Shortly there will creepe out in print fome filthie booke of the old hoarie wandring Knight, meaning me: would I were that booke, for then I should be fure to creepe out from hence: I should bee a good fouldiour, for I trauerfe my ground rarely, marrie I fee neither enemie nor friends, but Popiniayes, and Squirrels, and Apes, and Owles, and Dawes, and Wagtailes, and the fpite is that none of these graffe-eaters can fpeake my language, but this foole that mockes me. and fweares to have the last word (in spite of my teeth) I, and shee shall have it because shee is a woman, which kind of cattell are indeede all Eccho, nothing but tongue, and are like the great bell of S. Michaels in Cyprus, that keepes most rumbling when men would most fleepe. Eccho, a poxe on thee for mocking me.

Eccho. A poxe on thee for mocking me.

Fortunat. Why fo, Snip fnap, this warre is at an end, but this wildernesse is world without end, to see how trauell can transforme: my teeth are turn'd into Nutcrackers, a thousand to one I breake out shortly, for I am full of nothing, but waxing kernels, my tongue fpeakes no language but an Almond for Parrat, and cracke me this Nut: If I hop three daies more vp and downe this cage of Coockooes nefts, I shall turne wilde man fure, and be hyred to throw Squibs among the Cominaltie vpon some terrible day. In the meane time to tell truth here will I lie. Farwell soole.

Eccho. Farwell foole.

Fort. Are not these comfortable words to a wise man? All haile Signior tree, by your leaue ile sleepe vnder your leaues, I pray bow to me, and ile bend to you, for your backe and my browes must, I doubt, haue a game or two at Noddie erre I wake againe: downe great heart, downe. Hey, ho, well, well.

He lyes downe and fleepes: Enter a Gardiner, a Smith, a Monke, a Shepheard all crown'd, a Nimph with a Globe, another with Fortunes wheele, then Fortune: After her fowre Kings with broken Crownes and Scepters, chained in filuer Giues and led by her. The foremost come out finging. Fortune takes her Chaire, the Kings lying at her feete, shee treading on them as shee goes up.

The Song.

Fortune fmiles, cry holyday, Dimples on her cheekes doe dwell, Fortune frownes, cry wellada, Her loue is heauen, her hate is hell: Since heauen and hell obey her power, Tremble when her eyes doe lowre, Since heauen and hell her power obey, When shee smiles, crie holy day.

Holy-day with ioy we cry And bend, and bend and merily, Sing Hymnes to Fortunes deitie, Sing Hymnes to Fortunes deitie. All. Let vs fing, merrily, merrily, merrily,
With our fong let heauen refound,
Fortunes hands our heads haue crown'd,
Let vs fing merrily, merrily, merrily.

 King. Accurfed Queene of chaunce, what had we done,

Who having fometimes like young Phaetons, Ryd in the burnisht Charriot of the Sun, And sometimes beene thy minions, when thy fingers Weau'd wanton love-nets in our curled hayre, And with sweete iugling kisses warm'd our cheekes: Oh how have we offended thy proud eyes, That thus we should be spurnd and trod vpon, Whilst those insected limmes of the sicke world, Are fixt by thee for starres in that bright Sphere, Wherein our Sunne like Radiance did appeare.

All the Kings.

Accurfed Queene of chaunce, damn'd forcereffe.

The rest.

Most powr'full Queene of chaunce dread foueraignnesse.

Fort. No more: curse on: your cries to me are Musicke,

And fill the facred roundure of mine eares, With tunes more fweete then mouing of the Spheres: Curfe on: on our celeftiall browes doe fit

Un-numbred fmiles, which then leaps from their throne,

When they fee Peafants daunce and Monarches groane.

Behold you not this Globe, this golden bowle, This toy cal'd worlde at our Imperiall feete? This world is Fortunes ball wherewith fhe fports. Sometimes I strike it vp into the ayre, And then create I Emperours and kings

Sometimes I fpurne it: at which fpurne crawles out That wild beast multitude: curse on you fooles, Tis I that tumble Princes from their thrones, And gild false browes with glittering diadems, Tis I that tread on neckes of Conquerours, And when like Semi-gods they have beene drawne, In Iuorie Charriots to the capitoll, Circled about with wonder of all eyes, The shouts of euery tongue, loue of all hearts, Being fwolne with their owne greatnesse, I haue prickt The bladder of their pride, and made them die, As water bubbles (without memorie) I thrust base cowards into Honours chaire, Whilft the true spirited Souldiour stands by Bare headed, and all bare, whilft at his skarres They skoffe, that nere durst view the face of warres. I fet an Ideots cap on vertues head, Turne learning out of doores, clothe wit in ragges, And paint ten thousand Images of Loame, In gawdie filken colours: on the backes Of Mules and Affes I make affes ride, Onely for fport, to fee the Apish world Worship such beasts with sound idolatrie. This Fortune does, and when this is done, She fits and fmiles to heare fome curfe her name, And fome with adoration crowne her fame.

Monck. True center of this wide circumference, Sacred commaundresse of the destinies, Our tongues shall onely sownd thy excellence.

The reft. Thy excellence our tongues shall onely found.

The fecond King.

Thou painted strumpet, that with honied smiles, Openess the gates of heauen and criest, Come in, Whose glories being seene, thou with one frowne, (In pride) lower then hell tumblest vs downe.

All Kings. Euer for euer wil we banne thy name.

Fort. How fweete your howlings rellish in mine eares?

She comes downe.

Stand by; now rife, behold, here lies a wretch, To vex your foules, this begger ile aduaunce Beyond the fway of thought, take infiruments, And let the raptures of choice Harmonie, Through the hollow windings of his eare, Musicke a while, and he waketh.

Carrie their facred founds, & wake each fence, To fland amaz'd at our bright Eminence.

Fortunat. Oh, how am I transported? Is this earth?

Or bleft Elizium?

Fortune. Fortunatus, rise.

Fort. Dread Goddeffe, how should such a wretch as I

Be knowne to fuch a glorious deitie? Oh pardon me: for to this place I come, Lead by my fate, not folly; in this wood With wearie forrow haue I wandered, And three times feene the fweating Sun take reft, And three times franticke Cynthia naked ride, About the rushie high-waies of the skies Stucke full of burning Starres, which lent her light To court her Negro paramour grim night.

Fortune. This trauell now expires: yet from this circle,

Where I and these with fairie troopes abide, Thou canst not stir, unlesse I be thy guide. I the worlds Empresse am Fortune my name, This hand hath written in thicke leaues of steele An euerlasting booke of changelesse Fate, Shewing whoe's happie, who vnfortunate.

Fort. If euerie name (dread Queene) be there writ down,

I am fure mine flands in Caracters of blacke, Though happines her felfe lie in my name, I am forrowes heire, and eldest sonne to shame. The Kings. No, we are fons to shame, and forrowes heires.

Fortune. Thou shalt be one of Fortunes minions: Behold these foure chain'd like Tartarian slaues, These I created Emperours and Kings, And these are now my basest vnderlings: This fometimes was a Germane Emperour, Henry the fift, who being first depof'd, Was after thrust into a dungeon, And thus in filuer chaines shall rot to death. This Frederick Barbaroffa Emperour Of Almaine once: but by Pope Alexander Now fpurn'd and trod on when he takes his horse, And in these setters shall he die his slaue. This wretch once wore the diademe of Fraunce, (Lewes the meeke,) but through his childrens pride, Thus have I caused him to be famished. Here stands the verie soule of miserie Poore Baiazet old Turkish Emperour, And once the greatest Monarch in the East; Fortune her felfe is faid to view thy fall, And grieues to fee thee glad to licke vp crommes At the proud feete of that great Scithian fwaine, Fortunes best minion, warlike Tamberlaine: Yet must thou in a cage of Iron be drawne In triumph at his heeles, and there in griefe Dash out thy braines. The third King. Oh miserable me.

Fortune. No teares can melt the heart of destinie: These haue I ruin'd and exalted those: These hands haue conquerd Spaine, these browes fill vp

The golden circle of rich Portugall.
Viriat a Monarch now, but borne a shepherd.
This Primislaus (a Bohemian king)
Last day a Carter: this Monke Gregorie
Now lifted to the Papall dignitie,
Wretches, why gnaw you not your fingers off,
And teare your tongues out, seeing your selues trod

downe,

And this Duch Botcher wearing Munsters crowne? John Leyden borne in Holland poore and base, Now rich in Emperie and Fortunes grace. As these I haue aduanc'd, so will I thee.

Six gifts I fpend vpon mortalitie,

Wisedome, strength, health, beautie, long life, and riches,

Out of my bountie: one of these is thine, Choose then which likes thee best.

Fortunat. Oh most divine:

Giue me but leaue to borrow wonders eye, To looke (amaz'd) at thy bright maiestie, Wifedome, firength, health, beautie, long life and riches.

Fortune. Before thy foule (at this deepe Lotterie) Draw foorth her prize, ordain'd by destinie, Know that heres no recanting a first choice. Choose then discreetly (for the lawes of Fate, Being grauen in steele, must stand inuiolate.)

Fortunat. Daughters of Joue and the vnblemisht

Most righteous Parce, guide my Genius right,

Wifedome, strength, health, beautie, long life, and riches.

Fortune. Staie, Fortunatus, once more heare me fpeake,

If thou kiffe wifedomes cheeke and make her thine, Sheele breath into thy lips divinitie, And thou (like Phebus) shalt speake Oracle, Thy heaven-inspired soule, on wifedomes wings, Shall slie vp to the Parliament of Joue, And read the Statutes of eternitie, And fee whats past, and learne what is to come. If thou lay claime to strength, Armies shall quake, To see thee frowne: as Kings at mine doe lie, So shall thy seete trample on Emperie; Make Health thine obiect, thou shall be strong proofe, Gainst the deepe fearching darts of surfetting, Be euer merrie, euer reuelling.

Wish but for beautie, and within thine eyes, Two naked Cupids amoroufly shall fwim, And on thy cheekes ile mixe fuch white and red, That Joue shall turne away young Ganimede, And with immortall armes shall circle thee. Are thy defires long life? thy vitall thread Shal be firetcht out, thou shalt behold the chaunge Of Monarchies, and fee those children die, Whose great great Graundsires now in cradles lie. If through Golds facred hunger thou dost pine, Those gilded wantons which in swarmes doe runne, To warme their flender bodies in the funne, Shall fland for number of those golden piles, Which in rich pride shall swell before thy feete, As those are; so shall these be infinite. Awaken then thy foules best faculties, And gladly kiffe this bounteous hand of Fate. Which striues to blesse thy name of Fortunate.

Th' other. Old man, sheele crowne thee with felicitie.

Fort. Oh, whither am I wrap't beyond my felfe? More violent conflicts fight in e'rie thought, Than his whose fatall choice Troyes downfall wrought. Shall I contract my felfe to wifedomes loue? Then I lofe riches: And a wifeman poore, Is like a facred booke thats neuer read. To himselfe he liues, and to all els seemes dead. This age thinks better of a gilded foole, Then of a threedbare Saint in wifedomes schoole. I will be ftrong: then I refuse long life, And though mine arme should conquer twentie worlds, Theres a leane fellow beates all conquerours: The greatest strength expires with losse of breath. The mightiest (in one minute) stoope to death. Then take long life, or Health: should I doe so, I might grow vgly, and that tedious Scrole Of Months and yeeres, much miferie may enrole:

Therefore ile beg for beautie; yet I will not, That fairest cheeke hath oftentimes a foule Leaprous as finne it felfe; then hell more foule. The wisedome of this world is Idiotisme, Strength a weake reede: Health sicknesse enemie. (And it at length will have the victorie.) Beautie is but a painting, and long life Is a long iorney in December gon, Tedious and full of tribulation. Therefore dread facred Empresse make me rich, Kneele downe.

My choice is flore of gold; the rich are wife. He that vpon his backe rich garments weares, Is wife, though on his head grow Midas eares. Gold is the strength, the sinnewes of the world, The Health, the foule, the beautie most divine, A maske of Gold hides all deformities; Gold is heavens phisicke, lifes restorative; Oh therefore make me rich: Not as the wretch, That onely ferues leane banquets to his eye, Has Gold, yet starues: is famisht in his store: No, let me euer foend, be neuer poore.

Thy latest words confine thy destinie, Thou shalt spend euer, and be neuer poore: For proofe receive this purfe: with it this vertue, Still when thou thrusts thy hand into the same, Thou shalt draw foorth ten pieces of bright gold, Currant in any Realme where then thou breatheft; If thou can'ft dribble out the Sea by drops, Then shalt thou want: but that can nere be don,

Nor this grow emptie.

Fortanat. Thankes, great deitie.

The vertue ends when thou and thy fonnes end.

This path leades thee to Cyprus, get thee hence; Farewel, vaine couetous foole, thou wilt repent, That for the loue of droffe thou haft despifed Wifedomes divine embrace, fhe would have borne thee On the rich wings of immortalitie;

But now goe dwell with cares and quickly die.

The Kings. We dwell with cares, yet cannot quickly die.

Exeunt all finging, manet Fortunatus.

Fortunat. But now goe dwell with cares and quickly die? How quickly? if I die to morrow, ile be merrie to day: if next day, ile be merrie to morrow: goe dwell with cares? Where dwels care? Hum ha, in what house dwels care, that I may choose an honester neighbor? In princes courts? No, among faire Ladies, neither, theres no care dwels with them: but care how to be most gallant. Among gallants Fie, fie, no: care is afraid fure of a guilt Rapier, the fent of Muske is her prison, Tobacco choakes her, rich attire presseth her to death. Princes, faire Ladies and gallants, haue amongst you then, for this wet eide wench Care dwelles with wretches: they are wretches that feele want, I shall feele none if I be neuer poore, therefore care I casheire you my companie. I wonder what blind Gossip this minx is that is fo prodigall, the should be a good one by her open dealing: her name's Fortune: Its no matter what she is, so she does as she saies. Thou shalt fpend euer, and bee neuer poore: Masse, yet I feele nothing here to make mee rich, heres no fweete Musicke with her filuer found. Trie deeper: ho God be here: Ha, ha, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, good, iust ten. Its gold sure, its so heauie, trie againe, 1, 2, &c. Good againe, iust ten, and iust ten. Ha, ha, ha, this is rare: a leather mint, admirable: an Indian mine in a Lambs skinne, miraculous: Ile fill three or fowre bagges full for my fonnes, but keepe this for my felfe. If that leane tawnie face Tobacconift death, that turnes all into fmoke, must turne me fo quickly into ashes, yet I will not mourne in ashes, but in Musicke, hey old lad be merrie. Heres riches, wifdome, strength, health, beautie, and long life. (If I die not quickly, fweete purse I kisse thee, Fortune, I adore thee Care, I despise thee, death, I desie thee.

Enter Ampedo, Shaddow after him, both fad: Andolocia after them.

Andelo. S'hart, why how now: two knights of the

? flog

Shad. I, master, and wee are both forsworne, as all fuch woodden knights be, for we both tooke an oath (mary it was not corporall) you may see by our cheekes, that we would not fast twentie sowre houres to amend, and we have tasted no meate since the clocke told two dozen.

Andel. That lackes not much of twentie fowre, but I wonder when that halfe faced Moone of thine wil be at the ful.

Sha. The next quarter, not this, when the figne is in Taurus.

Andel. Ho thats to fay, when thou eat'ft bull biefe. But Shadow, what day is to day?

Shad. Fasting day.

Andel. What day was yester-day?

Shad. Fasting day too.

Andel. Will to morrow be fo too?

Shad. I, and next day too.

Andel. That will be rare, you flaue:

For a leane dyet makes a fat wit.

Shad. I had rather be a foole & weare a fat paire of cheekes.

Andel. Now am I prowder of this pouertie, which I know is mine owne, then a wayting gentlewoman is, of a frizled groatefworth of haire, that neuer grewe on her head: Sirrha Shadow, now we can all three fweare like puritans at one bare word: this want makes vs like good bowlers, we are able to rub out and shift in euery place.

Shad. Thats not fo, we have shifted our selves in no place this three moneths: marrie, we rub out in every corner, but here followes no amendement either of life or of liuerie.

Andel. Why, brother Ampedo, art thou not yet tir'd with riding post? Come, come, light from this logger-headed Jade, and walke afoote, and talke with your poore friends.

Shad. Nay by my troth he is like me: if his belly be emptie, his heart is full.

Andelo. The famine of Gold gnawes his couetous flomacke, more then the want of good victuals: Thou haft lookt very deuilifhly euer fince the good Angel left thee: come, come, leaue this broad brim fashions, because the world frownes vpon thee, wilt not thou smile vpon vs?

Ampe. Did but the bitternes of mine owne fortunes

Infect my taste, I could paint ore my cheekes With ruddy-coloured smiles: tis not the want Of costly dyet or desire of gold, Inforce this rupture in my wounded brest. Oh no, our Father (if he liue) doth lie Under the Iron soote of miserie, And (as a Doue gript in a Faulcons claw) There pant'th for life being most assured that Brother, for him my soule thus languisheth.

Shad. Tis not for my old Master that I languish. Amped. I am not enamoured of this painted Idoll, This strumpet world; for her most beautious lookes Are poysned baits, hung vpon golden hookes. When fooles doe swim in wealth, her Cynthian beames Will wantonly daunce on the siluer streames: But when this squinteide age sees vertue poore, And by a little sparke sits shiuering, Begging at all, relieu'd at no mans doore, She smiles on her (as the Sunne shines on fire) To kill that little heate, and with her frowne Is proud, that she can treade poore vertue downe: Therefore her wrinckled brow makes not mine sowre, Her gifts are toyes, and I deride her power.

Shad. Tis not the crab-tree fac'd world neither that makes mine fowre.

Andelo. Her gifts toyes: wel brother vertue, we haue let flip the ripe plucking of those toyes so long, that wee florish like Apple trees in September, (which hauing the falling ficknes) beare neither fruit nor leaues.

Shad. Nay by my troth, master, none flourish in these withering times, but Auncient bearers and trumpettors.

Andelo. Shaddow, when thou prouest a substance, then the tree of vertue and honestie, and such fruit of heaven shall florish vpon earth.

Shad. True, or when the Sunne shines at midnight, or women flie, and yet they are light enough.

Andelo. Twas neuer merie world with vs, fince purfes and bags were inuented, for now men fet lime twigges to catch wealth: And gold, which ryfeth like the funne out of the East Indies, to shine vpon euery one, is like a Conie taken napping in a Purfenet, and suffers his glistring yellow face deitie to be lapt vp in Lambskins, as if the innocencie of those leather prifons, should dispence with the Cheuerill consciences of the Iron harted Jaylers.

Shad. Snudges may well be called Jaylers: for if a poore wretch steale but into a debt of tenne pound, they leade him straight to execution.

Andel. Doth it not vex thee, Shaddow, to stalke vp and downe Cyprus, and to meete the out-side of a man, lapt all in Damaske, his head and beard as white as milke, onely with coniuring in the snowie circles of the field Argent, and his nose as red as Scarlet, onely with kissing the ruddie lippes of Angels, and such an Image to weare on his thumbe, three mens liuings in the shape of a feale Ring, whilst my brother vertue here, Shad. And you his brother Vice.

Andel. Most true, my little leane Iniquitie, whilst wee three, if we should starue, cannot borrow sine shillings of him neither in word nor deede: does not this vexe thee, Shaddow?

Shad. Not me; it vexes me no more to fee fuch a picture, then to fee an Affe laden with riches, because I know when hee can beare no longer, he must leave his burthen to some other beast.

Andel Art not thou mad, to fee money on Goldfmithes stalles, and none in our purses?

Shad. It mads not me, I thanke the destinies.

Andel. By my pouertie, and thats but a threed-bare oath, I am more then mad, to fee filkes and veluets, lie crowding together in Mercers shops, as in prisons, onely for feare of the smell of waxe (they cannot abide to see a man made out of waxe) for these Satten commodities haue such smooth consciences, that theile haue no man giue his word for them, or stand bownd for their comming foorth, but yow to lie till they rot in those shop Counters, except Monsieur money baile them. Shaddow, I am out of my little wits to fee this.

Shad. So is not Shaddow: I am out of my wits, to fee fat gluttons feede all day long, whilft I that am leane, fast every day: I am out of my wits, to fee our Famagosta fooles, turne halfe a shop of wares into a suite of gay apparrell, onely to make other Ideots laugh, and wife men to crie who's the foole now? I am mad, to see Souldiours beg, and cowards braue: I am mad, to see Schollers in the Brokers shop, and Dunces in the Mercers: I am mad, to see men that have no more sashion in them then poore Shaddow, yet must leape thrice a day into three orders of sashions: I am mad, to see many things, but horne-mad, that my mouth feeles nothing.

Andel. Why, now shaddow, I see thou hast a substance: I am glad to see thee thus mad.

Amped. The fonnes of Fortunatus had not wont,

Thus to repine at others happines:

But fooles haue alwaies this loofe garment wore, Being poore themfelues, they wish all others poore, Fie, brother Andelocia, hate this madnes, Turne your eyes inward, and behold your foule,

That wants more then your body: burnish that

With glittering Vertue: and make Ideots grieue, To fee your beautious mind in wifedome shine, As you at their rich pouertie repine.

Enter Fortunatus gallant.

And. Peace, good vertue, Shad. here comes another Shadow.

Shad. It should be a Camelion: for he is all in colours.

Amp. Oh, tis my Father. With these teares of ioye,

My loue and duetie greete your faire returne:
A double gladneffe hath refresht my foule;

A double gladnesse hath refresht my soule; One, that you liue, and one, to see your fate Lookes freshly howsoeuer poore in state.

And. My father Fortunatus, & thus braue? Sha. Tis no wonder to fee a man braue, but a wonder how he comes braue.

Fortunat. Deere Andelocia and fonne Ampedo, And my poore feruant Shaddow: plume your fpirits With light-wingd mirth: for Fortunatus hand Can now powre golden showers into their laps, That fometimes scorn'd him for his want of gold. Boyes, I am rich, and you shall ne're be poore; Weare gold, spend gold, we all in gold will feede,

Now is your father Fortunate indeede.

Andel. Father, be not angrie, if I fet open the windowes of my mind: I doubt for all your bragging, you'le prooue like most of our gallants in Famagosta, that haue a rich outside, & a beggerly inside, and like Mules weare gay trappings, and good Veluet sooteclothes on their backes, yet champe on the Iron bitte of penurie, I meane, want coyne: You gild our eares with a talke of Gold, but I pray dazell our eyes with the maiestie of it.

Fort. First will I wake your fences with the found

Of golds fweete muficke: tell me what you heare?

Amp. Belieue me, Sir, I heare not any thing.

Andel. Ha, ha, ha. S'hart, I thought as much, if I heare any gingling, but of the purse strings that goe slip, slap, slip, slap, slip, slap, would I were turnd into a slip-slap, and solde to the Butchers.

Fort. Shaddow: Ile trie thine eares, harke, dost rattle?

Shad. Yes, like three blew Beanes in a blew bladder, rattle bladder, rattle: your purfe is like my bellie, th'ones without money, th'other without meate.

Fort. Bid your eyes blame the error of your eares:

You mifbeleeuing Pagans, fee, heres gold, Ten golden pieces: take them, Ampedo. Hold, Andelocia, here are ten for thee.

Ampe. Shaddow, theres one for thee, prouide thee foode.

Fort. Stay, boy: hold, Shad. here are ten for thee. Shad. Ten master? then defiaunce to Fortune, & a Fig for famine.

Fort. Now tell me, wags, hath my purse gold or no ?

Andel. Wee the wags haue gold, Father; but I thinke theres not one Angell more wagging in this facred Temple; why this is rare: Shaddow, fiue will ferue thy turne, give me th' other five.

Shad. Nay, foft master, liberalitie dyed long agoe: I fee some rich beggers are neuer well, but when they be crauing: My ten Duckets are like my ten singers, they will not ieopard a ioynt for you: I am yours, and these are mine if I part from them, I shall neuer haue part of them.

Amp. Father, if heaven have bleft you once againe,

Let not an open hand disperse that store;

Which gone, lifes gone; for all treade downe the poore.

Fort. Peace, Ampedo: talke not of pouertie, Disdaine, my boyes, to kisse the tawnie cheekes Of leane necessitie: make not inquirie, How I came rich: I am rich, let that suffice;

There are fowre leathern bags truft full of gold: Those spent, ile fill you more: goe lads, be gallant: Shine in the streetes of Cyprus like two starres, And make them bow their knees that once did fpurne

For to effect fuch wonders gold can turne you: Braue it in Famagosta, or els where, Ile trauell to the Turkish Emperour: And then ile reuell it with Prester John, Or banquet with great Cham of Tartarie, And trie what frolicke Court the Souldan keepes; Ile leaue you presently: teare off these rags. Glitter, my boyes, like Angels, that the world May (whilft our life in pleafures circle romes) Wonder at Fortunatus and his fonnes.

Come, Shaddow: now wee'le feast it Andel. royally.

Shad. Doe, master, but take heede of beggerie.

Musick founds: Enter vice with a gilded face, and hornes on her head: her garments long, painted before with filuer halfe moones, increasing by litle and litle, till they come to the full: in the midst of them in Capitall letters this written: CRESCIT EVNDO: her garment painted behind with fooles faces & divels heads: and underneath it in the midst this written, Ha, Ha, He: she and others wearing gilded vifards, and attirde like deuils, bring out a faire tree of Gold with apples on it: after her comes Vertue, a coxecombe on her head, all in white before, and this written about the middle: Sibi fapit: her attire behind painted with Crownes, and Laurell garlands, fluck full of flarres, held out by hands, thrust out of bright cloudes, and among them this written: Dominabitur aftris: Shee and other Nimphes all in white with coxecombs on their heads, bring a tree with greene and withered leaves mingled together, and little fruit on it: after her Fortune, one bearing her Wheele, another her Globe; and last, the Priest.

Fortune. You ministers of Vertue, Vice, and Fortune,

Teare off this vpper garment of the earth, And in her naked bosome slicke these trees.

Vertue. How many kingdomes haue I measured, Onely to find a Climat, apt to cherish These withering braunches? but no ground can prooue So happie; (ay mee) none doe vertue loue; Ile trie this soyle; if here I like wife sade, To heauen ile slie, from whence I tooke my birth, And tel the Gods, I am banisht from the earth.

Vice. Vertue, I am fworne thy foe: if there thou plant,

Here opposite to thine, my tree shall florish, And (as the running wood-bind) spread her armes, To choke thy withering boughes in their embrace, Ile driue thee from this world: were Vertue sled, Vice as an Angell should be honoured.

Fort. Seruants of this bright diuell & and that poore Saint,

Applie your taske whilst you are labouring:
To make your paines feeme short our priest shall sing.

The fong: whilft he fings, the rest fet the trees into the earth.

Priefl, Vertues braunches wither, vertue pines,
O pittie, pittie, and alacke the time,
Vice doth flourish, Vice in glorie shines,
Her gilded boughs aboue the Cedar clime,
Vice hath golden cheekes, O pittie, pittie,
She in euery land doth monarchize.
Vertue is exilde from euery Cittie,
Vertue is a foole, Vice onely wise.
O pittie, pittie, Vertue weeping dies.
Vice laughs to see her faint (alacke the time)
This sinckes: with painted wings the other slies,

Alacke that beft should fall, and bad should clime,

O pittie, pittie, pittie, mourne, not fing, Vice is a Saint, Vertue an vnderling. Vice doth florish, Vice in glorie shines, Vertues braunches wither, Vertue pines.

Fort. Florish or wither, Fortune cares not which, In eithers fall or height our Eminence Shines equal to the Sunne: the Queene of chance Both vertuous foules and vicious doth aduance. These shadowes of your selues shall (like your selues,) Striue to make men enamoured of their beauties, This groue shall be our temple; and henceforth Be consecrated to our deities.

Vert. How few will come and kneel at vertues fhrine?

Vice. This contents vertue, that fhe is cal'd diuine.
Fort. Poore Vertue, Fortune grieues to fee thy lookes

Want cunning to intice: Why hang these leaues, As loose as Autumnes haire (which euery wind, In mockerie blowes from his rotten browes?) Why like a drunkard art thou pointed at? Why is this Motley-scorne set on thy head? Why stands thy Court wide open, but none in it? Why are the Christall pauements of thy temple, Not worne, not trod vpon? All is for this, Because thy pride is to weare base attire, Because thine eyes stame not with amorous fire.

Vert. Vertue is faireft in a poore aray. Fort. Poore foole, tis not this badge of puritie, Nor Sibi fapit, (painted on thy breaft,) Allures mortalitie to feeke thy loue.

No: now the great wheele of thy Globe hath runne, And met his first point of creation.

On Crutches went this world but yester-day, Now it lies bed-rid, and is growne so old, That its growne young; for tis a child againe, A childish soule it hath, tis a meere soole:

And tooles and children are well pleased with toyes: So must this world, with shewes it must be pleased, Then Vertue, buy a golden face like Vice, And hang thy bosome full of siluer Moones, To tell the credulous world, As those increase, As the bright Moone swelles in her pearled Spheare, So wealth and pleasures them to heaven shall reare.

Vert. Vertue abhorres to weare a borrowed face. Vice. Why haft thou borrowed then that Idiots hood?

Vert. Fooles plac'd it on my head that knew me not,

And I am proud to weare the fcorne of fooles.

Fort. Mourne in that pride & die, all the world hates thee.

Vert. Not all, ile wander once more through the world:

Wifedome I know hath with her bleffed wings Fled to fome bosome: if I meete that breft, There ile erect my temple, and there reft. Fortune nor Vice, shall then ere haue the power, (By their loose eyes) to intice my Paramour; Then will I cast off this deformitie, And shine in glorie, and triumph to see Your conquerd at my feete, that tread on me.

Fort. Vertue begins to quarrell: Vice, farewell.
Vice. Stay, Fortune, whilft within this Groue we dwel,

If my Angelicall and Saint-like forme
Can win fome amorous foole to wanton here,
And taste the fruite of this alluring tree,
Thus shall his fawcie browes adorned bee,
To make vs laugh.

Makes hornes.

Fort. It will be rare: adiew,

Ver. Foule hel-bred fiend, Vertue shall striue with you,

If any be enamoured of thine eyes, Their loue must needes beget deformities. Men are transformed to beastes, feasting with sinne; But if (in fpite of thee) their foules I winne, To tafte this fruite, though thou difguife their head, Their shapes shall be re-metamorphosed.

Vice. I dare thee doe thy worft.

Ver. My best ile trie.

Fort. Fortune shall iudge who winnes the soue-raigntie. Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

The world to the circumference of heaven, Chorus. Is as a fmall point in Geometrie, Whose greatnes is so little, that a lesse Cannot be made: into that narrow roome, Your quicke imaginations we must charme, To turne that world: and (turn'd) againe to part it Into large kingdomes, and within one moment, To carrie Fortunatus on the wings Of active thought, many a thousand miles. Suppose then fince you last beheld him here, That you have faild with him vpon the feas, And leapt with him vpon the Afian shores, Beene feasted with him in the Tartars palace, And all the Courts of each Barbarian kings: From whence (being cald by fome vnluckie starre,) (For happines neuer continues long,) Helpe me to bring him backe to Arragon: Where for his pride (Riches make all men proude) On flight quarrell, by a couetous Earle, Fortunes deere minion is imprisoned; There thinke you fee him fit with folded armes, Teares dropping downe his cheekes, his white haires

His legges in rustie fetters, and his tongue Bitterly cursing that his fquint-eide foule Did not make choice of wisedomes facred loue, Fortune (to triumph in vnconstancie,) From prison bailes him, (libertie is wild) For being set free, he like a lustie Eagle, Cuts with his ventrous seathers through the skie, And lights not till he find the Turkish court. Thither transport your eyes, and there behold him, Reuelling with the Emperour of the East, From whence (through feare) for safegard of his life, (Flying into the armes of vgly night,) Suppose you see him brought to Babylon; And that the Sunne (clothed all in fire) hath rid One quarter of his hot celestiall way With the bright morning, and that in this instant, He and the Soldan meete, but what they say, Listen you, the talke of tkings none dare bewray.

Exit.

Enter the Souldan, his Noblemen, and Fortunatus.

Sould. Art thou that Fortunatus, whose great name, Being carried in the Charriot of the winds, Hast fild the Courts of all our Asian kings, With loue and enuie, whose deere presence tyes The eyes of admiration to thine eyes? Art thou that Joue that in a shower of gold Appearedst before the Turkish Emperour?

Fortunat. I am that Fortunatus, mightie Souldan. Sould. Where is that purse which threw abroad fuch treafure?

Fort. I gaue it to the Turkish Soliman, A second I bestowed on Prester Iohn, A third the great Tartarian Cham received: For with these Monarches haue I banquetted, And rid with them in triumph through their courts, In christall Charriots drawne by Unicornes. England, Fraunce, Spaine, and welthy Belgia, And all the rest of Europs blessed daughters, Haue made my couetous eye rich in th' embrace Of their celessiall beauties; now I come, To see the glorie of faire Babylon. Is Fortunatus wel-come to the Soldan? For I am like the Sunne, if Ioue once chide, My gilded browes from amorous heaven I hide.

Sould. Most welcome, and most happie are mine armes

In circling fuch an earthly deitie; But will not Fortunatus make me bleffed By fight of fuch a purfe?

Fort. Ere I depart,

The Soldan shall receive one at my hands:
For I must spend some time in framing it,
And then some time to breathe that vertuous spirit
Into the heart thereof, all which is don
By a most sacred inspiration.

Sould. Wel-come, most welcome to the Soldans court;

Stay here and be the king of Babylon, Stay here, and I will more amaze thine eyes With wondrous fights, then can all Afia: Behold yon towre, there flands mine Armourie, In which are Corflets forg'd of beaten gold, To arme ten hundred thousand fighting men, Whose glittering squadrons when the Sunne beholds, They feeme like to ten hundred thousand Ioues, When Ioue on the proude backe of thunder rydes, Trapt all in lightning flames: there can I shew thee The ball of gold that fet all Troy on fire; There shalt thou see the skarse of Cupids mother, Snatcht from the foft moyft Iuorie of her arme, To wrap about Adonis wounded thigh, There shalt thou see a wheele of Titans care, Which dropt from heaven when Phaeton fir'd the world:

Ile giue thee (if thou wilt) two filuer Doues Compof'd by Magicke to diuide the ayre, Who (as they flie) shall clap their filuer wings, And giue straunge musicke to the Elements; Ile giue thee els the fanne of Proferpine, Which in reward (for a sweete Thracian song,) The black-browd Empresse threw to Orpheus, Being come to setch Euridice from hell.

Fort. Hath euer mortall eye beheld these won-

Sould. Thine shall behold them, and make choice of any,

So thou wilt give the Souldan fuch a purfe.

Fort. By Fortunes bleffed hand (who christned me)

The mightie Souldan shall have such a purse, Provided I may see these prizelesse wonders.

Sould. Leaue vs alone: neuer was mortal eare

Excunt Nobles.

Acquainted with the vertue of a Jewell, Which now ile fliew, (out-valuing all the reft.)

Fort. It is impossible.

Sould. Behold this Casket,—Draw a Curtaine. Fettered in golden chaines, the Lock pure gold, The key of sollide gold, which my selfe keepe, And heres the treasure thats contained in it.

Takes out the Hat.

Fort. A course selt Hat? is this the precious Jewel?

Sould. Ile not exchange this, for ten Diadems. On paine of death, none listen to our talke.

Fort. What needes this folemne conjuration!
Sould. O, yes, for none shall vnderstand the worth
Of this inestimable ornament.

But you: and yet not you, but that you fweare By her white hand, that lent you fuch a name, To leaue a wondrous purfe in Babylon.

Fort. What I have fworne, I will not violate, But now vncouer the vertues of this Hatte.

Sould. I thinke none liften; if they doe, they die. Fort. None liften: tell: what needs this iealoufie? Sould. You fee tis poore in flew; did I want Jewels.

Gold could beget them, but the wide worlds wealth Buyes not this Hat; this clapt vpon my head, I (onely with a wish) am through the ayre, Transported in a moment ouer Seas,

And ouer lands to any fecrete place;
By this I steale to euery Princes court,
And heare their prinate councels and preuent
All daungers which to Babylon are meant.
By helpe of this I oft fee armies ioyne,
Though when the dreadfull Aluarado founds,
I am distant from the place a thousand leagues,
Oh, had I such a purse and such a Hat,
The Souldan were, of all, most fortunate.

Fort. Oh, had I fuch a Hat, then were I braue.

Wheres he that made it?

Sould. Dead, and the whole world

Yeelds not a workman that can frame the like.

Fort. No does? by 'what trick shal I make this mine?

Aside.

Me thinkes, me thinkes, when you are borne o're Seas,

And ouer lands, the heavinesse thereof

Should waigh you downe, drowne you, or breake your necke.

Sould. No, tis more light then any Hat befide:

Your hand shall peife it.

Fort. Oh, tis woudrous heavie.

Sould. Fie, ya're deceau'd: trie it vpon your head. Fort. Would I were now in Cyprus with my fons. Exit.

Sould. Stay, Fortunatus, flay, I am vndone. Treason, Lords, treason, get me wings, ile flie After this damn'd Traytor through the ayre.

Enter Nobles.

Nob. Who wrongs the mightie king of Babylon? Sould. This Fortunatus, this fiend wrongs your king.

Nobl. Locke the Court gates, where is the diuell hid?

Sould. No gates no grates of Iron imprison him, Like a Magician breakes he through the clouds, Bearing my soule with him, for that Iewell gon, I am dead, and all is droffe in Babylon. Flie after him, tis vaine, on the winds wings, Heele ride through all the Courts of earthly kings.

Nobl. What is the Iewell that your grace hath loft?

Sould. He dies that troubles me: call me not king;

For ile confume my life in forrowing.

Exeunt.

Enter Andelocia very gallant, and Shaddow.

Andel. Shaddow? what haue I lost to day at dice? Shad. More then you will win againe in a month.

Andel. Why fir, how much comes it to?

Shad. It comes to nothing, Sir, for you have loft your wits, and when a mans wittes are loft, the man is like twentie poundes worth of Tobacco, which mounts into th' aire, and prooues nothing but one thing.

Andelo. And what thing is that, you Affe?

Shad. Marrie fir, that he is an affe that melts fo much money in fmoke.

Andel. Twere a charitable deed to hang thee a fmoking.

Shad. I should neuer make good bacon, because I am not fat.

Andel. Ile befworne thy wit is leane.

Shad. Its happie I have a leane wit: but master, you have none; for when your money tript away, that went after it, and ever since you have beene mad; here com's your brother; borrowe a dramme of him.

Enter Ampedo.

If his be not mouldie: for mens wits in these daies, Are like the Cuckoo, bald once a yeere, and that makes Motley so deere, and sooles so good cheape.

Andel. Brother, all haile.

Shad. There's a ratling falutation.

Andel. You must lend me some more money: Nay neuer looke so straunge, and you will come off, so if you will barre me from square play, doe: come come, when the old traueller my Father comes home, like a young Ape, full of fantasticke trickes, or a painted Parrat stucke full of outlandish feathers, heele leade the world in a string, and then (like a hot shot) Ile charge and discharge all.

Shad. I would be loth, master, to see that day: for he leades the world in a string that goes to hanging.

And. Take heede I turne not that head into the world, and leade you fo?

Brother wilt be: Hay any ends of Gold or Siluer?

Amp. Thus wanton reuelling breedes beggerie.

Brother, twere better that you still liu'd poore.

Want would make wifedome rich: but when your Coffers

Swell to the brim, then royt fets vp fayles, And like a defperate vnfkild Mariner Driues your vnfteddie fortunes on the point Of wracke ineuitable; of all the wealth, Left (by our Father, when he left vs laft) This little is vnfpent, and this being wafted, Your ryot ends; therefore confume it all, Ile liue; or dying, find fome buriall. Thankes for my crownes.

Andel. Shaddow, I am villainous hungrie, to heare one of the feuen wife Masters talke thus emptily.

Shad. I am a villaine, mafter, if I am not hungrie.

Andel. Because ile saue this gold, sirra Shaddowe, weele feede our selves with Paradoxes.

Shad. Oh rare: what meat's that?

Andel. Meate, you gull: tis no meate: a dish of Paradoxes is a feast of straunge opinion, tis an ordinarie that our greatest gallants haunt nowadaies, because they would be held for Statesmen.

Shad. I shall neuer fil my belly with opinions.

And. In defpite of fway-bellies, gluttons, & fweet mouth'd Epicures, Ile haue thee maintaine a Paradox in commendations of hunger.

Shad. I shall never have the stomacke to doo't.

And. Seeft thou this Crufado? do it, & turne this into a feaft.

Shad. Couetousnesse and lecherie are two divels, they'le tempt a man to wade through deepe matters: Ile doo't though good cheare cospire my death, for speaking treason against her.

Andel. Fall to it then with a full mouth.

Shad. Oh famine, inspire me with thy miserable reasons.

I begin, master.

Amp. O miferable inuocation.

Andel. Silence.

Shad. Theres no man but loues one of these three beastes, a Horse, a Hound, or a Whore; the Horse by his goodwill, has his head euer in the maunger; the Whore with your ill will has her hand euer in your purse; and a hungrie Dogge eates durtie puddings.

Andel. This is profound, forward: the conclusion of this now.

Shad. The conclusion is plaine: For fince all men loue one of these three monsters, being such terrible eaters, therefore all men loue hunger.

Amp. A very leane argument. Shad. I can make it no fatter.

Andel. Proceede, good Shaddow; this fats me.

Shad. Hunger is made of Gun-powder.

Andel. Give fire to that opinion.

Shad. Stand by, lest it blow you vp: hunger is made of Gun-powder, or Gun-powder of hunger; for they both eate through stone walles; hunger is a grindstone, it sharpens wit, hunger is fuller of loue then Cupid, for it makes a man eate himselse; hunger was the first that euer open'd a Cookes shop; Cookes the first that euer made sawce; sawce being lickerish, lickes vp good meate; good meate preserues life: Hunger therefore preserues life.

Amp. By my confent thou shouldest still live by hunger.

Shad. Not fo, hunger makes no man mortall:

hunger is an excellent Physition: for hee dares kill any body: hunger is one of the seuen liberall sciences.

Andel. O learned? Which of the feuen?

Shad. Musicke, for sheele make a man leape at a crust: but as few care for her fixe tisters, so none loue to daunce after her pipe: Hunger, master, is hungrie and couetous; therefore the Crusado.

Andel. But haft thou no sharper reasons then this? Shad. Yes one: the dagger in Cyprus had neuer stabd out fuch fixe penie pipes, but for hunger.

And. Why, you dolt, there pies are but in their minority.

Shad. My belly and my purfe haue beene twentie times at daggers drawing, with parting the little yrchins.

Enter Fortunatus.

Ampe. Peace, Idiot, peace, my Father is return'd. Fort. Touch mee not, boyes, I am nothing but ayre, let none speake to me, till you haue markt me well.

Shad. Now speake your mind.

Amp. Villaine, why hast thou chalkt my Fathers backe?

Shad. Onely to marke him, & to trie what colour aire is of.

Fort. Regard him not, Ampedo: Andelocia, Shaddowe: view me, am I as you are, or am I tranfform'd?

And. I thought trauel would turne my father, mad man or foole.

Amp. How should you be transform'd I see no chaunge.

Shad. If your wits be not planet ftrucken, if your braines lie in their right place, you are well inough; for your body is little mended by your fetching fegaries.

Andel. Mee thinkes, father, you looke as you did, onely your face is more withered.

Fort. Thats not my fault, age is like loue, it cannot be hid.

Shad. Or like Gun-powder a fire, or like a foole, or like a young nouice new come to his lands: for all these will shew of what house they come: now fir, you may amplifie.

Fort. Shaddow, turne thy tongue to a shaddow, be filent: Boyes be proud, your Father hath the whole world in this compasse, I am all felicitie, vp to the brimmes. In a minute am I come from Babylon, I haue beene this half howre in Famagosta.

And. How? in a minute, father? Ha, ha, I fee trauellers must lie.

Shad. Tis their deftinie: the Fates doe fo confpire.Fort. I haue cut through the ayre like a Falcon;I would haue it feeme ftraunge to you.

Shad. So it does, Sir.

Fort. But tis true: I would not have you believe it neither.

Shad. No more we doe not, Sir.

Fort. But tis miraculous & true: defire to fee you, brought me to Cyprus; ile leaue you more Gold, and goe vifite more Countries.

Sha. Leaue vs gold inough, and weele make all Countries come visit vs.

Amp. The frostie hand of age now nips your bloud, And strowes her snowie slowers vpon your head, And give you warning that within few yeeres,

Death needes must marrie you: those short liues minutes,

That dribble out your life, must needes be spent, In peace not trauell: rest in Cyprus then. Could you survaie ten worlds, yet you must die; And bitter is the sweete thats reapt thereby.

And. Faith father, what pleafure haue you met by walking your stations?

Fort. What pleasure, boy? I have reueld with kings, daunc'd with Queenes, dallied with Ladies, worne straunge attires, seene fantasticoes, converst with humorifts, beene rauisht with divine raptures of Dorick, Lidian and Phrigian harmonies, I have spent the day in triumphes, and the night in banquetting.

Andel. Oh rare: this was heauenly. Shad. Me thinkes t'was horrible.

Andel. He that would not be an Arabian Phenix to burne in these sweete fires, let him liue like an Owle for the world to wonder at.

Amp. Why, brother, are not all these vanities? Fort. Vanities? Ampedo, thy soule is made of lead, too dull, too ponderous to mount up to the incomprehensible glorie, that trauell lists men to.

Shad. My olde mafters foule is Corke and feathers, and being fo light doth eafily mount vp.

Ande. Sweeten mine eares, good father, with fome more.

Fort. When in the warmth of mine owne countries armes

We yawn'd like fluggards, when this fmall Horizon Imprison'd vp my body, then mine eyes Worshipt these clouds as brightest; but, my boyes, The glistring beames which doe abroad appeare, (In other heauens) fire is not halfe so cleare.

Shad. Why, fir, are there other heavens in other countries?

Andel. Peace, interrupt him not vpon thy life. For. For still in all the Regions I haue seene, I fcorn'd to crowd among the muddie throng Of the rancke multitude, whose thickned breath, Like to condensed Fogs doe choake that beautie, Which els would dwell in euery kingdomes cheeke. No, I still boldly stept into their Courts, For there to liue tis rare, O tis diuine; There shall you see faces Angelicall, There shall you see troopes of chast Goddesses, Whose star-like eyes haue power, (might they still shine)

To make night day, and day more christalline. Neere these you shall behold great Heroes, White headed Councellors and Jouiall spirites, Standing like fierie Cherubins to gard The Monarch, who in God-like glorie sits. In midst of these, as if this deitie Had with a looke created a new world; The standers by, being the saire workemanship.

Andel. Oh how my foule is rapt to a third heauen.

Ile trauell fure, and liue with none but kings.

Shad. Then Shaddow must die among knaues; and yet why so? in a bunch of Cards, knaues waite vpon the kings.

And. When I turne king, then shalt thou waite on me.

Shad. Well, theres nothing impossible: a dog has his day, and fo haue you.

Amp. But tell me, father, haue you in all courts

Beheld fuch glorie, fo maiesticall?
In all perfection? no way blemished?

Fort. In fome Courts shall you fee ambition Sit piecing De'alus old waxen wings, But being clapt on, and they about to flie, Euen when their hopes are busied in the clouds, They melt against the Sunne of maiestie, And downe they tumble to destruction: For fince the heauens strong armes teach kings to stand, Angels are plac'd about their glorious throne, To gard it from the strokes of Traitrous hands. By trauell, boyes, I have seene all these things, Fantasticke complement stalkes vp and downe, Trickt in out-landish Fethers, all his words, His lookes, his oathes, are all ridiculous, All apish, childish, and Italianate.

Enter Fortune: after her three destinies working.

Shad. I know a medicine for that maladie.

Fort. By trauell, beyes, I have feene all thefe things.

Andel. And these are fightes for none, but gods &

kings.

Shad. Yes, and for Christen creatures, if they be not blind.

Fort. In these two hands doe I gripe all the world. This leather purse, and this bald woollen Hat Make me a Monarch: heres my Crowne and Scepter. In progresse will I now goe through the world, Ile cracke your shoulders, boyes, with bags of gold Ere I depart; on Fortunes wings I rice,

And now fit in the height of humane pride.

Fortune. Now, foole, thou lieft; where thy proud feete doe tread

Thefe shal throw downe thy cold & breathlesse head. Fort. O facred deitie, what sinne is don,
That deaths Iron sift should wrestle with thy sonne?

All kneele.

Fortune. Thou art no fonne of Fortune, but her flaue:

Thy Cedar hath afpir'd to his full height.
Thy Sunne like glorie hath aduaunc'd her felfe Into the top of prides Meridian,
And downe amaine it comes. From beggerie I plum'd thee like an Ofrich, like that Ofrich Thou hast eaten Metals, and abused my giftes, Hast plaid the Ruffian, wasted that in ryots,

Which as a bleffing I bestowed on thee.

Fort. Forgiue me, I will be more prouident.

Fortune. No, endlesse follow endlesse wealth.

Thou hadst thy fancie, I must have thy fate,

Which is, to die when th'art most fortunate.

This inckie thread thy vgly finnes haue fpun, Blacke life, blacke death; faster, that it were don.

Fort. Oh, let me liue, but till I can redeeme. Fortune. The destinies denie thee longer life.

Fort. I am but now lifted to happines.

Fortune. And now I take most pride to cast thee downe.

Hadst thou chosen wisedome, this blacke had beene white,

And deaths sterne browe could not thy foule afright.

Fort. Take this againe: giue wisedome to my fonnes.

Fortune. No, foole, tis now too late: as death firikes thee,

So shall their ends sudden and wretched bee. Ioues daughters (righteous destinies) make haste, His life hath wastefull beene, and let it waste.

Exeunt.

Andel. Why the pox doest thou sweate so?

Shad. For anger to fee any of Gods Creatures haue fuch filthie faces as these Semsters had that went hence.

Andel. Semsters? why, you asse, they are destinies. Shad. Indeede, if it bee ones destinie to have a silthie face, I know no remedie but to goe Maskt and crie, Woe worth the Fates.

Amp. Why droopes my father? these are onely shaddowes.

Raizd by the malice of fome enemie,

To fright your life, o're which they have no power.

Shad. Shaddowes? I defie their kinred.

Fort. O Ampedo, I faint; helpe me, my fonnes.

Andel. Shaddow, I pray thee runne and call more helpe.

Shad. If that desperate Don Dego death hath tane vp the Cudgels once, heres neuer a Fencer in Cyprus dare take my old masters part.

Andel. Runne, villaine, call more helpe.

Shad. Bid him thanke the destinies for this. Exit. Fort. Let me shrincke downe, & die betweene your armes.

Helpe comes in vaine. No hand can conquer Fate, This infant is the last of my lifes date. This Goddesse (if at least shee be a goddesse) Names her selfe Fortune: wandring in a wood, Halfe samisht, her I met. I haue, quoth shee, Sixe gifts to fpend vpon mortalitie.

Wisedome, strength, health, beautie, long life and riches.

Out of my bountie one of these is thine.

Amp. What benefit did from your choyce arife?

Fort. Liften, my fonnes: In this finall compafie lies,

Infinite treasure: this shee gaue to mee, And gaue to this, this vertue, Take (quoth shee) So often as from hence thou drawst thy hand, Ten golden peeces of that kingdomes coyne, Where er'e thou liu'st, which plenteous sure shall last, After thy death, till thy sonnes liues doe waste.

Andel. Father, your choice was rare, the gift divine.

Fort. It had beene fo, if riches had beene mine.

Amp. But hath this golden vertue neuer faild?

Fort. Neuer.

Andel. O admirable: heare's a fire Hath power to thaw the very heart of death, And giue stones life, by this most facred death, See brother, heres all India in my hand.

Fort. Inherite you (my Sonnes) that golden land. This Hat I brought away from Babylon, I robd the Souldan of it, tis a prize Worth twentie Empires. In this Jewell lies.

Andel. How, father? Jewell? call you this a Jewell? It's courfe Wooll, a bald fashion, and greasse to the brim; I have bought a better Felt for a French crowne fortie times: Of what vertuous blocke is this Hat, I pray?

Fort. Set it vpon thy head, and wish a wish, Thou in the moment on the winds swift wings, Shalt be transported into any place.

Andel. A wishing Hat, and a golden mine?

For. O Andelocia, Ampedo, now death

Sounds his third fommons: I must hence: these

Iewels

To both I doe bequeath; divide them not, But vfe them equally: neuer bewray What vertues are in them; for if you doe, Much shame, much griefe, much daunger followes you.

Peruse this booke: farwell: behold in me

The rotten strength of proud mortalitie. Dyes.

Ampe. His soule is wandring to the Elizium shades.

Andel. The flowre thats fresh at noone, at Sun-set fades.

Brother, close you downe his eyes, because you were his eldest; and with them close vp your teares, whilst I (as all yonger brothers doe) shift for my selfe: let vs mourne, because hees dead, but mourne the lesse, because he cannot reviue: the honour we can doe him, is to burie him royally, lets about it then, for ile not melt my selfe to death with scalding sighes, nor drop my soule out at mine eyes, were my father an Emperour.

Amp. Hence, hence, thou stop'st the tide of my true teares.

True griefe is dumbe, though it hath open eares.

Andel. Yet God fend my griefe a tongue, that I may have good vtterance for it: Sob on, brother mine, whilft you figh there, ile fit & read what Storie my father has written here.

They both fall afleepe: Fortune and a companie of Satyres enter with Muficke, and playing about Fortunatus body, take them away; They gone, Shaddow enters running.

Shad. I can get none, I can find none: where are you, master? Haue I tane you napping? and you too? I see forrowes eye-lids are made of a Dormouse skin, they seldome open, or of a misers purse, that's alwaies shut: So ho, master.

Andel. Shaddow, why how now? whats the matter?

Shad. I can get none Sir, tis impossible:

Amp. What is impossible? what canst not get.

Shad. No helpe for my old mafter.

Andel. Hast thou beene all this while calling for helpe?

Yes fir: he fcornd all Famagosta when he was in his huffing, and now hee lies puffing for wind, they fay they fcorne him.

The poylon of their fcorne infects not him; He wants no helpe. See where he breathles lies: Brother, to what place have you borne his body?

Andel. I beare it? I toucht it not.

Nor I: a leaden flumber prest mine eyes.

Shad. Whether it were lead or lattin that haspt downe those winking casements, I knowe not, but I found you both fnorting.

Amp. And in that fleepe (me thought) I heard the tunes

Of fullen paffions apt for Funerals,

And faw my Fathers liueleffe body borne

By Satyres: O I feare that deitie

Hath stolne him hence, that Snudge his destinie.

And. I feare hees ryfen againe, didst not thou meete him?

I fir? doe you thinke this white and red durst haue kist my fweete cheekes, if they had seene a ghost? But, master, if the destinies, or Fortune, or the Fates, or the Fayries have stolne him, neuer indite them for the Felonie: for by this meanes the charges of a Tombe is fau'd, and you being his heyres, may doe as many rich Executors doe, put that money in your purses, and give out that he dyed a begger.

Away, you Roague, my Father die a beg-Andel.

Ile build a Tombe for him of massie Gold.

Shad. Methinkes, mafter, it were better to let the memory of him shine in his owne vertues (if hee had any) than in Alablaster.

Andel. I shall mangle that Alablaster sace, you whorefon vertuous vice.

Shad. He has a Marble heart, that can mangle a face of Alablaster.

Andel. Brother, come, come, mourne not, our Father is but stept to agree with Charon for his boate hyre to Elizium. See, heres a Storie of all his trauels; this booke shall come out with a new Addition: Ile treade after my Fathers steps; ile goe measure the world, therefore lets share these Jewels, take this or this.

Amp. Will you then violate our Fathers Will?

Andel. A puritane? keepe a dead mans Will? Indeed in the old time, when men were buried in foft Church-yardes, that their Ghosts might rise, it was good: but, brother, now they are imprisond in strong Brick and Marble, they are fast: feare not: away, away, these are fooleries, gulleries, trumperies; heres this or this, or I am gon with both.

Amp. Doe you as you please, the sinne shall not be mine.

Fooles call those things prophane, that are divine.

Andel. Are you content to weare the Jewels by turnes? Ile haue the purfe for a yeere, you the Hat, and as much gold, as youle aske; & when my pursourship ends, ile resigne, and cap you.

Amp. I am content to beare all discontents. Exit. Andel. I should ferue this bearing Asse rarely now, if I should load him, but I will not, though conscience bee (like Physicke) seldome vsed, (for so it does least hurt) yet ile take a dram of it: this for him, and some gold: this for me: for having this mint about me, I shall want no wishing Cap: gold is an Eagle, that can slie to any place, and like death, that dares enter all places.

Shaddow, wilt thou trauell withme?

Sha. I shal neuer fadge with the humor because I cannot lie.

And. Thou dolt, weele vifit all the kings courts in the world.

Shad. So we may, and returne dolts home, but what shall we learne by trauaile?

Andel. Fashions.

Shad. Thats a beaftly difease: me thinkes its better flaying in your owne countrie.

Andel. How? In mine owne countrie? like a Cage-birde and fee nothing ?

Shad. Nothing? yes you may fee things enough, for what can you fee abroad that is not at home? The fame Sunne cals you vp in the morning, and the fame man in the Moone lights you to bed at night, our fields are as greene as theirs in fummer, and their frosts will nip vs more in winter: Our birds fing as sweetly & our women are as faire: In other countries you shall haue one drinke to you, whilst you kiffe your hand, and ducke, heele poyson you: I confesse you shall meete more fooles, and asses, and knaues abroad then at home (yet God be thanked we haue prettie store of all) but for Punckes, wee put them downe.

And. Prepare thy spirits, for thou shalt goe with me,

To England shall our starres direct our course, Thither the prince of Cyprus (our kings sonne) Is gon to see the louely Agripyne, Shaddow, weele gaze vpon that English dame, And trie what vertue gold has to instame. First to my brother, then away lets sie, Shaddow must be a Courtier ere he die.

Shaddow must be a Courtier ere he die. Exit.

Shad. If I must, the Fates shall bee feru'd: I haue feene many clownes Courtiers, then why not Shaddow? Fortune, I am for thee. Exit.

Enter Orleans melancholike, Galloway with him, a boy after them with a Lute.

Orle. Be gone: leave that with me, and leave me to my felfe, if the King afke for me, fweare to him I am ficke, and thou fhalt not lie, pray thee leave me.

Boy. I am gon, Sir.

Exit.

Orle. This muficke makes me but more out of tune.

O, Agripyna.

Gall. Gentle friend, no more.

Thou faiest loue is a madnes, hate it then,

Euen for the names fake.

Orle. O, I loue that madnes,

Euen for the names fake.

Gall. Let me tame this frenzie,
By telling thee thou art a prifoner here,
By telling thee shees daughter to a king,
By telling thee the king of Cyprus sonne
Shines like a Sunne, betweene her lookes and thine,
Whilst thou seem'st but a starre to Agripyne:
He loues her.

Crle. If he doe: why fo doe I.

Gall. Loue is ambitious and loues maiestie.

Orle. Deere friend, thou art deceived, loues voice doth fing

As fweetely in a begger as a king.

Gall. Deere friend, thou art deceyu'd: O bid thy foule

Lift vp her intellectual eyes to heauen, And (in this ample booke of wonders) read, Of what celeftiall mold, what facred effence,

Her felfe is formd, the fearch whereof will driue Sounds muficall among the iarring fpirits, And in fweete tune fet that which none inherits.

Orle. Ile gaze on heauen if Agripyne be there:

If not: Fa, La, la, Sol, la, &c.

Gall. O, call this madnes in, fee from the win-

Of every eye Derision thrusts out cheekes, Wrinckled with Idiot laughter: every singer Is like a Dart shot from the hand of scorne, By which thy name is hurt, thine honour torne.

Orle. Laugh they at me, fweete Galloway?

Gall. Euen at thee.

Orle. Ha, ha, I laugh at them, are not they mad,

That let my true true forrow make them glad

I daunce and fing onely to anger griefe,
That in that anger, he might fmite life downe
With his Iron fift: good heart, it feemeth then,
They laugh to fee griefe kill me: O, fond men,
You laugh at others teares, when others fmile,
You teare your felues in peeces: vile, vile, vile,
Ha, ha, when I behold a fwarme of fooles,
Crowding together to be counted wife,
I laugh becaufe fweete Agripine's not there,
But weepe becaufe shee is not any where,
And weepe becaufe whether shee be or not,
My loue was euer and is still forgot: forgot, forgot, forgot.

Gall. Draw backe this streame, why should my Orleans mourne?

Orle. Looke yonder, Galloway, doest thou fee that Sunne?

Nay good friend, stare vpon it, marke it well, Ere he be two howres elder, all that glorie Is banisht heauen, and then (for griese) this skie, That's now so iocund, will mourne all in blacke, And shall not Orleans mourne? Alacke, alacke. O what a Sauage tyrannie it were T'inforce care, laugh and woe: not shed a teare? Dead is my loue, I am buried in her scorne, That is my Sun-set, and shall I not mourne? Yes by my troth I will.

Gall. Deere friend forbeare, Beautie (like forrow) dwelleth euery where. Race out this strong Idea of her face, As faire as hers shineth in any place.

Orle. Thou art a Traytor to that white and red, Which fitting on her cheekes (being Cupids throne) Is my hearts foueraigne: O when shee is dead, This wonder (Beautie) shall be found in none. Now Agripyne's not mine, I vow to be In loue with nothing but deformitie. O faire Deformitie, I muse all eyes

Are not enamord of thee: thou didft neuer Murder mens hearts, or let them pine like wax, Melting against the Sunne of thy destinie, Thou art a faithfull nurse to Chastitie, Thy beautie is not like to Agripynes, For cares, and age, and ficknesse hers deface, But thine's eternall: O Deformitie, Thy fairenes is not like to Agripynes, For (dead) her beautie will no beautie haue, But thy face lookes most louely in the graue.

Enter Prince of Cyprus and Agripyne.

Gall. See where they come together hand in hand.

Orle. O, watch fweete Galloway, when their hands doe part,

Betweene them, shalt thou find my murdred heart.

By this then it feemes a thing impossible, to know when an English Lady loues truely.

Agrip. Not so, for when her soule steales into her heart, and her heart leapes vp to her eyes, and her eyes drop into her hands, then if shee fay, Heres my hand, shees your owne, else neuer.

Cyp. Heres a paire of your prisoners, lets try their opinion.

Agrip. My kind prisoners well encountred, the Prince of Cyprus here and my felfe haue beene wrangling about a question of loue: my Lord of Orleans, you looke leane, and likest a louer; Whether is it more torment to loue a Lady and neuer enioy her, or alwaies to enioy a Lady, whome you cannot choose but hate ?

Orle. To hold her euer in mine armes whome I loath in my heart, were fome plague, yet the punishment were no more then to be enjoyned to keepe poyfon in my hand, yet never to taste it.

But fay you should be compeld to swallow the poyfon?

Orle. Then a fpeedy death would end a fpeeding miferie: But to loue a Lady and neuer enjoy her, oh it is not death, but worfe then damnation; Tis hell, tis.

Agrip. No more, no more, good Orleans, nay then

I fee my prisoner is in loue too.

Cypr. Me thinkes, fouldiers cannot fal into the fashion of loue.

Agrip. Me thinkes, a Souldier is the most faithfull louer of all men els: for his affection stands not vpon complement: his wooing is plaine home-spun stuffe; theres no outlandish thred in it, no Rethoricke: a Souldier casts no sigures to get his mistris heart, his loue is like his valour in the field, when he payes downeright blowes.

Gall. True, Madam, but would you receive fuch paiment?

Agrip. No, but I meane, I loue a Souldier best, for his plaine dealing.

Cypr. Thats as good as the first.

Agrip. Be it fo, that goodnesse I like: for what Lady can abide to loue a Spruce filken face Courtier, that stands every morning two or three howres learning how to looke by his Glasse, how to speake by his Glasse, how to sigh by his glasse, how to court his Mistris by his Glasse. I would wish him no other plague, but to have a Mistris as brittle as glasse.

Gall. And that were as bad as the horne plague. Cypr. Are any louers possess with this madnes?

Agrip. What madman are not possess with this loue? yet by my troth, wee poore women doe but smile in our sleeves to see all this sopperie: yet we all desire to see our louers attirde gallantly, to heare them sing sweetely, to behold them daunce comely and such like; but this apish monkie sashion of effeminate nicenesse, out vpon it: Oh, I hate it worse then to be counted a scould.

Cypr. Indeede men are most regarded, when they least regard themselues.

Gall. And women most honored, when they shew most mercy to their louers.

Orle. But ist not a miserable tyranie, to see a Lady triumph in the passions of a soule languishing through her crueltie ?

Cypr. Me thinkes it is.

Gall. Me thinkes tis more then tyrannie.

Agrip. So thinke not I; for as there is no reason to hate any that loue vs, so it were madnes to loue all that doe not hatevs; women are created beautifull, onely because men should wooe them; for twere miserable tyrannie to inioyne poore women to wooe men: I would not heare of a woman in loue for my fathers kingdome.

Cyp. I neuer heard of any woman that hated

loue.

Agrip. Nor I: but we had all rather die then confesse wee loue; our glorie is to heare men figh whilst we smile, to kil them with a frowne, to strike them dead with a sharpe eye, to make you this day weare a Feather, and to morrow a sicke nightcap: Oh, why this is rare, there's a certaine deitie in this, when a Lady by the Magicke of her lookes, can turne a man into twentie shapes.

Orle. Sweete friend, shee speakes this but to torture mee.

Gall. Ile teach thee how to plague her: loue her not.

Agrip. Poore Orleans, how lamentably he lookes: if hee flay, heele make me furely loue him for pure pittie. I must fend him hence, for of all fortes of loue, I hate the French; I pray thee, sweet prisoner, intreate Lord Longauile to come to me presently.

Orle. I will: and efteeme my felfe more then happie, that you will imploy me. Exit.

Agrip. Watch him, watch him for Gods fake, if hee figh not or looke not backe.

Cyp. He does both: but what misterie lyes in this i

Agrip. Nay, no misterie, tis as plaine as Cupids forehead: why this is as it should be: And esteeme my selfe more then happie, that you will imploy me: my French prisoner is in loue ouer head and eares.

Cypr. Its wonder how he scapes drowning.

Gall. With whom thinke you?

Aerip. With his keeper, for a good wager: Ah, how glad is he to obey? And how proud am I to command in this Empire of affection? Ouer him and fuch Spungy-liuerd youthes, (that lie foaking in loue) I triumph more with mine eye, then euer he did ouer a Souldier with his fword. Ift not a gallant victorie for me to fubdue my Fathers enemy with a looke? Prince of Cyprus, you were best take heede, how you encounter an English Lady.

Cypr. God bleffe me from louing any of you, if all bee fo cruell.

Agryp. God bleffe me from fuffring you to loue me, if you be not fo formable.

Cyp, Wil you commaund me any feruice, as you haue done Orleans?

Agrip. No other feruice but this, that (as Orleans) you loue me, for no other reason, but that I may torment you.

Cypr. I wil: conditionally, that in all companie I may call you my tormenter.

Agr. You shall: conditionally, that you neuer beg for mercy, Come, my Lord of Galloway.

Gall. Come, fweete Madam.

Exeunt.

Manet Cyprus.

Cypr. The Ruby-colourd portals of her speech Were closed by mercy: but vpon her eye, (Attir'd in frownes) fat murdring crueltie.

Enter Agrip. and listens.

Shees angrie, that I durft fo high aspire. O, shee disdaines that any straungers brest Should be a Temple for her deitie:
Shees full of beautie, full of bitternes.
Till uow, I did not dally with loues fire:
And when I thought to try his flames indeede,
I burnt me euen to cinders: O, my starres,
Why from my natiue shore did your beames guide me,
To make me dote on her that doth deride me?

She kneeles: he walkes musing.

Agri. Hold him in this mind, fweete Cupid, I coniure thee. O, what mufick these hey-hoes make? I was about to cast my litle litle selfe into a great loue trance for him, fearing his hart had been flint: but since I see tis pure virgin wax, he shal melt his belly sull: for now I know how to temper him.

Exit.

Cypr. Neuer beg mercy? yet be He fpies her. my tormenter.

I hope shee heard me not: doubtlesse shee did: And now will she insult vpon my passions, And vex my constant loue with mockeries. Nay, then ile be mine owne Physician, And out face loue, and make her thinke that I Mournd thus, because I saw her standing by. What newes, my Lord of Cornewall?

Enter Cornewall.

Cornew. This faire Prince,
One of your Countrie-men, is come to Court,
A luftie gallant braue in Cyprus Ile,
With fiftie bard Horfes prawncing at his heeles,
Backt by as many firong limbd Cypriots.
All whom he keepes in pay: whose offred feruice,
Our king with Armes of gladnes hath embrac'd.

Cypr. Borne in the Ile of Cyprus? whats his name?

Cornew. His feruants call him Fortunatus fonne. Cypr. Rich Fortunatus fonne? Is he ariu'd?

Enter Longauile, Galloway, and Chefter with Fewels.

Longa. This he bestowed on me.

Cheft. And this on me.

Gallow. And this his bounteous hand inforc'd mee

Longa. I prize this Jewell at a hundred Markes, Yet would he needes beftow this gift on me.

Cyp. My Lords, whose hand hath beene thus prodigal?

Gallow. Your countrieman my Lord, a Cypriot.

Longa. The gallant fure is all compact of gold,
To euery Lady hath he giuen rich Jewels,
And fent to euery feruant in the Court
Twentie faire English Angels.

Cypr. This is rare.

Enter Lincolne.

Lincol. My Lords, prepare your felues for reueling,
Tis the kings pleafure that this day be fpent
In royall pastimes, that this golden Lord,
(For fo all that behold him, christen him)
May tast the pleasures of our English court.
Here comes the gallant, shining like the Sunne.

Trumpets found: Enter Athelflane, Andelocia, Agripyne, Orleans, Ladies, and other attendants, Infultado a Spanish Lord: Musicke founds within.

Andel. For these your royall fauours done to me, (Being a poore straunger) my best powres shall proue,

By Acts of worth, the foundnes of my loue.

Athelfs. Herein your loue shall best set out it selse, By staying with vs: if our English Ile Hold any object welcome to your eyes,

Doe but make choice, and claime it as your prize.

The King and Cyprus conferre afide.

Ande. I thanke your grace: would he durft keepe his word,

I know what I would claime: Tush, man, be bold, Were shee a Saint, shee may be wonne with gold.

Cypr. Tis straunge I must confesse, but in this pride,

His Father Fortunatus (if he liue)

Confumes his life in Cyprus: ftill he fpends, And ftill his Coffers with abundance fwell, But how he gets thefe riches none can tell.

The King and Agripyne conferre aside.

Athelst. Hold him in talke: come hither, Agripyne.

Cypr. But what intic'de young Andelociaes foule To wander hither?

Andel. That which did allure,

My foueraignes fonne, the wonder of the place.

Agr. This curious heape of wonders, (which an Empresse Gaue him) he gaue me, and by Venus hand, The warlike Amorato needes would fweare, Hee left his countrie Cyprus for my loue.

Athelft. If by the foueraigne Magicke of thine eye, Thou canst inchant his lookes to keepe the circles Of thy saire cheekes, be bold to trie thy charmes, Feede him with hopes, and find the royall veine, That leades this Cypriot to his golden mine.

Here's Musicke spent in vaine, Lords, fall to dauncing. Cypr. My faire tormentor, will you lend a hand?

Agrip. Ile try this strangers cunning in a daunce.

Andel. My cunning is but fmall, yet whoo'le not proue

To shame himsele for such a Ladies loue?

Orle. These Cypriots are the diuels that torture me. He courts her, and shee smiles, but I am borne,

To be her beauties flaue, and her loues fcorne.

And. I shall neuer haue the face to aske the queftion twice.

Agrip. Whats the reason? Cowardlynes or pride?

Andel. Neither: but tis the fashion of vs Cypriots, both men and women, to yeeld at first affault, and we expect others should doe the like.

Its a figne, that either your women are very black, & are glad to be fped, or your men very fond, & wil take no denial.

Andel. Indeede our Ladies are not fo faire as you. Agrip. But your men more ventrous at a breach then you, or els they are all daftardly fouldiers.

Hee that fightes vnder thefe fweete colours, & yet turnes coward, let him bee shot to death with the terrible arrowes of faire Ladies eyes.

Athelft. Nay Infultado, you must not denie vs. Infultad. My Corocon es muy pefada, my Anima muy No per los Cielos: a-tormentada.

La piede de Espagnoll, no haze musica in Tierra Inglesa. Cypr. Sweete Infultado let vs fee you daunce.

I have heard the Spanish daunce is full of state.

Verdad Signor: la danza spagnola, es Infultad. muv alta.

Maiestica, y para Monarcas: vuestra Inglesa,

Baxa, Fantastica, y muy humilde.

Agrip. Doth my Spanish prisoner denie to daunce? Hee has fworne to me by the croffe of his pure Toledo, to bee my feruant: by that oath (my Castilian prifoner) I coniure you to flew your cunning, though all your body bee not free, I am fure your heeles are at libertie.

Infultad. Nolo quire contra dezir: vuestra oio haze conquesto a su prisionero: Oyres, la pauyne Hispanola, fea vuestra musica y gravidad, y maicstad: Paie, daaime Tabacca, Toma my capa, e my cfpada. Mas alta, Mas alta: Defuiaios, Defuiaios, Companieros, Mas alta, Mas alta.

Hee daunces.

Athelfl. Thankes, Infultado.

Cypr. Tis most excellent.

Agrip. The Spaniards daunce, is as his deedes bee, full of pride.

Athelft. The day growes old, & what remains vnfpent,

Shall be confum'd in banquets, Agripyne, Leaue vs a while, if Andelocia pleafe, Goe beare our beautious daughter companie.

And. Fortune I thanke thee: now thou fmil'st on me. Excunt Agrip. and Andel. and Ladies. Athel. This Cipriot beares a gallant princely mind. My Lord, of what birth is your country-man? Thinke not, sweete Prince, that I propound this question

To wrong you in your loue to Agripyne:
Our fauours grace him to an other end.
Nor let the wings of your affection droope,
Because shee seemes to shun loues gentle lure.
Belieue it on our word, her beauties prize
Onely shall yeeld a conquest to your eyes.
But tell me whats this Fortunatus sonne?

Cypr. Of honourable bloud, and more renownd In forreine kingdomes (whither his proud fpirit, Plum'd with ambitious fethers, caries him)
Then in his natiue Countrie, but last day
The father and the sonnes were through their riots, Poore and disdainde of all, but now they glister,
More bright than Midas: if some damned fiend
Fed not his bags, this golden pride would end.

Athels. His pride weele somewhat tame, & curb the head Of his rebellious prodigalitie:

He hath inuited vs, and all our Peeres, To feast with him to morrow, his prouision, I vnderstand may entertaine three kings. But Lincolne, let our Subiects secretly Be chargde on paine of life that not a man Sell any kind of Fewell to his seruants.

Cypr. This pollicy shall clip his golden wings, And teach his pride what tis to striue with kings. Athelft. Withdraw awhile: Exeunt.

Manet Athelstane.

Athelfl. None fild his hands with Gold, for we fet spies, To watch who fed his prodigalitie; He hung the Marble bosome of our Court, As thicke with gliftring Spangles of pure gold, As ere the fpring hath flucke the earth with flowers. Unlesse he melt himselfe to liquid gold, Or be fome God, fome diuell, or can transport A mint about him, (by inchanted power) He cannot raine fuch flowers: with his owne hands He threw more wealth abroad in euery streete, Then could be thurst into a Chariot: Hees a Magician fure, and to fome fiend, His foule (by infernall couenants) has he fold, Alwaies to fwimme vp to the chin in gold. Be what he can be, if those doting fires, Wherein he burnes for Agripinaes loue, Want power to melt from him this endlesse Myne, Then (like a flaue) weele chaine him in our Tower, Where tortures shall compell his sweating hands To cast rich heapes into our treasorie.

Musicke founding still: A curtaine being drawne, where Andelocia lies sleeping in Agripines lap, shee has his purse, and her selse and another Lady tye another (like it) in the place, and then rise from him.

Agrip. I have found the facred fpring that neuer ebs.

Leaue vs: Exit Lady. But ile not shew't your maiestie,

Till you haue fworne by Englands royall crowne, To let me keepe it.

Athelfl. By my Crowne I fweare,

None but faire Agripyne the Jem shall weare.

Agrip. Then is this mine: fee Father, here's the fire,

Whose gilded beames still burne, this is the Sunne, That euer shines, the tree that neuer dies, Here growes the Garden of Hesperides, The out-fide mockes you, makes you thinke tis poore, But entring it, you find eternall store.

Athelft. Art sure of this? How didst thou drive it out?

Agrip. Feare not his waking yet, I made him drinke

That foporiferous Juice which was composed,
To make the Queene (my Mother) rellish sleepe,
When her last sicknes fommond her to heauen.
He sleepes profoundly: when his amorous eyes
Had singde their wings in Cupids wanton slames,
I fet him all on fire, and promist loue:
In pride whereof, he drew me forth this purse,
And swore, by this he multiplyed his gold.
I tride and found it true: and secretly
Commaunded Musicke with her siluer tongue,
To chime soft lullabies into his soule,
And whilst my singers wantond with his hayre,
(T'intice the sleepie Juice to charme his eyes)
In all points was there made a purse, like his,
Which counterfet is hung in place of this.

Athelft. More then a fecond kingdome hast thou won.

Leaue him, that when he wakes he may fufpect, Some els has robd him, come deere Agripyne, If this strange purse his facred vertues hold, Weele circle England with a wast of Gold. Exeunt.

Musicke still: Enter Shaddow very gallant, reading a Bill, with emptie bags in his hand singing.

Shad. These English occupiers are mad Troians: let a man pay them neuer so much, theile giue him nothing but the bag. Since my master created me steward ouer his sistie men, and his one and sistie horse, I have rid ouer much businesse, yet neuer was gald, I thanke the destinies: Musicke? O delicate warble: O these Courtiers are most sweete triumphant creatures. Seignior, Sir, Monsieur: sweete Seignior: this is the language of the accomplishment: O delicious strings: these heauenly wyre-drawers haue stretcht my master euen out at length: yet at length he must wake: master?

Andel. Wake me not yet, my gentle Agripyne.

Shad. One word Sir, for the billets, and I vanish.

And. Theres heaven in these times: throw the musicians

A bounteous largeffe of three hundred Angels.

Andelocia starts up.

Shad. Why, fir, I have but ten pound left.

And. Ha, Shaddow? where's the Princeffe Agripyne?

Shad. I am not Apollo, I cannot reueale.

Andel. Was not the princesse here, when thou cam'st in?

Shad. Here was no Princesse but my princely felfe.

Andel. In faith?

Shad. No in faith, Sir,

Andel. Where are you hid? where stand you wantoning? Not here? gone is faith? haue you given me the slip? well, tis but an amorous tricke and so I embrace it: my horse, Shaddow, how fare my horse?

Shad. Upon the best Oates my vndersteward can buy. An. I meane, are they lusty, sprightly, gallant, wanton, fiery?

Shad. They are as all horses are, Caterpillers to the Commonwealth, they are euer munching: but Sir, for these billets, and these fagots and bauins?

Andel. S'hart what billets, what fagots? doest make mee a Woodmonger?

Shad. No fweete Seignior, but you have bid the King and his Peeres to dinner, and he has commaunded that no Woodmonger fell you a flicke of wood, and that no Collyer shall cofen you of your measure, but must tie vp the mouth of their Sackes, least their Coales kindle your choler.

Andel. Ist possible? ist true, or hast thou learnt of the English gallants to gull?

Shad. Hees a gul that would be taught by fuch guls.

Andel. Not a flicke of wood? Some child of enuie has buzd this firatagem into the kings eare, of purpose to disgrace me: I haue inuited his maieslie, and though it cost me a Million, ile feast him. Shadow, thon shalt hyre a hundred or two of Carts, with them post to all the Grocers in London, buy vp all the Cynamon, Cloues, Nutmegs, Licorish and all other spices, that haue any strong heart, and with them make fires to prepare our Cookerie:

Ere Fortunatus fonne looke red with shame, Heele dresse a Kings feast in a spiced slame.

Shad. This divice, Sir, will bee fomewhat a kin to Lady Pride, twill aske cost.

And. Fetch twentie Porters, ile laid all with gold.

Shad. First, master, fil these bags.

And. Come then, hold vp, how now? trickes, new crochets, Madam Fortune? Drie as an Eele-skin? Shaddow, take thou my Gold out.

Shad. Why Sir, here's none in.

Andel. Ha, let me fee: O heres a bastard cheeke, I fee now tis not mine; tis counterfet, Tis so: slaue thou hast robd thy master.

Sha. Not of a peny, I haue beene as true a steward. And. Vengeance on thee and on thy stewardship. Yet wherefore curse I thee? thy leaden soule Had neuer power to mount vp to the knowledge Of the rich misterie closed in my purse. Oh no, ile curse myselse, mine eyes ile curse, They haue betrayd me, I will curse my tongue, That hath betraid me: Ile curse Agripyne, Shee hath betraid me. Sirens cease to sing, Your charmes haue tane effect, for now I see, All your inchantments were, to cosen me.

Musicke ceaseth.

Shad. What shall I doe with this ten pound, Sir ?

Andel. Goe buy with it a Chaine and hang thy felfe.

Now thinke I on my Fathers prophecie. Tell none (quoth he) the vertue, if you doe, Much shame, much griefe, much danger follows you. With teares I credit his divinitie. O fingers, were you vpright Justices, You would teare out mine eyes: had not they gazde On the fraile colour of a painted cheeke, None had betraid me: henceforth ile defie All beautie, and will call a louely eye, A Sun whofe fcorching beames burne vp our loyes, Or turne them blacke like Ethiopians. O women, wherefore are you borne mens woe, Why are your faces fram'd Angelicall? Your hearts of fpunges, foft and fmooth in fhew, But toucht, with poyfon they doe ouer-flow. -Had facred wifedome beene my Fathers Fate, He had died happie, I liu'd fortunate. Shaddow, beare this to beautious Agripyne, With it this meffage, tell her, ile reprooue Her couetous finne the leffe, because for gold, I fee that most mens soules too cheape are fold.

Shal I buy these spices to day or to morrow? And. To morrow? I, to morrow thou shalt buy them.

To morrow tell the Princesse I wil loue her, To morrow tell the king, ile banquet him, To morrow, Shaddow, will I give thee gold, To morrow pride goes bare and lust acold. To morrow will the rich man feede the poore. And vice to morrow vertue will adore, To morrow beggers fhall be crowned kings, This No-time, morrowes-time, no fweetnes fings: I pray thee hence; beare that to Agripyne.

Shad, Ile goe hence, because you fend me; but ile goe weeping hence, for griefe that I must turne villaine as many doe, and leaue you when you are vp Exit.

to the eares in aduerfitie.

Andel. Shee hath robd me, and now ile play the thiefe,

I steale from hence to Cyprus, for blacke shame Here (through my riots) brands my lostie name. Ile fell this pride for helpe to beare me thither, So pride and beggerie shall walke together: This world is but a Schoole of villanie, Therefore ile rob my brother, (not of gold, Nor of his vertues, vertue none will steale:) But (if I can,) ile steale his wishing Hat. And with that, wandring round about the world, Ile search all corners to find miserie, And where shee dwels, ile dwell, languish and die.

Exit.

Chorus. Gentels, if ere you have beheld the paf-

The combats of his foule who being a king, By fome vfurping hand hath beene deposde From all his royalties; euen fuch a foule, Such eyes, fuch heart fwolne big with fighes and teares, The star-crost sonne of Fortunatus weares. The thoughts crownd him a Monarch in the morne, Yet now hees bandyed by the Seas in fcorne, From wave to wave: his golden treasures spoyle Makes him in desperate language to intreate, The winds to fpend their furie on his life: But they (being milde in tyrannie) or fcorning To triumph in a wretches funerall, Toffe him to Cyprus. O what treacherie Cannot this Serpent gold intice vs to? He robs his brother of the Souldans prize, And hauing got his wish (the wishing Hat) He does not (as he voud) feeke miferie, But hopes by that to win his purfe againe, And in that Hope from Cyprus is he fled. If your fwift thoughts clap on their wonted wings, In Genoway may you take this fugitiue, Where having cozened many Jewellers, To England backe he comes, step but to court,

And there (difguizde) you find him bargoning For Jewels with the beautious Agripyne, Who wearing at her fide the vertuous purfe, He classes her in his armes, and as a Rauen, Griping the tender-hearted Nightingale, So flies he with her (wishing) in the ayre, To be transported to some wildernesses: Imagine this the place: see here they come.

Enter Andelocia and Agripyne.

Since they themselues have tongues, mine shall be dumbe. Exit.

Enter Andelocia with the wishing Hat on: Agripyna in his hand.

Agrip. What diuell art thou that affrights me thus, Haling a Princesse from her fathers court,

To fpoyle her in this fauage wilderneffe?

Andel. Indeed the diuel and the pick-purfe should alwaies slie together, (for they are sworne brothers:) but Madam Couetousnes, I am neither a diuel as you cal me, nor a Jeweller as I call my felse, no, nor a Jugler, yet ere you and I part, weele haue some leger-dimain together: do you know me?

Agrip. I am betrayd: this is the Cypriot. Forgiue mee, twas not I that changde thy purfe, But Athelftane my father, fend me home, And heres thy purfe againe: here are thy Jewels,

And I in fatiffaction of all wrongs.

Andel. Talke not you of fatisfaction, this is some recompence that I have you, tis not the purse I regard: put it off, and ile mince it as small as pie meate: the purse? hang the purse: were that gon, I can make another, and another, and another, I and another: tis not the purse I care for, but the purser: you, I you, Ist not a shame that a kings daughter, a saire Lady, a Lady not for Lords, but for Monarches, should for gold fell her loue, and when shee has her owne asking, and that there stands nothing betweene, then to cheate your fweete heart? O fie, fie, a shee cony-catcher? You must be dealt foundly with.

Agrip. Inioyne what paines thou wilt, and ile endure them,

fo thou wilt fend me to my fathers court.

Ande. Nay gods lid, y' are not gon fo: fet your heart at rest, for I have set vp my rest, that except you can runne swister then a Hart, home you goe not: what paines shall I lay vpon you? Let me see: I could serve you now but a slipperie touch: I could get a young King or two, or three of you, and then send you home, and bid their grand-sire king nurse them: I could pepper you, but I will not.

Agrip. O, doe not violate my chastitie.

Andd. No, why I tell you I am not given to the flesh, though I savor (in your nose) a little of the diuell, I could run away else, and starue you here.

Agrip. If I must die, doome me some easier death.

Andel. Or transforme you (because you loue picking) into a Squirell, and make you picke out a poore liuing here among the Nut trees: but I will not neither.

Agrip. What will my gentle Andelocia doe?

Andel. Oh, now you come to your old byas of cogging.

Agrip. I pray thee Andelocia, let me goe: Send me to England, and by heauen I fweare, Thou from all kings on earth my loue shalt beare.

And. Shall I in faith ?

Agrip. In faith, in faith thou shalt.

Andel. Here, god a mercie: now thou shalt not goe.

Agrip. Oh God.

Andel. Nay doe you heare Lady? crie not y' are best: no nor curse me not: if you thinke but a crabbed thought of me, the spirit that caried you in mine armes through the ayre, will tell me all: therefore fet your Sunday face vpont. Since you'le loue me, ile loue you, ile marrie you, and lie with you, and beget little Juglers: marie home you get not: England you'le fay is yours: but Agripyne, loue me, and I will make the whole world thine.

Agrip. I care not for the world, thou murdreft me, Betweene my forrow, and the fealding Sunne

I faint, and quickly will my life be done, My mouth is like a Furnace, and drie heate

Drinks vp my bloud. Oh God, my heart will burft, I die, vnleffe fome moysture quench my thirst.

Andel. S' hart now I am worse then ere I was before:

For halfe the world I would not have her die. Heres neither fpring nor ditch, nor raine, nor dew, Nor bread nor drinke: my louely Agripyne, Be comforted, fee here are Apple trees.

Agrip. Clime vp for Gods fake, reach me fome of them.

Andel. Looke vp, which of these Apples likes thee best?

Agrip. This hath a withered face, tis fome fweete fruit.

Not that, my forrowes are too fowre already.

Andel. Come hither, here are Apples like gold. Agrip. O, I for Gods fake, gather fome of these.

Ay me, would God I were at home againe.

Andel. Stand farder, least I chance to fall on thee. Climes vp.

Oh here be rare Apples, rare red-cheekt Apples, that cry come kiffe me: Apples, hold your peace, ile teach you to cry.

Eates one.

Agrip. O England, shal I ne're behold thee more?

Andel. Agripyna, tis a most Sugred delicious tast in ones mouth, but when tis downe, tis as bitter as gall.

Agrip. Vet gather some of them. Oh, that a grip. Yet gather fome of them. Oh, that a Princesse

Should pine for foode: were I at home againe, I should distaine to stand thus and complaine.

And. Heres one Apple that growes highest, Agripyna, and I could reach that, ile come downe.

Hee flands fishing with his girdle for it.

Agrip. Make hast, for the hot Sun doth feald my cheekes.

Andel. The funne kiffe thee lend catch put on Andel. The funne kiffe thee? hold, catch, put on my Hat, I will haue yonder highest Apple, though I die for 't.

Agrip. I had not wont be Sun-burnt, wretched mee.

O England, would I were againe in thee.

Exit. He leapes downe.

Swounds Agripyna, flay, O I am vndone, Sweete Agripyna, if thou hearst my voice, Take pittie of me, and returne againe. Shee flies like lightning: O she heares me not, I wish myselfe into a wildernesse. And now I shall turne wilde: here I shall famish. Here die, here curfing dye, here rauing die, And thus will wound my brest, and rent mine havre. What hils of Flint are growne vpon my browes? O me, two forked hornes, I am turn'd beaft, I have abuzde two bleffings, welth and knowledge, Wealth in my purfe, and knowledge in my Hat, By which being borne into the Courts of kings, I might have feene the wondrous workes of Joue, Acquirde Experience, Learning, Wifedome, Truth, But I in wildernesse tottred out my youth, And therefore must turne wild: must be a beast, An vgly beaft: my body hornes must beare, Because my soule deformitie doth weare. Liues none within this wood? If none but I Liue here (thankes heauen) for here none els shal die.

He lies downe and fleepes under the tree: Enter Fortune, Vice, Vertue, the Priefl: Satyres with Muficke, playing as they come in before Fortune. They play awhile. Fortune. See where my new-turnd diuel has built his hel.

Vice. Vertue, who conquers now? the foole is tane.

Vert. O fleepie sinne.

Vice. Sweete tunes wake him againe.

Musicke awhile, and then cease.

Fort. Vice fets too heauie on his drowzy foule, Musicks sweete concord cannot pierce his eare. Sing and amongst your Songs, mix bitter scorne.

Vert. Those that teare Vertue, must by Vice be torne.

The Song.

Verfe. Vertue fland afide: the foole is caught,
 Laugh to fee him, laugh alowd to wake him,
 Follies nets are wide, and neately wrought, Mocke his hornes, and laugh to fee Vice take him.

Quire. Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha, laugh, laugh in fcorne, Who's the foole? the foole, he wears a horne.

Andel. wakens and stands up.

2. Verfe. Vertue fland afide, mock him, mock him, mock him

Laugh alowd to fee him, call him foole. Error gaue him fucke, now forrowes rocke him,

Send the riotous beast to madnes schoole.

Quire. Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha, laugh, laugh in fcorne, Who's the foole? the foole, he weares a horne.

3. Verfe. Vertue fland afide: your schoole he hates.
Laugh alowd to see him, mocke, mocke, mock him.

Vanitie and hell keepe open gates, Hees in, and a newe nurse (Despaire) must rocke him. Quire. Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha, laugh, laugh in fcorne, Foole, foole, foole, foole, foole, weare still the horne.

When they have done finging, Vice and Vertue hold Apples out to him, Vice laughing, Vertue grieving.

Andel. O me, what hell is this? fiends, tempt me not.

Thou glorious diuell hence. O now I fee, This fruit is thine, thou hast deformed mee: Ideot avoide, thy gifts I loath to tast. Away: fince I am entred madnes Schoole, As good to be a beast, as be a foole. Away, why tempt you me? fome powrefull grace

Come and redeeme me from this hideous place.

Fort. To her hath Andelocia (all his life)
Sworne fealtie, woudst thou forsake her now?

Andel. Whose blessed tongue names Andelocia?

Fort. Hers, who (attended on by destinies)
Shortned thy Fathers life, and lengthens thine.

Andel. O facred Queene of chance, now fhorten mine,

Elfe let thy deitie take off this shame.

Fort. Wooe her, t' was shee that set it on thy head. Andel. She laughs to see me metamorphosed. Rifes. Vert. Wooe me, and ile take off this vgly scorne. Vice. Wooe me, and ile clap on another horne, Andel. I am beste with anguish, shame and death.

O bid the Fates worke fast, and stop my breath.

Fort. No Andelocia, thou must liue to see
Worse torments (for thy follies) light on thee.
This golden tree, which did thine eyes intice,
Was planted here by Vice: loe, here stands Vice:
How often hast thou sued to win her grace?

Andel. Till now, I neuer did behold her face.

Fort. Thou didft behold her at thy fathers death,
When thou in fcorne didft violate his will,
Thou didft behold her, when thy ftrecht-out arme
Catcht at the highest bough, the loftiest vice,

The fairest Apple, but the fowlest price. Thou didft behold her, when thy lickerish eye Fed on the beautie of faire Agripyne, Because th' adst gold, thou thoughtst al women thine. When look'ft thou off from her? for they whose foules Still reuell in the nights of vanitie, On the faire cheekes of Vice still fixe their eye. Because her face doth shine, and all her bosome Beares filuer Moones, thou wast enamord of her. But hadft thou vpward lookt, and feene thefe shames, Or viewd her round about, and in this glaffe Seene Idiots faces, heads of diuels and hell, And read this ha, ha, he, this merrie florie, Thou wouldst have loathd her: where, by louing her, Thou bearst this face, and wearst this vgly head, And if shee once can bring thee to this place, Lowd founds these ha, ha, he, sheele laugh apace.

Andel. O, re-transforme me to a glorious shape, And I will learne how I may loue to hate her.

Fort. I cannot re-transforme thee, wooe this woman.

Andel. This woman? wretched is my flate, when I,

To find out wisedome, to a soole must flie.

Fort. Foole, cleere thine eyes, this is bright Arete, This is poore Vertue, care not how the world Doth crowne her head, the world laughes her to fcorne, Yet Sibi fapit, Vertue knowes her worth. Runne after her, sheele give thee these and these Crownes and Bay-garlands: (honours victories:) Serue her, and shee will setch thee pay from heauen,

Or give thee fome bright office in the flarres.

Andc. Immortall Arete, Vertue divine, Kneeles.

O fmile on me, and I will ftill be thine.

Vert. Smile thou on me, and I will fill be thine: Though I am iealous of thy Apostasie, Ile entertaine thee: here, come tast this tree, Here's Physicke for thy sicke deformitie.

Andel. Tis bitter: this fruit I shall ne're disgest. Vert. Trie once againe, the bitternes soone dies.

Vice.Mines fweete, tast mine.

Vert. But being downe tis fowre,

And mine being downe has a delicious tafte. The path that leades to Vertues court is narrow, Thornie and vp a hill, a bitter iorney,

But being gon through, you find all heau'nly fweetes, The entrance is all flintie, but at th' end,

To towres of pearle and christall you ascend.

Ande. O delicate, O fweete Ambrofian rellish, And fee, my vglinesse drops from my browes, Thankes beautious Arete: O had I now My Hat and purfe againe, how I would shine, And gild my foule with none but thoughts divine.

Fort. That shall be tride, take fruit from both these trees,

By helpe of them, winne both thy purfe and Hat, I will instruct thee how, for on my wings To England shalt thou ride; thy vertuous brother Is (with that Shadow who attends on thee,) In London, there ile fet thee prefently. But if thou lofe our fauours once againe, To taste her sweetes, those sweetes must prooue thy bane.

Vice, who shall now be crownd with victorie? Vert. Shee that triumphes at last, and that must I.

Exeunt.

Enter Athelstane, Lincolne with Agripyne, Cyprus, Galloway, Cornewall, Chefter, Longavile and Montroffe.

Athelst. Lincolne, how fet'ft thou her at libertie? No other prison held her but your court, Lincol. There (in her chamber) hath shee hid her selfe Thefe two daies, onely to shake off that feare, Which her late violent rapture cast upon her.

Cypr. Where hath the beautious Agripyna been? In heauen or hel, in or without the world, I know not which, for as I oft have feene (When angrie Thamesis hath curld her lockes.)

A whirle-wind come, and from her frizeld browes, Snatch vp a handful of those sweatie pearles, That stoode vpon her forhead, which awhile, Being by the boystrous wind hung in the ayre, At length hath flung them downe and raized a storme. Euen with fuch furie was I wherryed vp, And by fuch force held prisoner in the cloudes, And throwne by fuch a tempest downe againe.

Corney. Some foule is dam'd in hell for this black deede.

Agrip. I have the purse safe, and anon your grace

Shall heare the wondrous historie at full.

Cypr. Tel me, tormenter, shall faire Agripyne, Without more difference be now christend mine ? My choice must be my Fathers saire con-

Agrip. fent.

Then shall thy choyce end in this Cyprus Athelst. prince.

Before the Sunne shall fixe times more arife, His royall marriage will we folemnife. Proclaime this honord match, come Agripyne, I am glad th' art here, more glad the purse is mine.

As they are all going in: Enter Andelocia and Shaddowe, like Irish Coster-mongers, Agripyna, Longauyle, and Montroffe stay listening to them, the rest Exeunt.

Both. Buy any Apples, feene Apples of Tamasco, feene Tamasio peepins: peeps feene, buy Tamasco peepins.

Damafco apples? good my Lord Mont-Agrip.

roffe.

Call vonder fellowes.

Montr. Sirra Coster-monger.

Shad. Who cals: peeps of Tamasco, seene peeps: I fat tis de sweetest apple in de world, tis better den de Pome water, or apple John.

Andel. By my trat Madam, tis reet Tamasco peepins, looke here els.

Shad. I dare not fay, as de Irishman my countrieman fay, tast de goodnesse of de fruit: No fayt tis farie teere mistris, by Saint Patrickes hand tis teere Tamasco apple.

Agrip. The faireft fruit that euer I beheld, Damafco apples, wherefore are they good?

Longa. What is your price of halfe a fcore of these is Both. Halfe a fcore, halfe a fcore? dat is doos many mester.

Longa. I, I, ten, half a fcore, thats five and five.

Andel. Feeue and feeue? By my trat and as Creeze faue me la, I cannot tell, wat be de price of feeue and feeue, but tis tree crowne for one Peepin, dat is de preez if you take em.

Shad. I fat, tis no leffe for Tamafco.

Agrip. Three crownes for one? what wondrous vertues haue they?

Shad. O, tis feene Tamafco apple, and fhall make you a great teale wife, and make you no foole, and make feene memorie.

Andel. And make dis fash be more faire and amiable, and make dis eyes looke alwaies louely, and make all de court & countrie burne in desire to kisse di none sweete countenance.

Montr. Apples to make a Lady beautifull?

Madam thats excellent.

Agrip. These Irishmen,

Some fay, are great diffemblers, and I feare, Thefe two the badge of their owne countrie weare.

Andel. By my trat, and by Saint Patrickes hand, and as Creez faue me la, tis no diffembler: de Irish man now and den cut di countrie-mans throate, but yet in fayt hee loue di countrie-man, tis no dissembler: dis feene Tamasco apple can make di sweete countenance, but I can take no lesse but three crownes for one, I weare out my naked legs and my footes, and my tods, and run hidder and didder to Tamasco for dem.

Shad. As Creez faue me la, hee fpeakes true: Peeps feene.

Agrip. Ile trie what power lies in Damasco fruit.

Here are ten crownes for three. So fare you well.

Montr. Lord Longauyle, buy fome.

Longa. I buy? not I:

Hang them, they are toyes, come Madam, let vs goe. Exeunt.

Both. Saint Patricke and Saint Peter, and all de holy Angels look upon dat fash and make it faire.

Enter Montroffe foftly.

Shad. Ha, ha, ha, fhees fped, I warrant.

Andel. Peace, Shaddow, buy any peepins, buy.

Both. Peeps feene, feene Tamasco apples.

Montr. Came not Lord Longauyle to buy fome fruit?

Andel. No fat, master, here came no Lords nor Ladies, but di none sweete selse.

Montr. Tis well, fay nothing, heres fix crownes for two:

You fay the vertues are to make one flrong.

Both. Yes fat and make fweet countenance & ftrong too.

Montr. Tis excellent, here: farwell, if these proue, Ile conquer men by strength, women by loue. Exit.

Enter Longauyle.

Both. Ha, ha, ha, why this is rare.

Shad. Peace, master, here comes another foole.

Both. Peepes feene, buy any peepes of Tamafoo?

Longa. Did not the Lord Montroffe returne to you?

Both. No fat, fweete master, no Lord did turne to vs: Peepes feene.

Longa. I am glad of it: here are nine crownes for thee:

What are the vertues befides making faire?

Andcl. O, twill make thee wondrous wife.

And dow shall bee no more a foole, but Shad. fweete face and wife.

Longa. Tis rare, farwell, I neuer yet durst wooe. None loues me: now ile trie what these can doe.

Andel. Ha, ha, ha, So, this is admirable, Shaddow, here end my torments in Saint Patrickes Purgatorie, but thine shall continue longer.

Shad. Did I not clap on a good false Irish face?

Andel. It became thee rarely.

Shad. Yet thats lamentable, that a false face should become any man.

Andel. Thou art a gull, tis all the fashion now, which fashion because weele keepe, step thou abroad, let not the world want fooles: whilft thou art commenfing thy knauerie there, ile proceede Doctor Dodipoll here: that done, thou Shaddow and I will fat our felues to behold the transformation of these sooles: goe flie.

I feare nothing, but that whilft wee striue to make others fooles, we shall weare the Coxcombes our felues, Pips fine &c. Exit Shaddow.

Enter Ampedo.

Andel. S'hart, here's my brother whome I haue abuzde:

His presence makes me blush, it strikes me dead, To thinke how I am metamorphosed. Feene peepins of Tamasco &c.

Amp. For shame cast off this Maske. Andel. Wilt thou buy any pips?

Amp. Mocke me no longer With idle apparitions: many a land Haue I with wearie feete and a ficke foule Meafurd to find thee; and when thou art found, My greatest griefe is, that thou art not lost: Yet loft thou art, thy fame, thy welth are loft, Thy wits are loft, and thou haft in their flead, With shame and cares, and mifery crownd thy head. That Shaddow that purfues thee, fild mine eares

With fad relation of thy wretchednesse,

Where is the purfe, and where my wishing Hat?

Andel. Where? and where? are you created Conftable, you stand so much vpon Intergatories? the purse is gone, let that fret you, and the Hat is gone, let that mad you: I runne thus through all trades to ouer-take them, if youle bee quiet, follow me, and helpe, if not, slie from me, and hang your selfe: wilt thou buy any pippins?

Exit.

Amp. O, how I grieue, to fee him thus transformd?
Yet from the circles of my iealous eyes,
He shall not start, till he haue re-posses

Those vertuous Jewels, which found once againe, More cause they ne're shall giue me to complaine, Their worth shall be consum'd in murdring slames, And end my griese, his ryot, and our shames.

Enter Athelflane, Agripyne, Montroffe and Longauyle with hornes, Lincolne and Cornwall.

Athelfl. In fpite of forcerie trie once againe, Trie once more in contempt of all dam'd fpels.

Agrip. Your maiestie fights with no mortall power. Shame and not conquest, hangs upon his strife. O, touch me not, you adde but paine to paine,

The more you cut, the more they grow againe.

Lincol. Is there no art to coniure downe this fcorne?

I ne're knew Phisicke yet against the horne.

Enter Cyprus.

Athelft. See, prince of Cyprus, thy faire Agripyne

Hath turnd her beautie to deformitie.

Cypr. Then I defie thee, Loue, vaine hopes, adew, You have mockt me long; in fcorne ile now mocke you.

I came to fee how the Lord Longauyle Was turnd into a monfter, and I find An object, which both firikes me dumbe and blind. To morrow flould have beene our marriage morne, But now my bride is shame, thy bridegrome scorne. O tell mee yet, is there no Art, no charmes, No desperate Physicke for this desperate wound?

Al meanes are tride, but no meanes can be found.

Then England, farwell: hapleffe maide, thy Cypr.

Through spitefull influence set our hearts at warres. I am infor to leave thee, and refigne My loue to griefe.

Enter Orleans and Galloway.

Agrip. All griefe to Agripyne.

Cypr. Adew, I would fay more, had I a tongue

Able to helpe his master: mightie king,

I humbly take my leaue, to Cyprus I, My fathers Sonne, must all such shame defie. Exit.

So doth not Orleans, I defie all those, That loue not Agripyne, and him defie, That dares but loue her halfe fo well as I. O pardon me, I haue in forrowes Jayle, Beene long tormented, long this mangled bosome Hath bled, and neuer durft expose her wounds. Till now, till now, when at thy beautious feete, I offer loue and life, O cast an eye Of mercy on me, this deformed face Cannot affright my foule from louing thee.

Agri. Talk not of loue, good Orleans, but of hate. Orle. What fentence will my loue pronounce on me?

Gall. Will Orleans then be mad? O gentle friend. Orle. O gentle, gentle friend, I am not mad: Hees mad, whose eyes on painted cheekes doe doate, O Galloway, fuch read beauties booke by roate. Hees mad, that pines for want of a gay flowre, Which fades when grief doth blaft, or ficknes lowre. Which heate doth wither, and white ages froft Nips dead: fuch fairenes, when tis found, tis loft. I am not mad, for louing Agripyne.

My loue lookes on her eyes, with eyes diuine, I doate on the rich brightnes of her mind, That facred beautie strikes all other blind, O make me happie then, fince my defires Are fet a burning by loues purest fires.

Athelft. So thou wilt beare her far from England fight

Inioy thy wishes.

Agrip. Locke me in fome caue, Where flaring wonders eye shall not be guiltie

To my abhorred lookes, and I will die To thee, as ful of loue as miferie.

Atheift. I am amazde and mad, fome speckled foule

Lies pawnd for this in Hell, without redemption, Some fiend deludes vs all.

Cornw. O vniust Fates,

Why doe you hide from vs this misterie?

Lincol. My Lord Montroffe, how long haue your browes worne

This fashion? these two seather-springs of horne?

Montr. An Irish kerne fold me Damasco apples,
Some two howres since, and (like a credulous soole)
Hee swearing to me that they had this power,
To make me strong in body rich in mind,
I did beleeue his words, tasted his fruit,
And since haue been attirde in this disguize.

Longa. I feare that villaine hath beguild me too. Cornuv. Nay before God he has not cozend you,

You have it foundly.

Longa. Me he made beleeue,
One apple of Damasco would inspire
My thoughts with wisedome, and vpon my cheekes
Would cast such beautie, that each Ladies eye,
Which lookt on me, should love me presently.

Agrip. Defire to looke more faire, makes me more fowle,

Those apples did intice my wandring eye, To be enamord of deformitie. Athelft. This prooues that true, which oft I have heard in fchooles,

Those that would seeme most wife, doe turne most fooles.

Lincol. Here's your best hope, none needes to hide his face,

For horned foreheads fwarme in euery place.

Enter Chester bringing Andelocia like a French Doctor.

Athelft. Now Chester, what Physitions hast thou found?

Cheft. Many, my leige, but none that have true skill

To tame fuch wilde difeases: yet here's one, A Doctor and a Frenchman, whome report

Of Agripynes griefe hath drawne to court.

Athelft. Cure her, and Englands treasorie shall stand,

As free for thee to vfe, as rayne from heauen.

Montr. Cure me, and to thy Coffers I will fend, More gold from Scotland then thy life can fpend.

Logna. Cure Longauile, and all his wealth is thine. Andel. He Monsieur Long-villaine gra tanck you: Gra tanck your mashessie a great teale artely by my trat: where be dis Madam Princeza dat be so mush tormenta? O Jeshu: one, 2: an tree, 4 & 5, seez horne: Ha, ha, ha, pardona moy prea wid al mine art, for by my trat, me can no point shose but laugh, Ha, ha, ha, to marke how like tree bul-beggera, dey stand. Oh, by my trat and sat, di diuela be whoreson, scuruie, paltry, ill sauore knaue to mocke de Madam, and gentill-home so: Ha, ha, ha, ha.

Lincol. This Doctor comes to mocke your maiestie. Ande. No by my trat la, but me loua musha musha merymant: Come Madam, prea-artely stand still, and letta mee seele you: dis horne, O tis prettie horne, dis be facile, easie for pull de vey, but Madame dis O be grand, grand horne, dissicill, and very deepe, tis perilous, a grand Laroone. But Madam, prea be patient, we shall take it off vell.

Athe. Thrice haue we parde them off, but with fresh paine,

In compaffe of a thought they rife againe.

Andel. Its true, tis no easie mattra, to pull horne off, tis easie for pull on, but hard for pull off, some horne bee so good fellow, hee will still inhabit in de mans pate, but tis all one for tat, I shall snap away all dis: Madam trust dis downe into your little belly.

Agrip. Father, I am in feare to tafte his physicke.

First let him worke experiments on those.

Andel. Ile fawce you for your infidelitie. Afide.

In no place can I fpie my wishing Hat.

Longa. Thou learned Frenchman, trie thy skill on me, More vgly then I am, I cannot be.

Montr. Cure me, and Montroffe welth shall all be thine.

Andel. Tis all one for dat: shall doe presently, Madam prea marke me: Monsieur, shamp dis in your two shaps, so, now Monsieur Long-villaine, dis so: nowe dis, seare noting, tis eshelent medicyne: so, now cram dis into your guts, and belly: So, now snap away dis whoreson sowre diuela; Ha, ha, Is no point good?

Puts Gallowayes hornes off.

Athelft. This is most strange. Wast painefull Longauyle?

Longa. Ease tooke them off, and there remaines no paine.

Agrip. O trie thy facred Phyficke on me.

Andel. No by my trat, tis no poffibla, tis no poffibla, al de mattra, all de ting, all de fubflance, all de medicyne, be among his and his belly: tis no poffibla, till me prepare more.

Athelft. Prepare it then, and thou shalt have more gold

From Englands Coffers, then thy life can waft.

Andel. I mush buy many costily tings dat grow in Arabia, in Asia, and America, by my trat tis no possibla, till anoder time, no point.

Agrip. There's nothing in the world, but may for gold

Be bought in England, hold your lap ile rayne

A shower of Angels.

Fie, fie, fie, you no credit le dockature ? Andel. Ha, but vel, tis all one for tat: tis no mattera for gold: Vel, vel, vel, vel, me haue fome more, prea fay noting, shall bee presently prepara for your hornes.

Shee has my purfe, and yonder lies my Hat,

Worke braines, and once more make me fortunat.

Vel, vel, vel, be patient Madam, prefently, prefently, be patient, mee haue two, tree, fowre and fiue medicines for de horne: prefently Madam, fland you der, prea wid all mine art, fland you all der: and fay noting, fo: nor looke noting dis vey: fo, prefently, presently Madam, snip dis horne off wid de rushes & anoder ting by and by, by and by, by and by, prea looke none dis vey, and fay noting. Gets his Hat vp.

Athelft. Let no man speake, or looke, vpon his life.

Doctor, none here shall rob thee of thy skill.

Andel. So, taka dis hand: winck now prea artely wid your two nyes: why fo.

Would I were with my brother Ampedo.

Exit with her.

Agrip. Helpe, Father, helpe, I am hurried hence perforce.

Athelst. Draw weapons, wheres the princesse, follow him,

Stay the French Doctor, stay the Doctor there. Cornwall and fome other run out, and enter prefently.

Cornw. Stay him, sh'art who dare stay him? tis the diuell

In likenesse of a Frenchman, of a Doctor. Looke how a rafcall Kyte having fwept vp A Chicken in his clawes, fo flies this hell-hound In th' ayre with Agripyne in his armes.

Orle. Mount euery man vpon his fwiftest horse.

Flie feuerall waies, he cannot beare her farre.

Gall. These paths weele beate.

Exeunt Gall. and Orleans.

And this way shall be mine. Corna. This way, my Leige, ile ride.

Athelft. And this way I:

No matter which way, to feeke miferie. Exit Athelf. Loga. I can ride no way, to out-runne my shame.

Yes, Longauile, lets gallop after too, Montr. Doubtleffe this Doctor was that Irish diuell.

That cozend vs, the medicine which he gaue vs,

Tafted like his Damafco villanie.

To horse, to horse, if we can catch this fiend, Our forked shame shall in his heart bloud end.

Longa. O how this mads me, that all tongues in fcorne.

Which way fo ere I ryde, cry, Ware the horne.

Exeunt.

Enter Andelocia, with Agripyne, Ampedo and Shaddow.

Agrip. O gentle Andelocia pittie me, Take off this infamie, or take my life.

Andel. Your life I you thinke then that I am a true Doctor indeede, that tie vp my liuing in the knots of winding sheetes: your life? no, keepe your life, but deliuer your purfe: you know the theifes falutation, Stand & deliuer. So, this is mine, and thefe yours: Ile teach you to liue by the sweate of other mens browes.

Shad. And to strive to be fairer then God made her.

Andel. Right, Shaddow: therefore vanish, you haue made me turne Iugler, and crie hey-paffe, but your hornes shall not repasse.

Agrip. O gentle Andelocia.

And. Andelocia is a Nettle: if you touch him gently, heele fling you.

Shad. Or a role, if you pul his fweete stalke heele prick you.

Andel. Therefore not a word, goe, trudge to your Father: figh not for your purfe, money may be got by you, as well as by the little Welfhwoman in Cyprus, that had but one horne in her head, you have two; and perhaps you shall cast both: as you vse me, marke those words well, as you vse me, nay, y'are best slie, ile not endure one word more. Yet stay too, because you intreate me so gently, and that ile make some amends to your Father, although I care not for any King in Christendome, yet hold you, take this Apple, eate it as you goe to court, and your hornes shall play the cowards and fall from you,

Agrip. O gentle Andelocia.

Andel. Nay away, not a word.

Shad. Ha, ha, ha, &c. Ware hornes.

Exit Agrip. weeping.

Andel. Why doest thou laugh, Shaddow?

Shad. To fee what a horne plague followes coueteoufneffe and pride.

Amp. Brother, what misteries lie in all this?

Andel. Trickes, Ampedo, trickes, deuises, and mad Herogliphickes, mirth, mirth, and melody. O, there's more musicke in this, then all the Gammoth ares, and Sol fa Res, in the world; here's the purse, and here's the Hat: because you shal be sure ile not start, weare you this you know his vertue; if danger beset you, slie & away: A fort of broken-shind limping legd Jades runne hobling to seeke vs: Shaddow, weele for all this haue one sit of mirth more, to make vs laugh and be sat.

Shad. And when we are fat, master, weele doe as all gluttons doe, laugh and lie downe.

Andel. Hiet hee to my chamber, make ready my richest attire, ile to Court presently.

Shad. Ile goe to Court in this attire, for apparell is but the shaddow of a man, but shaddow is the substance of his apparell.

Exit Shaddow.

Andel. Away, away, and meete me prefently. Amp. I had more neede to crie, away to thee.

Away, away with this wilde lunacie,

Away with ryots.

Away with your puritie, brother, y'are an Andel. Affe, why doth this purfe fpit out gold but to be fpent? why liues a man in this world, to dwell in the Suburbs of it, as you doe? Away forren simplicitie, away: are not eyes made to fee faire Ladies? hearts to loue them? tongues to court them, & hands to feele them? Out your Stocke, you stone, you logs end: Are not legs made to daunce, and shall mine limp vp and downe the world after your cloth-stockin-heeles! you have the Hat, keepe it, anon ile vifit your vertuous countenance againe, adew, pleafure is my fweete mistris, I weare her loue in my Hat, and her soule in my heart: I have fwome to bee merry, and in spite of Fortune and the blacke-browd destinies, ile neuer be fad. Exit.

Amped. Goe, foole, in fpite of mirth, thou shalt be

Ile burie halfe thy pleasures in a graue
Of hungrie slames, this fire I did ordaine
To burne both purse and Hat: as this doth perish,
So shall the other; count what good and bad
They both haue wrought, the good is to the ill,
As a small Pible to a mightie hill.
Thy glorie and thy mischieses here shall burne,
Good gifts abuzde to mans consuson turne.

Enter Longauile, and Montroffe with Souldiers.

Longa. This is his brother: Souldiers, bind his armes.

Montr. Bind armes and legs, and hale the fiend away.

Amp. Vnciuill: wherefore must I taste your spite?

Longa. Art thou not one of Fortunatus sonnes?

Amped. I am, but he did neuer doe you wrong.

Longa. The diuell thy brother has, villaine, looke

here.

Montr. Where is the beautious purfe and wishing Hat?

Amped. My brother Andelocia has the purfe, This way heele come anon to paffe to court, Alas, that finne should make mens hearts so bold, To kill their soules for the base thirst of gold. The wishing Hat is burnt.

Montr. Burnt? Souldiers bind him.
Tortures shall wring both hat and purse from you,
Villaine, ile be reueng'd for that base scorne,
Thy hell-hound brother clapt vpon my head.

Longa. And fo will Longauyle.

Away with him.

Montr. Drag him to yonder towre, there fhackle him,

And in a paire of Stockes, locke vp his heeles, And bid your wishing Cap deliuer you. Giue vs the purse and Hat, weele set thee free, Els rot to death and starue.

Amp. Oh tyranny, you need not fcorne the badge which you did beare:

Beafts would you be, though hornes you did not weare.

Montr. Drag hence the cur; come noble Longauyle,

One's fure, and were the other fiend as fast,
Their pride should cost their liues: their purse and Hat

Shall be both ours, weele fhare them equally.

Longa. That will be fome amends for arming me.

Enter Andelocia and Shaddow after him.

Montr. Peace, Longauyle, yonder the gallant comes.

Longa. Y'are well encountred.

Andel. Thankes, Lord Longauyle.

Longa. The king expects your prefence at the court.

Andel. And thither am I going.

Shad. Pips fine, fine apples of Tamasco, ha, ha, ha. Montr. Wert thou that Irishman that cozend vs? Shad. Pips fine, ha, ha, ha, no not I: not Shaddow.

Andel. Were not your Apples delicate and rare?

Longa. The worst that ere you fold; Sirs, bind him fast.

Andel. What, wil you murder me? helpe, help, fome helpe.

Shad. Helpe, helpe, helpe. Exit Shaddow. Montr. Follow that Dog, and ftop his balling throate.

Andel. Villaines, what meanes this barbarous trechery?

Louga. We meane to be reueng'd for our difgrace.
Montr. And ftop the golden current of thy wast.
Andel. Murder, they murder me, O call for helpe.
Long. Thy voice is spent in vaine, come, this purse.

· ins purie,

This wel-fpring of your prodigalitie.

Andel. Are you appointed by the king to this?

Montr. No, no, rife, fpurne him vp: know you who's this?

Andel. My brother Ampedo? Alas, what fate

Hath made thy vertues fo infortunate?

Amp. They ryot and the wrong of these two Lords,

Who (causelesse) thus do starue me in this prison.

Longa. Striue not y'are best, villaines, list in his legs. Andel. Traitors to honor, what doe you intend?

Longa. That ryot shall in wretchednesse haue end. Question thy brother with what cost hees fed,

And fo assure thou shalt be banquetted.

Excunt they two.

Amp. In want, in miferie, in woe and care, Poore Ampedo his fill hath furfeted:

My want is famine, bolts my miferie,

My care and woe should be thy portion.

Andel. Give me that portion, for I have a heart

Shall fpend it freely, and make bankrowt
The proudeft woe that euer wet mans eye.
Care with a mischiese? wherefore should I care?
Haue I rid side by side by mightie kings,
Yet be thus bridled now? Ile teare these fetters.
Murder, crie murder, Ampedo, alowd.
To beare this scorne our Fortunes are too proud.

Amp. O folly, thou hast powre to make slesh glad,

When the rich foule in wretchednesse is clad.

Ande. Peace, foole, am not I Fortunes minion? These bands are but one wrincle of her frowne, This is her Euening maske, her next mornes eye Shall ouer-shine the Sunne in maiestie.

Amp. But this fad night will make an end of me. Brother, farwell, griefe, famine, forrow, want,

Haue made an end of wretched Ampedo.

Andel. Where is the wishing Hat?

Amp. Confum'd in fire.

Ande. Accurfed be those hands that did destroy it, That would redeeme vs, did we now enjoy it.

Amp. Wanton, farwel, I faint, deaths frozen hand Congeales lifes little Riuer in my breft.

No man before his end is truely bleft.

Dyes.

Andel. O miserable, miserable soule.

Thus a foule life makes death to looke more foule.

Enter Longauyle and Montroffe with a halter.

Longa. Thus fhall this golden purfe divided be, One day for you, another day for me.

Montr. Of daies anon, fay, what determine you,

Shall they have libertie, or shall they die ?

Long. Die fure: and fee, I thinke the elder's dead. And. I, murderers, he is dead, O facred wifdom, Had Fortunatus beene enamored Of thy celestiall beautie, his two fonnes Had shind like two bright Sunnes.

Longa. Pul hard, Montroffe.

Andel. Come you to strangle me? are you the hangman?

Hell-hounds y' are dam'd for this impietie. Fortune, forgiue me, I deferue thy hate, My felfe haue made myfelfe a reprobate: Vertue, forgiue me, for I haue transgreft Against thy lawes, my vowes are quite forgot, And therefore shame is falne to my sinnes lot. Riches and knowledge are two gifts diuine. They that abuse them both as I haue done, To shame, to beggerie, to hell must runne. O confcience hold thy shing, cease to afflict me. Be quicke, tormentors, I desire to die. No death is equall to my miserie. Cyprus, vaine world, and Vanitie farwell. Who builds his heauen on earth, is sure of hell.

Lon. He's dead: in fome deepe vault lets throw their bodies.

Montr. First let us see the purse, Lord Longauyle. Longa. Here tis, by this weele fill this towre with gold.

Montr. Frenchman, this purfe is counterfeit.

Longa. Thou lyeft.

Scot, thou hast cozend me, giue me the right, Els shall thy bosome be my weapons graue.

Montr. Villaine, thou shalt not rob me of my due.

They fight: Enter Athelftane, Agripyna, Orleans, Galloway, Cornewall, Chefter, Lincolne, and Shaddow with weapons at one dore: Fortune, Vice, and their attendants at another dore.

All. Lay hands upon the murderers, strike them downe.

Fortune. Surrender vp this purfe for this is mine.

All. Are these two diuels, or some powers diuine?

Shad. O see, see, O my two masters, poore Shaddowes substances; what shall I doe? whose body shall Shaddow now sollow?

Fort. Peace, Ideot, thou shalt find rich heapes of fooles.

That will be proud to entertaine a Shaddow. I charme thy babbling lips from troubling me. You need not hold them, fee, I fmite them downe Lower then hell: bafe foules, fincke to your heauen.

Vice. I doe arrest you both my prisoners.

Fort. Stand not amazde, you gods of earth, at this, Shee that arrefteth these two sooles is Vice, They have broke Vertues laws, Vice is her serieant, Her Jayler and her executioner.

Looke on those Cypriots, Fortunatus sonnes, They and their Father were my minions, My name is Fortune.

All. O dread deitie.

Fort. Kneele not to me: if Fortune list to frowne, You need not fal downe, for sheele spurne you downe, Arise, but sooles, on you ile triumph thus. What haue you gaind by being couetous? This prodigall purse did Fortunes bounteous hand Bestow on them, their ryots made them poore, And set these markes of miserable death, On all their pride, the samine of base gold Hath made your soules to murders hands be sold, Onely to be cald rich. But Ideots see The vertues to be fled, Fortune hath caused it so, Those that will all deuowre, must all forgoe.

Athelft. Most facred Goddesse. Fortune. Peace, you flatterer.

Thy tongue but heapes more vengeance on thy head. Fortune is angrie with thee, in thee burnes A greedie couetous fire, in Agripyne Pride like a Monarch reuels, and those finnes Haue lead you blind-fold to your former shames, But Vertue pardond you, and so doth Fortune.

Attella and Agrie, All thankes to both your force.

Athelft. and Agrip. All thankes to both your facred deities.

Fort. As for these Mettall-eaters, these base thieues, Who rather then they would be counted poore,

Will dig through hell for gold, you were forgiuen By Vertues generall pardon; her broade feale Gaue you your lines, when shee tooke off your hornes. Yet having fcarce one foote out of the Jayle, You tempt damnation by more desperate meanes, You both are mortall, and your paines shall ring Through both your eares, to terrifie your foules, As pleafe the Judgement of this mortall king.

Athelst. Faire Empresse of the world, since you

refigne

Your power to me, this fentence shall be mine, Thou shalt be torturd on a wheele to death, Thou with wild horses shalt be quartered.

Ha, ha, weake Judge, weake iudgement, I reuerfe

That fentence, for they are my prisoners, Embalme the bodies of those Cypriots, And honour them with princely buriall, For those doe as you please, but for these two, I kiffe you both, I loue you, y' are my minions. Until their bands, Vice doth reprine you both, I fet vou free.

Both. Thankes, gracious deitie.

Vice. Be gon, but you in libertie shall find More bondage then in chaines, fooles, get you hence.

Both wander with tormented confcience.

Longa. O horrid Judgement, that's the hell indeede.

Mon. Come, come, our death ne're ends if confcience bleede.

Both. O miserable, miserable men. Excunt. Fortune. Fortune triumphes at this, yet to appeare, All like my felfe, that which from those I tooke,

King Athelftane I will beflow on thee,

And in it the old vertue I infuse: But, king, take heede how thou my gifts doest vie. England shall ne're be poore, if England striue, Rather by vertue, then by wealth to thriue.

Enter Vertue, crownd: Nymphes and kings attending on her, crownd with Olive branches and lawrels, musicke founding.

Vice. Vertue ? alas good foule, shee hides her head.

Vert. What enuious tongue faid, Vertue hides her head ?

Vice. Shee that will drive thee into banishment. Fort. Shee that hath conquerd thee: how dar'st thou come,

Thus trickt in gawdy Feathers, and thus garded, Which crowned kings and Muses, when thy soe Hath trod thus on thee, and now triumphes so? Where 's vertuous Ampedo? See, hees her slaue, For sollowing thee this recompence they have.

Vert. Is Ampedo her flaue? why thats my glorie. The Idiots cap I once wore on my head, Did figure him, those that (like him) doe muffle Vertue in clouds, and care not how shee shine, Ile make their glorie like to his decline: He made no vse of me, but like a miser, Lockt up his wealth in rustie barres of sloth: His face was beautifull, but wore a maske, And in the worlds eyes feemd a Blackamore. So perish they that so keepe vertue poore.

Vice. Thou art a foole to firine, I am more firong, And greater then thy felfe, then Vertue flie, And hide thy face, yeeld me the victorie.

Vert. Is Vice higher then Vertue? thats my glorie,

The higher that thou art, thou art more horrid, The world will loue me for my comlynesse.

Fortu. Thine owne felfe loues thy felfe: why on the heads

Of Agripyne, Montrofte and Longauyle, (English, Scot, French) did Vice clap vgly hornes, But to approue that English, French and Scot, And all the world els, kncele and honour Vice,

But in no Countrie, Vertue is of price?

Vert. Yes, in all Countries Vertue is of price, In euery kingdome fome diuiner breft Is more enamord of me then the rest.

Haue English, Scot, and French bowd knees to thee ?

Why that's my glorie too, for by their shame, Men will abhor thee and adore my name. Fortune, thou art too weake, Vice th' art a foole, To fight with me, I fuffred you awhile, T' ecclips my brightnes, but I now will shine, And make you fweare your beautie's base to mine.

Fort. Thou art too infolent, fee here 's a court Of mortall Judges, lets by them be tride,

Which of vs three shall most be deifide.

Vice. I am content. Fort. And I.

Vert. So am not I.

My Judge shall be your facred deitie. Vice. O miserable me, I am vndon.

Exit Vice and her traine.

All. O flop the horrid monster.

Vert. Let her runne. Fortune, who conquers now?

Fort. Vertue, I fee,

Thou wilt triumph both ouer her and me. All. Empresse of heaven and earth.

Fort. Why doe you mocke me?

Kneele not to me, to her transfer your eyes, There fits the Oueene of Chance, I bend my knees, Lower then yours: dread goddesse, tis most meete, That Fortune fall downe at thy conqu'ring feete. Thou facred Empresse that commandst the Fates, Forgiue what I have to thy handmaid don, And at thy Chariot wheeles Fortune shall run, And be thy captiue and to thee refigne All powers which heau'ns large Patent haue made mine.

Vert. Fortune th'art vanquisht: facred deitie, O now pronounce who winnes the victorie, And yet that sentence needes not, since alone, Your vertuous presence Vice hath ouer-throwne, Yet to confirme the conquest on your side, Looke but on Fortunatus and his sonnes Of all the welth those gallants did possesse. Onely poore Shaddow is lest comfortlesse, Their glorye's saded and their golden pride.

Sha. Onely poore Shaddow tels how poore the Sha. Onely poore Shaddow tels how poore they died.

Vert. All that they had, or mortall men can haue, Sends onely but a Shaddow from the graue. Vertue alone liues ftill, and liues in you, I am a counterfeit, you are the true, I am a Shaddow, at your feete I fall, Begging for thefe, and thefe, my felfe and all. All thefe that thus doe kneele before your eyes, Are shaddowes like my felfe, dred Nymph it lyes In you to make vs substances. O doe it, Vertue I am sure you loue, shee woes you to it. I read a verdict in your Sun-like eyes, And this it is: Vertue the victorie.

All. All loudly cry, Vertue the victorie.

Vert. Vertue the victorie: for ioy of this,

Those selfe fame himnes which you to Fortune sung

Let them be now in Vertues honour rung.

The Song.

Vertue fmiles: crie hollyday, Dimples on her cheekes doe dwell, Vertue frownes, crie wellada, Her loue is Heauen, her hate is Hell. Since heau'n and hell obey her power, Tremble when her eyes doe lowre.

174 The Comedie of Olde Fortunatus.

Since heat'n and hell her power obey, Where shee smiles, crie hollyday.

Hollyday with ioy we crie,
And bend, and bend, and merily,
Sing hymnes to vertues deitie:
Sing hymnes to Vertues deitie.

As they all offer to goe in, Enter the two old men.

THE EPILOGUE AT COURT.

1. Ay flay, poore pilgrims, when I entred first The circle of this bright celestiall Sphære, I wept for ioy, now I could weepe for feare.

2. I feare we all like mortall men shall proue

Weake (not in loue) but in expressing loue.

Let euery one beg once more on his knee, One pardon for himfelfe, and one for mee, For I intic'd you hither: O deere Goddeffe, Breathe life in our nombd fpirits with one fmile, And from this cold earth, we with lively foules Shal rife like men (new-borne) and make heau'n found With Hymnes fung to thy name, and praiers that we May once a yeere fo oft enjoy this fight, Til these yong boyes change their curld locks to white, And when gray-winged Age fits on their heads, That fo their children may fupply their Steads, And that heau'ns great Arithmetician, (Who in the Scales of Nomber weyes the world) May still to fortie two, and one yeere more, And flil adde one to one, that went before, And multiply fowre tennes by many a ten: To this I crie Amen.

All. Amen, amen.

 Good night (deere miftris) those that wish thee harme,

Thus let them stoope vnder destructions arme.

All. Amen, Amen, Amen.

Ad Detractorem.

Non potes in Nugas dicere plura meas, Fpfe ego quam dixi.—Qui fe mirantur, in illos Virus habe: Nos hac nouimus efse nihil.

To the World.

Orld, I was once refolu'd to bee round with thee, because I know tis thy fashion to bee round with enery bodie: but the winde shifting his point, the Veine turn'd: yet because thou wilt sit as Judge of all matters (though for thy labour thou wear'st Midasses eares, and art Monstrum horrendum, informe: Ingens cui lumen ademptum; whose great Poliphemian eye is put out) I care not much if I make description (before thy Vniuersality) of that terrible Poetomachia, lately commenc'd betweene Horace the second, and a band of leanewitted Poetasters. They have bin at high wordes, and so high, that the ground could not serve them, but (for want of Chopins) have slalk't upon Stages.

Horace hal'd his Poetasters to the Barre, the Poetasters vntruss'd Horace: how worthily eyther, or how wrongfully, (World) leave it to the Jurie: Horace (questionles) made himselfe beleeve, that his Burgonian wit might desperately challenge all commers, and that none durst take up the foyles against him: It's likely, if he had not so beleiu'd, he had not bin so deceived, for hee was answer'd at his owne weapon: And if before Apollo himselfe (who is Coronator Poetarum) an Inquisition should be taken touching this lamentable merry murdering of Innocent Poetry: all mount Helicon to Bun-hill, it would be found on the Poetasters side Se defendendo. Notwithstanding the Doctors think otherwife. I meete one, and he runnes full Butt at me with his Satircs hornes. for that in untrufsing Horace 7 did onely whip his fortunes, and condition of life, where the more noble Reprehension had bin of his mindes Deformitie, whose greatnes if his Criticall Lynx had with as narrow eyes, observed in himselfe, as it did little spots upon others, without all disputation: Horace would not have left Horace out of Euery man in's Hymour. His fortunes? why does not he taxe that onely in others? Read his Arraignement and see. A second Cat-a-mountaine moves, and calles me Barren, because my braines could bring foorth no other Stigmaticke than Tucca, whome Horace had put to making, and begot to my hand: but I wonder what language Tucca would have spoke, if honest Capten Hannam had bin borne without a tongue? Ift not as lawfull then for mee to imitate Horace, as Horace Hannam? Befides, If I had made an opposition of any other new-minted fellow, (of what Test fo ener) hee had bin out-fac'd, and out-weyed by a fettled former approbation: neyther was it much improper to fet the same dog upon Horace, whom Horace had fet to worrie others.

I could here (cenen with the feather of my pen) wipe off other ridiculous imputations: but my best way to answer them, is to laugh at them: onely thus much I protest (and sweare by the dininest part of true Poesie) that (howsoever the limmes of my naked lines may bee and I know have bin, tortur'd on the racke) they are free from conspiring the least difgrace to any man, but onely to our new Horace; neyther should this ghost of Tucca, have walkt vp and downe Poules Church-yard, but that hee was rais'd vp (in print) by newe Exorcifmes. World, if thy Hugenes will beleive this: doc. if not, I care not: for I dedicate my booke not to thy Greatnes, but to the Greatnes of thy scorne: Defying which, let that mad Dog Detraction bite till his teeth bee worne to the stumps: Enuy feede thy Snakes so fat with poyson till they burst: World, let all thy Adders shoote out their Hidraheaded-forked Stinges, Ha, ha, Nauci; if none will take my part, (as I desire none) yet I thanke thee (thou true Venusian Horace) for these good wordes thou giv'st me: Populus me sibylat at mihi plaudo. World farewell.

The Vntrussing of the Humo-rous Poet.

Enter two Gentlewomen strewing of flowers.

Ome bedfellow come, strew apace, strew, strew: in good troth tis pitty that these flowers must be trodden vnder seete as they are like to bee anon.

2. Pitty, alacke pretty heart, thou art forry to fee any good thing fall to the ground: pitty? no more pitty, then to fee an Innocent Mayden-head deliuered vp to the ruffling of her new-wedded husband. Beauty is made for vfe, and hee that will not vie a fweete foule well, when she is vnder his fingers, I pray Venus he may neuer kisse a fair and a delicate, soft, red, plump-lip.

1. Amen, and that's torment enough.

2. Pitty? come foole, fling them about lustily; flowers neuer dye a fweeter death, than when they are smoother'd to death in a Louers bosome, or else paue the high wayes, ouer which these pretty, simpring, fetting things, call'd brides, must trippe.

I. I pray thee tell mee, why doe they vie at weddings to furnish all places thus, with sweete hearbes and flowers?

2. One reason is, because tis —— ô a most sweet thing to lye with a man.

I. I think tis a O more more more more fweet to lye with a woman.

2. I warrant all men are of thy minde: another reason is, because they sticke like the scutchions of madame chastity, on the sable ground, weeping in their stalkes, and wincking with theyr yellow-sunke eyes, as loathe to beholde the lamentable sall of a Maydenhead: what senceless thing in all the house, that is not nowe as melancholy, as a new set-up Schoolemaster?

τ. Troth I am.

2. Troth I thinke thou mourns, because th'ast mist thy turne, I doe by the quiuer of Cupid: you see the torches melt themselues away in teares: the instruments weare theyr heart stringes out for sorrow: and the Siluer Ewers weepe most pittifull Rosewater: fiue or fixe payre of the white innocent wedding gloues, did in my sight choose rather to be torne in peeces than to be drawne on; and looke this Rosemary, (a fatall hearbe) this dead-mans nose-gay, has crept in amongst these flowers to decke th' inuisible coarse of the Bride's Maydenhead, when (oh how much do we poore wenches suffer) about eleuen or twelue, or one a clock at midnight at surthess, it descends to purgatory, to giue notice that Cælessine (hey ho) will neuer come to lead Apes in hell.

I fee by thy fighing thou wilt not.

2. If I had as many Mayden-heads, as I have hayres on my head, Ide venture them all rather then to come into fo hot a place; prethy firew thou, for my little armes are weary.

t. I am fure thy little tongue is not.

2. No faith that's like a woman bitten with fleas, it neuer lyes stil: fye vpont, what a miserable thing tis to be a noble Bride, there's such delayes in rising, in fitting gownes, in tyring, in pinning Rebatoes, in poaking, in dinner, in supper, in Reuels, & last of all in cursing the poore nodding sidlers, for keeping Mistris Bride so long vp from sweeter Reuels; that, oh I could neuer endure to put it vp without much bickering.

1. Come th'art an odde wench, hark, harke, musicke? nay then the Bride's vp.

2. Is she vp? nay then I see she has been downe: Lord ha mercy on vs, we women fall and fall still, and when we have husbands we play upon them like Virginall Jackes, they must ryse and fall to our humours, or else they'l neuer get any good straines of musicke out of vs; but come now, have at it for a mayden-head.

Irew.

As they firew, enter Sir Quintilian Shorthofe with Peeter Flash and two or three feruingmen, with lights.

Sir quin. Come knaues, night begins to be like my felfe, an olde man; day playes the theefe and fleales vpon 'vs; O well done wenches, well done, well done, you have covered all the flony way to church with flowers, tis well, tis well, ther's an Embleame too, to be made out of these flowers and flones, but you are honest wenches, in, in, in.

2. When we come to your yeares, we shal learne what honesty is, come pew-fellow. Execut.

Sir quin. Is the mulicke come yet? fo much to do! Ift come?

Omnes. Come fir.

Sir quin. Haue the merry knaues pul'd their fiddle cases ouer their instruments eares?

Flash. As foone as they entred our gates, the noyse went, before they came nere the great Hall, the faint hearted villiacoes founded at least thrice.

Sir quin. Thou shouldst haue reuiu'd them with a Cup of burnt wine and sugar; sirra, you, horse-keeper, goe, bid them curry theyr strings: Is my daughter vp yet?

Flash. Vp fir? the was feene vp an houre agoe. Sir quin. Shee's an early flurrer, ah firra.

Flash. Shee'l be a late flurrer soone at night fir.

Sir Quint. Goe too Pecter Flash, you have a good fodaine flash of braine, your wittes husky, and no maruaile, for tis like one of our Comedians beardes, still ith stubble: about your busines and looke you be nymble to flye from the wine, or the nymble wine will catch you by the nose.

Flash. If youre wine play with my nose Sir, Ile knocke's coxcombe.

Sir quin Doe Peeter, and weare it for thy labour; Is my Sonne in Law Sir Walter Terell ready yet?

Omnes. Ready Sir. Exit another. Sir Quin. One of you attend him: Stay Flash, where's the note of the guestes you have inuited ?

Flash. Here Sir, Ile pull all your guestes out of my bosome; the men that will come, I have cross, but all the Gentlewomen have at the tayle of the last letter a pricke, because you may read them the better.

Sir Quin. My spectacles, lyght, lyght, knaues: Sir Adam Prickshaft, thou hast crost him, heele come.

Flash. I had much a doe fir, to draw Sir Adam Prickeshast home, because I tolde him twas early, but heele come.

Sir quint. Justice Crop, what will he come ? Flash. He took phisicke yesterday fir. Sir quint. Oh then Crop cannot come.

Flash. O Lord yes, fir yes, twas but to make more roome in his Crop for your good cheare, Crop will come.

Sir quint. Widdow Mineuer.

Fàish. Shee's prickt you fee fir, and will come.

Sir quint. Sir Vaughan ap Rees, oh hee's crost twise, so, so, so, then all these Ladyes, that fall downewardes heere, will come I see, and all these Gentlemen that stand right before them.

Flash. All wil come.

Sir quint. Well fayd, heere, wryte them out agen, and put the men from the women; and Pecter, when we are at Church bring wine and cakes, be light & nimble good Flash, for your burden will be but light.

Enter fir Adam a light before him.

Sir Adam Prickeshaft. God morrow, god morrow: goe, in, in, in, to the Bridegroome, taste a cup of burnt wine this morning, twill make you slye the better all the day after,

Sir Adam. You are au early flyrrer Sir Quintilian

Shorthofe.

Sir qui. I am fo, it behoues me at my daughters wedding, in, in, in; fellow put out thy torch, and put thy felfe into my buttery, the torch burnes ill in thy hand, the wine will burne better in thy belly, in, in.

Flash. Ware there, roome for Sir Adam Pricke-shaft: your Worship— Exit.

Enter Sir Vaughan and Mistris Mineuer.

Sir quin. Sir Vaughan and Widdow Mineuer, welcome, welcome, a thousand times: my lips Mistris Widdow shall bid you God morrow, in, in, one to the Bridegroome, the other to the Bride.

Sir Vaughan. Why then Sir quintilian Shorthofe, I will ftep into miftris Bride, and Widdow Mineuer, shall goe vpon M. Bridegroome.

Mineu. No pardon, for by my truely Sir Vaughan, Ile ha no dealings with any M. Bridegroomes.

Sir quin. In widdow in, in honest knight in. Sir Vaug. I will vsher you mistris widdow.

Flash. Light there for Sir Vaughan; your good Worship—

Sir Vaug. Drinke that shilling Ma. Peeter Flash, in your guttes and belly.

Fla. Ile not drinke it downe fir, but Ile turne it into that which shall run downe, oh merrily!

Exit Sir Vaughan.

Enter Blunt, Crispinus, Demetrius, and others with Ladies, lights before them.

Sir quin. God morrow to these beauties, and Gentlemen, that haue Vshered this troope of Ladyes to my daughters wedding, welcome, welcome all; musick? nay then the bridegroome's comming, where are these knaues heere?

Flash. All here fir.

Enter Terill, Sir Adam, Sir Vaughan, Celestine, Mineuer, and other Ladies and attendants with lights.

Teri. Good morrow Ladies and fayre troopes of gallants, that haue depof'd the drowzy King of fleep, to Crowne our traine with your rich presences,

I falute you all;

Each one share thanks from thanks in generall.

Crif. God morrow M. Bride-groome, mistris Bride.

Omnes. God morrow M. Bride-groome.

Ter. Gallants I shal intreate you to prepare, For Maskes and Reuels to defeate the night, Our Soueraigne will in person grace our marriage.

Sir quin. What will the king be heer?

Ter. Father he will.

Sir quin. Where be these knaues? More Rosemary and gloues, gloues; gloues: choose Gentlemen; Ladyes put on soft skins vpon the skin of softer hands; so, so: come mistris Bride take you your place, the olde men first, and then the Batchelors; Maydes with the Bride, Widdows and wives together, the priest's at Church, tis time that we march thether.

Ter. Deare Blunt at our returne from Church, take paines to step to Herace, for our nuptiall fongs;

now Father when you pleafe.

Sir quin. Agreed, fet on, come good Sir Vaughan, must we lead the way?

Sir Vau. Peeter you goe too fast for Mistris pride: fo, gingerly, gingerly; I muse why Sir Adam Pricke-shaft sticks so short behinde?

Sir quin. He follows close, not too fast, holde vp knaues,

Thus we lead youth to church, they vs to graues.

Exeunt.

Horrace fitting in a fludy behinde a Curtaine, a candle by him burning, bookes lying confufcdly: to himfelfe.

Hor. To thee whofe fore-head fwels with Rofes, Whofe most haunted bower Giues life & sent to euery flower, Whose most adored name incloses, Things abstruse, deep and divine, Whose yellow tresses shine, Bright as Eoan fire.

O me thy Priest inspire.
For I to thee and thine immortall name, In—in—in golden tunes, For I to thee and thine immortall name—

In—facred raptures flowing, flowing, fwimming, fwimming:

In facred raptures fwimming,

Immortal name, game, dame, tame, lame, lame, lame, Pux, hath, shame, proclaime, oh—

In facred raptures flowing, will proclaime, not-

O me thy Priest inspyre !

For I to thee and thine immortall name, In flowing numbers fild with spright and flame, Good, good, in flowing numbers fild with spright & flame.

Enter Afinius Bubo.

Afini. Horace, Horace, my fweet ningle, is alwayes in labour when I come, the nine Mufes be his midwiues I pray Jupiter: Ningle.

Wo. In flowing numbers fild with spright and flame,

To thee.

Afini. To me? I pledge thee fweet Ningle, by Bacchus quaffing boule, I thought th' adft drunke to me.

Hor. It must have been in the deuine lycour of Pernassus, then in which, I know you would scarce have pledg'd me, but come sweet roague, sit, sit.

Afini. Ouer head and eares yfaith? I have a facke-full of newes for thee, thou shalt plague some of them, if God fend vs life and health together.

Hor. Its no matter, empty thy facke anon, but come here first honest roague, come.

Afini. Ift good, Ift good, pure Helicon ha?

Hor. Dam me ift be not the best that euer came from me, if I have any judgement, looke sir, tis an Epithalamium for Sir Walter Terrels wedding, my braines haue giuen affault to it but this morning.

Asin. Then I hope to see them slye out like gun powder ere night.

Hor. Nay good roague marke, for they are the best lynes that euer I drew.

Afin. Heer's the best lease in England, but on, on,

Ile but tune this Pipe.

Hor. Marke, to thee whose fore-head fwels with Roses.

Asin. O sweet, but will there be no exceptions taken, because fore-head and swelling comes together?

Hor. Push away, away, its proper, besides tis an elegancy to fay the fore head fwels.

Afin. Nay an't be proper, let it fland for Gods

loue.

Hor. Whose most haunted bower, Giues life and fent to euery flower, Whose most adored name incloses, Things abstruse, deep and diuine. Whose yellow tresses shine, Bright as Eoan fire.

Afini. O pure, rich, ther's heate in this, on, on.

Hor. Bright as Eoan fire,

O me thy Priest inspire!
For I to thee and thine immortall name . . . marke

In flowing numbers fild with fpryte and flame.

Afini. I mary, ther's fpryte and flame in this.

Hor. A pox, a this Tobacco.

Afin. Wood this case were my last, if I did not marke, nay all's one, I have always a confort of Pypes about mee, myne Ingle is all fire and water; I markt, by this Candle (which is none of Gods Angels) I remember, you started backe at sprite and stame.

Hor. For I to thee and thine immortall name,

In flowing numbers fild with sprite and flame,

To the Loues mightieft King,

Himen ô Himen, does our chase muse sing.

Afin. Ther's muficke in this;
Hor. Marke now deare Afinius.
Let these virgins quickly see thee,
Leading out the Bride,
Though theyr blushing cheekes they hide,
Yet with kisses will they see thee,
To vntye theyr Virgin zone,
They grieue to lye alone.

Afini. So doe I by Venus.

Hor. Yet with kisses wil they see thee, my Muse has marcht (deare roague) no farder yet: but how ist? how ist? nay prethee good Asinius deale plainly, doe not flatter me, come, how?—

Afin. If I have any judgement:

Hor. Nay look you Sir, and then follow a troope of other rich and labour'd conceipts, oh the end shall be admirable! but how if tweet Bubo, how, how?

Afin. If I have any Judgement, tis the best stuffe that euer dropt from thee.

Hor. You ha feene my Acrosticks?

Afi. Ile put vp my pypes and then Ile fee any thing.

Hor. Th'ast a Coppy of mine Odes to, hast not Bubo ?

Así. Your odes? O that which you fpoke by word a mouth at th' ordinary, when Musco the gull cryed Mew at it:

Hor. A pox on him poore braineles Rooke: and you remember, I tolde him his wit lay at pawne with his new Sattin fute, and both would be loft, for not fetching home by a day.

Aft. At which he would faine ha blusht but that his painted cheekes would not let him.

Hor. Nay firra the Palinode, which I meane to flitch to my Reuels, shall be the best and ingenious piece that euer I swet for; stay roague, Ile sat thy spleane and make it plumpe with laughter.

Afi. Shall I? fayth Ningle, shall I fee thy fecrets?

Hor. Puh my friends.

Asi. But what fardle's that? what fardle's that?

Hor. Fardle, away, tis my packet; heere lyes intomb'd the loues of Knights and Earles, heere tis, heere tis, heere tis, heere tis, heere tis, sir Walter Terils letter to me, and my answere to him: I no sooner opened his letter, but there appeared to me three glorious Angels, whome I ador'd, as subjectes doe their Soueraignes: the honest knight Angles for my acquaintance, with such golden baites—but why doost laugh my good roague? how is my answere, prethee, how, how?

Ass. Answere, as God judge me Ningle, for thy wit thou mayst answer any Iustice of peace in England I warrant; thou writ'st in a most goodly big hand too, I like that, I readst as leageably as some that have bin fau'd by their neck-verfe.

Hor. But how dost like the Knights inditing?

Aft. If I have any indgement; a pox ont, heer's worthipfull lynes indeed, heer's fluffe: but firra Ningle, of what fashion is this knights wit, of what blocke?

Hor. Why you fee; wel, wel, an ordinary Ingenuity, a good wit for a knight, you know how, before God I am haunted with fome the most pittyfull dry gallants.

Afini. Troth fo I think; good peeces of lantskip, fhew best a far off.

Hor. 1, 1, 1, excellent fumpter horses, carry good cloaths; but honest roague, come, what news, what newes abroad? I have heard a the horses walking a' the top of Paules.

Afi. Ha ye? why the Captain Tucca rayles vpon you most preposterousty behinde your backe, did you not heare him?

Ho. A pox upon him: by the white & foft hand of Minerua, Ile make him the most ridiculous: dam me if I bring not's humor ath stage: &—scuruy lymping tongu'd captaine, poore grease buffe Ierkin, hang him: tis out of his Element to traduce me: I am too well ranckt Asinius to bee stab'd with his dudgion wit: sirra, Ile compose an Epigram vpon him, shall goe thus—

Aft. Nay I ha more news, ther's Crifpinus & his Iorneyman Poet Demetrius Faninus too, they fweare they'll bring your life & death vpon'th stage like a Bricklayer in a play.

Hor. Bubo they must presse more valiant wits than theyr own to do it: me ath stage? ha, ha. Ile starue theire poore copper-lace work masters, that dare play me: I can bring (& that they quake at) a prepar'd troope of gallants, who for my sake shall distaste euery vnsalted line, in their sly-blowne Comedies.

Afi. Nay that's certaine, ile bring 100 gallants of my ranke.

Hor. That fame Crifpinus is the filliest Dor, and Faninus the slightest cob-web-lawne peece of a Poet, oh God!

Why should I care what euery Dor doth buz In credulous eares, it is a crowne to me, That the best iudgements can report me wrong'd.

Aft. I am one of them that can report it:

Hor. I thinke but what they are, and am not moou'd.

The one a light voluntuous Penaler

The one a light voluptuous Reueler, The other, a strange arrogating puffe, Both impudent, and arrogant enough.

Afin. S'lid do not Criticus Reuel in these lynes, ha Ningle ha?

Knocking.

Hor. Yes, they're mine owne.

Crif. Horrace.

Dem. Flaccus. Crif. Horrace, not vp yet;

Hor. Peace, tread foftly, hyde my Papers; who's this fo early?

Some of my rookes, fome of my guls?

Crif. Horrace, Flaccus.

Hor. Who's there ? flray, treade foftly: Wat Terill on my life: who's there? my gowne fweete roague, fo, come vp, come in.

Enter Crifpinus and Demetrius.

Crif. God morrow Horrace.

Hor. O, God faue you gallants.

Crif. Afinius Bubo well met.

Ağın. Nay, I hope fo Crifpinus, yet I was ficke a quarter of a yeare a goe of a vehement great toothatch: a pox ont, it bit me vilye, as God fa me la I knew twas you by your knocking fo foone as I faw you; Demetrius Fannius, wil you take a whiffe this morning? I haue tickling geare now, heer's that will play with your nose, and a pype of mine owne scowring too.

Dem. I, and a Hodgshead too of your owne, but that will neuer be scowred cleane I feare.

Afin. I burnt my pype yesternight, and twas neuer vsde since, if you will tis at your seruice gallants, and Tobacco too, tis right pudding I can tell you; a Lady or two, tooke a pype full or two at my hands, and praized it for the Heauens, shall I fill Flannius?

Dem. I thanke you good Afinius for your loue,

I fildome take that Phificke, tis enough

Hauing fo much foole to take him in fnuffe.

Hor. Good Bubo read fome booke, and giue vs leaue. . . .

Af. Leaue haue you deare Ningle, marry for reading any book Ile take my death vpont (as my Ningle fayes) tis out of my Element: no faith, ever fince I felt one hit me ith teeth that the greatest Clarkes are not the wifeft men, could I abide to goe to Schoole, I was at As in prefenti and left there: yet because Ile not be counted a worse soole then I am, Ile turne ouer a new leafe.

Afinius reads and takes Tobacco.

Hor. To fee my fate, that when I dip my pen In diftilde Rofes, and doe ftruie to dreine, Out of myne Inke all gall; that when I wey Each fillable I write or fpeake, because Mine enemies with sharpe and fearching eyes Looke through & through me, caruing my poore labours

Like an Anotomy: Oh heauens to fee, That when my lines are meafur'd out as straight As even Paralels, tis strange that still, Still fome imagine they are drawne awry. The error is not mine, but in theyr eye, That cannot take proportions.

Crif. Horrace, Horrace,

To fland within the flot of galling tongues, Proues not your gilt, for could we write on paper, Made of these turning leaues of heauen, the cloudes, Or speake with Angels tongues: yet wise men know, That some would shake the head, tho Saints should

Some fnakes must hiffe, because they 're borne with stings.

Hor. Tis true.

Crif. Doe we not fee fooles laugh at heauen? and mocke

The Makers workmanship; be not you grieu'd If that which you molde faire, vpright and smooth, Be skrwed awry, made crooked, lame and vile, By racking coments, and calumnious tongues, So to be bit it rankcles not: for innocence May with a feather brush off the foulest wrongs. But when your dastard wit will strike at men In corners, and in riddles folde the vices Of your best friends, you must not take to heart,

If they take off all gilding from their pilles, And onely offer you the bitter Coare.

Hor. Crifpinus.

Cri. Say that you have not fworne vnto your Paper,

To blot her white cheekes with the dregs and bottome Of your friends private vices: fay you fweare Your loue and your allegiance to bright vertue Makes you defcend fo low, as to put on The Office of an Executioner, Onely to firike off the fwolne head of finne, Where ere you finde it flanding, Say you fweare;

Say you tweare;
And make damnation parcell of your oath,
That when your lashing iestes make all men bleed,
Yet you whip none. Court Citty, country, friends,
Foes, all must smart alike; yet Court, nor Citty,
Nor foe, nor friend, dare which at you; great pitty.

Dem. If you fweare, dam me Faninus, or Crifpinus,

Or to the law (Our kingdomes golden chaine)
To Poets dam me, or to Players dam me,
If I brand you, or you, tax you, focurge you:
I wonder then, that of fine hundred, foure
Should all point with their fingers in one inflant

At one and the fame man? Hor. Deare Faninus.

Dem. Come, you cannot excuse it.

Hor. Heare me, I can—

Dem. You must daube on thicke collours then to hide it.

Crif. We come like your Phifitions, to purge Your ficke and daungerous minde of her difeafe.

Your ficke and daungerous minde of her difeate.

Dem. In troth we doe, out of our lones we come,
And not reuenge, but if you strike vs still,
We must defend our reputations:
Our pens shall like our swords be alwayes sheath'd,
Vnlesse too much prouockt, Horace if then
They draw bloud of you, blame vs not, we are men:

Come, let thy Muse beare vp a smoother sayle, Tis the easiest and the basest Arte to raile.

Hor. Deliuer me your hands, I loue you both, As deare as my owne foule, prooue me, and when I shall traduce you, make me the scorne of men.

Both. Enough, we are friends.

Cri. What reads Afinius?

Afi. By my troth heer's an excellent comfortable booke, it's most sweet reading in it.

Dem. Why, what does it finell of Bubo?

Afi. Mas it finels of Rofe-leaues a little too.

Hor. Then it must be a sweet booke, he would faine persume his ignorance.

Afi. I warrant he had wit in him that pen'd it. Crif. Tis good yet a foole will confesse truth.

Afi. The whoorfon made me meete with a hard flile in two or three places as I went ouer him.

Dem. I believe thee, for they had need to be very lowe & easie Stiles of wit that thy braines goe ouer.

Enter Blunt and Tucca.

Blun. Wher's this gallant? Morrow Gentlemen: what's this deuise done yet Horace?

Hor. Gods fo, what meane you to let this fellow dog you into my Chamber?

Blun. Oh, our honest Captayne, come, prethee let vs fee.

Tuc. Why you bastards of nine whoores, the Muses, why do you walke heere in this gorgeous gallery of gallant inuentions, with that whooreson poor lyme & hayre-rascall? why—

Crif. O peace good Tucca, we are all sworne friends,

Tuc. Sworne, that Iudas yonder that walkes in Rug, will dub you Knights ath Poste, if you serue vnder his band of oaths, the copper-sact rascal wil for a good supper out sweare twelve dozen of graund Iuryes.

Blun. A pox ont, not done yet, and bin about it three dayes?

Horr. By Iesu within this houre, saue you Captayne Tucca.

Tuc. Dam thee, thou thin bearded Hermaphrodite, dam thee, Ile faue my felse for one I warrant thee, is this thy Tub Diogines?

Hor. Yes Captaine this is my poore lodging.

Afin. Morrow Captaine Tucca, will you whiffe this morning?

Tuc. Art thou there goates pizzel; no godamercy Caine I am for no whiffs I, come hether fheep-skin-weauer, s'foote thou lookst as though th' adst beg'd out of a Iayle: drawe, I mean not thy face (for tis not worth drawing) but drawe neere: this way martch, follow your commaunder you scoundrell: So, thou must run of an errand for mee Mephostophiles.

Hor. To doe your pleafure Captayne I will, but whether.

Tuc. To hell, thou knowst the way, to hell my fire and brimstone, to hell; dost stare my Sarsens-head at Newgate? dost gloate? He march through thy dunkirkes guts for shooting ieses at me.

Hor. Deare Captaine but one word.

Tuc. Out bench-whiftler out, ile not take thy word for a dagger Pye: you browne-bread-mouth flinker, ile teach thee turne me into Bankes his horfe, and to tell gentlemen I am a Iugler, and can flew trickes.

Hor. Captaine Tucca, but halfe a word in your eare.

Tuc. No you staru'd rascal, thou't bite off mine cares then, you must have three or source suites of names, when like a lowsie Pediculous vermin th'ast but one suite to thy backe: you must be call'd Asper, and Criticus, and Horace, thy tytle's longer a reading then the Stile a the big Turkes: Asper, Criticus, Quintus, Horatius, Flaccus.

Hor. Captaine I know vpon what eucn bases I fland, and therefore—

Tuc. Bases? wud the roague were but ready for me.

Blun. Nay prethee deare Tucca, come you shall shake—

Tuc. Not hands with great Hunkes there, not hands, but Ile shake the gull-groper out of his tan'd skinne.

Crifp. & Deme. For our fake Captaine, nay prethee holde.

Tuc. Thou wrongst heere a good honest rascall Crispinus, and a poore varlet Demetrius Fanninus (bretheren in thine owne trade of Poetry) thou sayst Crispinus Sattin dublet is Reauel'd out heere, and that this penurious sneaker is out of elboes, goe two my good full mouth'd ban-dog, Ile ha thee friends with both.

Hor. With all my heart captaine Tucca, and with you too, Ile laye my handes vnder your feete, to keepe them from aking.

Omnes. Can you have any more?

Tuc. Saift thou me fo, olde Coale come? doo't then; yet tis no matter neither, Ile haue thee in league first with these two rowly powlies: they shal be thy Damons and thou their Pithyasse; Crispinus shall give thee an olde cast Sattin suite, and Demetrius shall write thee a Scene or two, in one of thy strong garlicke Comedies; and thou shalt take the guilt of conscience for't, and sweare tis thine owne olde lad, tis thine owne: thou never yet fels't into the hands of sattin, didst?

Hor. Neuer Captaine I thanke God.

Tuc. Goe too, thou shalt now King Gorboduck, thou shalt, because Ile ha thee damn'd, Ile ha thee all in Sattin: Asper, Criticus, Quintus, Horatius, Flaccus, Crispinus shal doo't, thou shalt doo't, heyre apparant of Helicon, thou shalt doo't.

Afi. Mine Ingle weare an olde cast Sattin suite ? Tuc. I waser-face your Ningle.

Afi. If he carry the minde of a Gentleman, he'll fcorne it at's heeles.

Tuc. Mary muffe, my man a ginger-bread, wilt eate any fmall coale?

Afi. No Captaine, wod you should well know it, great coale shall not fill my bellie.

Tuc. Scorne it, dost fcorne to be arrested at one of his olde Suites?

Hor. No Captaine, Ile weare any thing.

Tuc. I know thou wilt, I know th'art an honest low minded Pigmey, for I ha feene thy shoulders lapt in a Plaiers old cast Cloake, like a Slie knaue as thou art: and when thou ranst mad for the death of Horatio: thou borrowedst a gowne of Roscius the Stager, (that honest Nicodemus) and fentest it home lowse, didst not? Responde, didst not?

Blun. So, so, no more of this, within this houre— Hor. If I can found retreate to my wits, with whome this leader is in skirmish, Ile end within this houre.

Tuc. What wut end ? wut hang thy felfe now? has he not writ Finis yet Jacke? what will he bee fifteene weekes about this Cockatrices egge too? has hee not cackeld yet? not laide yet?

Blunt. Not yet he fweares hee will within this houre. Tuc. His wittes are fomewhat hard bound: the Puncke his Muse has fore labour ere the whoore bee deliuered: the poore saffron-cheeke Sun-burnt Gipsie wantes Phisicke; giue the hungrie-sace pudding-pyeeater ten Pilles: ten shillings my faire Angelica, they'l make his Mufe as yare as a tumbler.

Blu. He shall not want for money if heele write.

Tuc. Goe by Ieronimo, goe by; and heere, drop the ten shillings into this Bason; doe, drop, when Iacke! hee shall call me his Mæcenas: besides, Ile dam vp's Ouen-mouth for rayling at's: So, ist right Iacke! ist sterling! fall off now to the vanward of yonder source Stinkers, and aske alowde if wee shall goe ? the Knight shall defray Iacke, the Knight when it comes to Summa totalis, the Knyght, the Knight.—

Blu. Well Gentlemen, we'll leaue you, shall we goe Captaine? good Horrace make some hast.

Hor. Ile put on wings.

Asin. I never fawe mine Ingle so dasht in my life before.

Crif. Yes once Afinius.

Ah. Mas you fay true, hee was dasht worse once going (in a rainy day) with a speech to 'th Tilt-yard, by Gods lyd has call'd him names, a dog would not put vp, that had any discreation.

Tuc. Holde, holde vp thy hand, I ha feene the day thou didft not fcome to holde vp thy golles; ther's a Souldiers Spur-royall, twelue pence: Stay, because I know thou canst not write without quick-filuer: vp agen, this goll agen, I giue thee double presse-money: Stay, because I know thou hast a noble head, ile deuide my Crowne, ô royall Porrex, ther's a teston more; goe, thou and thy Muse munch, doe, munch; come my deare Mandrake, if Skeldring fall not to decay, thou shalt slorish: farewell my sweet Amadis de Gaule, farewell.

Hor. Deare Captaine.

Tuc. Come Iacke.

Dem. Nay Captaine stay, we are of your band.

Tuc. March faire then:

Cri. Horace farewell, adue Afinius. Exeunt.

Afi. Ningle lets goe to fome Tauerne, and dine together, for my stomache rifes at this scuruy leather Captaine.

Hor. No, they have choakt me with mine owne difgrace,

Which (fooles) ile fpit againe euen in your face. Exeunt.

Enter Sir Quintilian Shorthofe, Sir Adam, Sir Vaugham, Mineuer with feruingmen.

Sir quinti. Knaues, Varlets, what Lungis, giue me a dozen of flooles there.

Sir Vau. Sefu pleffe vs all in our fiue fences a peece, what meane yee fir Kintilian Sorthofe to ftand fo much on a dozen ftooles, heere be not preeches inuffe to hyde a dozen ftooles, vnleffe you wiffe fome of vs preake his finnes.

Sir quin. I fay fir Vaughan no shinne shal be broken heer, what lungis, a chayre with a stronge backe, and a fost bellie, great with childe, with a cushion for this reverend Lady.

Mineu. God neuer gaue me the grace to be a Lady, yet I ha beene worshipt in my conscience to my face a thousand times, I cannot denye fir Vaughan, but that I haue all implements, belonging to the vocation of a Lady.

Sir Vaughan. I trust mistris Mineuer you have all a honest oman shud haue?

Min. Yes perdie, as my Coach, and my fan, and a man or two that ferue my turne, and other things which Ide bee loath every one should fee, because they shal not be common, I am in manner of a Lady in one point.

Sir Vaug. I pray mistris Mineuers, let vs all see that point for our better vnderstanding.

Mi. For I ha fome thinges that were fetcht (I am fure) as faire as fome of the Low Countries, and I payde fweetly for them too, and they tolde me they were good for Ladies.

Sir qui. And much good do't thy good heart faire widdow them.

Min. I am fayre enough to bee a Widdow, Sir

Quintilian.

Sir Vaug. In my foule and confcience, and well fauoured enough to be a Lady: heere is fir Kintilian Sorthofe, and heere is fir Adam Prickshaft, a fentleman of a very good braine, and well headed; you fee he shootes his bolt sildome, but when Adam lets goe, he hits: and heere is fir Vaughan ap Rees, and I beleeue if God sud take vs all from his mercy, as I hope hee will not yet; we all three loue you, at the bottome of our bellyes, and our hearts: and therefore miftris Mineuer, if you pleafe, you shall be knighted by one of vs, whom you fall defire to put into your deuice and minde.

Min. One I must have fir Vaughan.

Sir quin. And one of vs thou shalt have widdow.

Min. One I must have, for now every one seekes to crow over me.

Sir Vaug. By Sefu and if I finde any crowing ouer you, & he were a cocke (come out as farre as in Turkeys country) tis possible to cut his combe off.

Min. I muse why sir Adam Prickshaft slyes so farre from vs.

Sir Adam. I am in a browne study, my deare, if loue should bee turned into a beast, what beast hee were sit to bee turned into.

Sir quinti. I thinke Sir Adam an Affe, because of his bearing.

Min. I thinke (fauing your reuerence) Sir Adam a puppy, for a dog is the most louing creature to a christian that is, vales it be a childe.

Sir Ad. No, I thinke if loue fhould bee turn'd away, and goe to ferue any beaft, it must bee an Ape, and my reason-

Sir Vaug. Sir Adam, an Ape? ther's no more reason in an Ape, than in a very plaine Monkey; for an Ape has no tayle, but we all know, or tis our duty to know, loue has two tailes; In my sudsment, if loue be a beast, that beast is a bunce of Reddis; for a bunce of Reddis is wife meate without Mutton, and so is loue.

Mi. Ther's the yawning Captaine (fauing your reuereuce that has fuch a fore mouth) would one day needes perfwade me, that loue was a Rebato; and his reason was (fauing your reuerence) that a Rebato was worne out with pinning too often; and so he faid loue was.

Sir Vaug. And Master Captaine Tucca fayd wisely too, loue is a Rebato indeede: a Rebato must be poaked; now many women weare Rebatoes, and many that weare Rebatoes—

Sir Adam. Must be poakt.

Sir Vau. Sir Adam Prickshaft has hit the cloute.

Sir qui. The Muficke fpeakes to vs, we'll haue a daunce before dinner.

Enter Sir Walter Terrill, Cælestine, Blunt, Crispinus, and Demetrius, cuery one with a Lady.

All. The King's at hand.

Ter. Father the King's at hand.

Muficke talke lowder, that thy filuer voice,

May reach my Soueraignes eares.

Sir Vaug. I pray doe fo, Mustions bestir your fingers, that you may have vs all by the eares.

Sir quin. His Grace comes, a Hall varlets, where be my men? blow, blow your colde Trumpets till they fweate; tickle them till they found agen.

Blun. Best goe meete his Grace.

All. Agreed.

b Sir Vaug. Pray all stand bare, as well men as women: Sir Adam is best you hide your head for seare your wise braines take key-colde: on afore Sir Kintilian; Sentlemen sall in before the Ladyes, in seemely order and fashion; so this is comelye.

Enter Trumpets founding, they goe to the doore, and meete the King and his Traine, and whilft the Trumpets found the King is welcom'd, kiffes the Bride, and honors the Bridegroome in dumbe flew.

King. Nay if your pleafures shrinke at fight of vs, We shall repent this labour, Mistris Bride You that for speaking but one word to day, Must loose your head at night; you that doe stand Taking your last leaue of virginity; You that being well begun, must not be Maide: Winne you the Ladies, I the men will wooe, Our felse will leade my blushing Bride with you.

Sir Vaughau. God bleffe your Maiefty, and fend you to be a long King William Rufus ouer vs, when he fees his times & pleafures.

King. Wee thanke you good Sir Vaughan, wee will take your meaning not your words..

Sir quint. Lowde Musicke there.

Sir Vau. I am glad your Maiesty will take any thing at my hands; my words I trust in Sesu, are spoken betweene my soule and body together, and haue neither Felonies nor treasons about them, I hope.

King. Good words, Sir Vaughan, I prethee give vs leaue.

Vaug. Good words fir Vaughan? thats by interpretation in englifh, you'r best giue good words fir Vaughan: god and his Ansells blesse me, what ayles his maiestye to be so tedious and difficult in his right mindes now, I holde my life that file rascall-rymer Horace hath puzd and puzd aboue a hundred merie tales and lyce, into his great and princely eares: by god and he vse it, his being Phœbus priest cannot saue him, if hee were his Sapline too ide prease vpon his coxcomb: good lord blesse me out of his maiesties celler: King Williams, I hope tis none offences to make a supplication to god a mightie for your long life: for by shefu I haue no meaning in't in all the world, vnles rascalls be here that will haue your grace take shalke for shees, and vnlesse Horace has sent lyce to your maiesty.

King. Horace, what's he fir Vaughan?

Vaugh. As hard-fauourd a fellow as your maiestie has seene in a sommers day: he does pen, an't please your grace, toyes that will not please your grace: tis a Poet, we call them Bardes in our Countrie, singes ballads and rymes, and I was mightie sealous, that his Inke which is blacke and full of gall, had brought my name to your maiestie, and so listed up your hye and princely coller.

King. I neither know that Horace, nor mine anger,

If as thou faift our high and princely choller

Be vp, wee'l tread it downe with daunces; Ladies Loofe not your men; faire measures must be tread, When by fo faire a dauncer you are lead.

Vaugh. Mistris Miniuer:

Miu. Perdie fir Vaughan I cannot daunce.

Perdie by this Miniuer cappe, and acording to his mafesties leave too, you fall be put in among theife Ladies, & daunce ere long I trest in god, the faking of the feetes.

They daunce a straine, and whilst the others keepe on, the King and Celestine stay.

Kin.That turne faire Bride flews you must turne at night,

In that fweet daunce which fteales away delight.

Cal. Then pleasure is a thiefe, a fit, a feauer: Kin. True, he's the thiefe, but women the receiver.

Another change; they fall in, the rest goe on.

This change fweet Maide, faies you must change your life,

As Virgins doe.

Virgins nere change their life,

She that is wiu'd a maide, is Maide and wife.

But she that dyes a Maide;— Kin.Cæl.

Thrice happy then. Kin. Leades Apes in hell.

Cal. Better leade Apes then men.

At this third change they end, and she meetes the King.

Kin. Well met.

 $C\alpha l$. Tis ouertaken. Kin.Why faire fweet?

Cæl. Women are ouertaken when they meete;

Your bloud speakes like a coward. King.

 $C\alpha l$. It were good,

If euery Maiden blush, had such a bloud.

A coward bloud, why whom should maidens feare ?

Ca. Men, were Maides cowards, they'd not come fo nere,

My Lord the Measure's done, I pleade my duetie. Kin. Onelie my heart takes measure of thy beautie. Sir quin. Now by my hose I sweare, that's no deepe oath,

This was a fine fweet earth-quake gentlie moou'd, By the foft winde of whifpring Silkes: come Ladies, Whose ioynts are made out of the dauncing Orbes, Come, follow me, walke a colde measure now; In the Brides Chamber; your hot beautie's melt, Take euerie one her fan, giue them their places, And waue the Northerne winde vpon your faces.

Celestine and all the Ladyes doing obeyfance to the King, who onely kiffes her, Exeunt, Short-hofe manning them, the Gallants stand aloofe.

Kin. Sir Walter Terrill.

Ter. My confirmed Leige.

Ki. Beautie out of her bountie, thee hath lent More then her owne with liberall extent.

Ter. What meanes my Lord?

Kin. Thy Bride, thy choice, thy wife, She that is now thy fadom, thy new world, That brings thee people, and makes little fubiects; Kneele at thy feete, obay in euerie thing, So euerie Father is a private King.

Ter. My Lord, her beauty is the poorest part,

Chieflie her vertues did endowe my heart.

Kin. Doe not back-bite her beauties, they all fhine,

Brighter on thee, because the beames are thine, To thee more faire, to others her two lips Shew like a parted Moone in thine Eclipse; That glaunce, which louers mongst themselues deuise, Walkes as inuisible to others eies:

Giue me thine eare.

Ter. What meanes the King ? Dem. Tis a quaint straine.

Ter. My Lord.

King. Thou darft not Wat.

Ter. She is too course an object for the Court. Kin. Thou darst not Wat: let to night be to morrow.

Ter. For shee's not yet mine owne.

Rin. Thou darst not Wat?

Ter. My Lord I dare, but——

King. But I fee thou darft not.

Ter. This night.

King. Yea, this night, tush thy minde repaires not, The more thou talk'st of night, the more thou darst not:

Thus farre I tend, I wod but turne this spheare, Of Ladies eyes, and place it in the Court, Where thy faire Bride should for the Zodiacke shine, And every Lady else sit for a signe.

But all thy thoughts are yellow, thy fweet bloud Rebels, th'art icalous Wat; thus with proude reuels To emmulate the masking firmanient,

Where Starres dance in the filuer Hall of heauen, Thy pleafure should be feasoned, and thy bed Relish thy Bride, But, but thou darst not Wat.

Ter. My Loord I dare. Kin. Speake that agen.

Ter. I dare.

King. Agen kinde Wat, and then I know thou darft.

Ter. I dare and will by that ioynt holy oath, Which she and I swore to the booke of heauen. This very day when the surueying Sunne, Riz like a witnes to her faith and mine, By all the loyalty that subjects owe To Maiesly, by that, by this, by both, I sweare to make a double guarded oath, This night vntainted by the touch of man, She shall a Virgin come.

Kin. To Court? Ter. To Court. I know I tooke a woman to my wife,

And I know women to be earthly Moones, That neuer shine till night, I know they change Their Orbes (their husbands) and in fickish hearts, Steale to their fweete Endimions, to be cur'd With better Phisicke, sweeter dyet drinkes, Then home can minister; all this I know Yet know not all, but giue me leaue O King, To boast of mine, and saie that I know none; I haue a woman but not fuch a one.

Kin. Why, she's confirmed in thee; I now ap-prooue her,

If constant in thy thoughts who then can mooue her?

Enter Sir Quintilian.

Wilt pleafe your Highnes take your place Sir qui. within,

The Ladies attend the Table.

Kin. I goe good Knight; Wat thy oath.

Ter. My Lord,

My oath's my honour, my honour is my life, My oath is constant, so I hope my wife. Exeunt.

Enter Horace in his true attyre, Afinius bearing his Cloake.

Afi. If you flye out Ningle, heer's your Cloake; I thinke it raines too.

Hide my shoulders in't. Ho.

Troth fo th'adst neede, for now thou art in thy Pee and Kue; thou hast such a villanous broad backe, that I warrant th'art able to beare away any mans iestes in England.

Hor. It's well Sir, I ha strength to beare yours mee thinkes; fore God you are growne a piece of a Critist, fince you fell into my hands: ah little roague, your wit has pickt vp her crums prettie and well.

Así. Yes faith, I finde my wit a the mending hand

Ningle; troth I doe not thinke but to proceede Poetaster next Commencement, if I have my grace perfectlie: everie one that confer with me now, stop their nose in merriment, and sweare I smell somewhat of Horace; one calles me Horaces Ape, another Horaces Beagle, and such Poeticall names it passes. I was but at Barbers last day, and when he was rencing my face, did but crie out, fellow thou makst me Conniue too long, & sayes he sayes hyee, Master Assistance Bubo, you have eene Horaces wordes as right as if he had spit them into your mouth.

Hor. Well, away deare Afinius, deliuer this letter to the young Gallant Drufo, he that fell fo strongly in loue with mee yesternight.

Afin. It's a fweete Muske-cod, a pure fpic'd-gull; by this feather I pittie his Ingenuities; but hast writ all this fince Ningle? I know thou hast a good running head and thou lifteft.

Hor. Foh come, your great belly'd wit must long for euery thing too; why you Rooke, I haue a set of letters readie starcht to my hands, which to any fresh suited gallant, that but newlie enters his name into my rowle, I send the next morning, ere his ten a clocke dreame has rize from him, onelie with clapping my hand to't, that my Nouice shall start, ho and his haire stand an end, when hee sees the sodaine slash of my writing: what you prettie Diminitiue roague, we must haue salse siers to amaze these spangle babies, these true heires of Ma. Justice Shallow.

Afi. I wod alwaies haue thee fauce a foole thus.

Hor. Away, and, stay: here be Epigrams vpon Tucca, divulge these among the gallants; as for Crispinus, that Crispin-asse and Fannius his Playdresser; who (to make the Muses beleeue, their subiests eares were staru'd, and that there was a dearth of Poesse) cut an Innocent Moore i'th middle, to serve him in twice; & when he had done, made Poulesworke of it, as for these Twynnes, these Poet-apes:

Their Mimicke trickes shall serue

With mirth to feast our Muse, whilst their owne starue.

Asin. Well Ningle Ile trudge, but where's the Randeuow?

Hor. Well thought off, marie at Sir Vaughans lodging the Welfh knight, I haue compof'd a loueletter for the gallants worship, to his Rosamond: the second, Mistris Miniuer, because she does not thinke so foundly of his lame English as he could wish; I ha gull'd his Knight-ship heere to his face, yet haue given charge to his wincking vnderstanding not to perceiue it: nay Gods so, away deare Bubo.

Afi. I am gone. Exit.

Hor. The Muses birdes the Bees were hiu'd and fled.

Vs in our cradle, thereby prophecying;

That we to learned eares fhould fweetly fing,

But to the vulger and adulterate braine,

Should loath to proflitute our Virgin straine.

No, our sharpe pen shall keep the world in awe,

Horace thy Poesie, wormwood wreathes shall weare,

We hunt not for mens loues but for their feare. Exit.

Enter Sir Adam and Miniuer.

Min. O Sir Adam Prickshaft, you are a the bow hand wide, a long yard I assure you: and as for Suitors, truelie they all goe downe with me, they have all one flat answere.

Sir Adam. All Widdow? not all, let Sir Adam bee your first man still.

Enter Sir Quintilian.

Sir quin. Widdow, art flolne from Table? I Sir Adam,

Are you my riuall? well, flye faire y' are best; The King's exceeding merrie at the banquet, He makes the Bride blush with his merrie words That run into her eares; ah he's a wanton, Yet I dare trust her, had he twentie tongues, And euerie tongue a Stile of Maiestie.

Now Widdow, let me tell thee in thine eare, I loue thee Widdow, by this ring; nay weare it.

Ile come in no rings pardie, Ile take no Mineu. golde.

Sir Ada. Harke in thine eare, take me, I am no golde.

Enter Sir Vaughan and Peter Flash.

Sir Vau. Master Peter Flash, I will grope about Sir Quintilian, for his terminations touching and confidering you.

I thanke your Worship, for I have as good Flash.

a flomacke to your Worship as a man could wish.

Sir Vau. I hope in God a mightie, I shall fill your ftomack Mafter Peter: What two vpon one Sentlemen; Mistris Miniuer, much good doo't you Sir Adam.

Sir Vaughan, have you din'd well Sir Sir quin.

Vaughan?

Sir Vau. As good feere as would make any hungrie man (and a were in the vilest prison in the world) eate and hee had anie stomacke: One word Sir Quintilian in hugger mugger; heere is a Sentleman of yours, Master Peter Flash, is tesirous to haue his blew coate pul'd ouer his eares; and Flash. No, Sir, my petition runs thus, that your worshippe would thrust me out of doores, and that I may follow Sir Vaughan.

Sir Vau. I can tell you Master Flash, and you follow mee I goe verie fast, I thinke in my conscience, I am one of the lightest knights in England.

Flash. It's no matter Sir, the Flashes have ever bin knowne to be quicke and light enough.

Sir Vaughan, he shal follow you, he shall Sir quin. dog you good Sir Vaughan.

Enter Horace walking.

Sir Vau. Why then Peter Flash I will set my source markes a yeare, and a blew coate vpon you.

Fla. Godamercy to your worship, I hope you shall neuer repent for me.

Sir Vau. You beare the face of an honest man, for you blush passing well Peter, I will quench the slame out of your name, and you shall he christned Peter Salamander.

Peter Flash. The name 's too good for me, I thanke your worship.

Sir Vau. Are you come Master Horace, you sent mee the Coppie of your letters countenance, and I did write and read it; your wittes truelie haue done verie valliantlie: tis a good inditements, you haue put in enough for her ha you not?

Hor. According to my instructions.

Sir Vau. Tis paffing well, I pray Master Horace walke a little beside your selfe, I will turne vpon you incontinent.

Sir quin. What Gentleman is this in the Man-dilian, a foldyer?

Sir Vau. No, tho he has a very bad face for a fouldier, yet he has as desperate a wit as euer any Scholler went to cuffes for; tis a Sentleman Poet, he has made rimes called Thalamimums, for M. Pridegroome, on vrd widdow.

Sir qui. Is this he? welcome Sir, your name? pray you walke not fo statelie, but be acquainted with me boldlie; your name Sir ?

Hor. Quintus, Horacius, Flaccus.

Sir Quint. Good Master Flappus welcome.

He walkes vp and downe.

Sir Vau. Mistris Miniuer, one vrde in your corner heere; I desire you to breake my armes heere, and read this Paper, you shall feele my mindes and affections in it, at full and at large.

Mini. Ile receiue no Loue libels perdy, but by word a mouth.

Sir Vaughan. By Sefu tis no libell, for heere is my hand to it.

Mini. Ile ha no hand in it Sir Vaughan, Ile not deale with you.

Sir Vau. Why then widdow, Ile tell you by word a mouth my deuices.

Mi. Your deuices come not neere my mouth Sir Vaughan perdy, I was vpon a time in the way to marriage, but now I am turn'd a tother fide, I ha fworne to leade a fingle and fimple life.

Sir Adam. She has answer'd you Sir Vaughan. Sir Vau. Tis true, but at wrong weapons Sir Adam; will you be an Affe Mistris Miniuers?

Min. If I be you shall not ride me.

Sir Vaug. A fimple life! by Sefu tis the life of a foole, a fimple life!

Sir qui. How now Sir Vaughan?

Sir Vaugh. My braines has a little fine quawme come vnder it, and therefore Sir Adam, and Sir Quintilian, and mistris Miniuer caps God bo'y.

All. Good Sir Vaughan.

Sir Vaugh. Master Horace, your inuentions doe her no good in the Vniuersalities; yet heere is two shillings for your wittes; nay by Sesu you shall take it if 't were more: yonder bald Adams, is put my nose from his ioynt; but Adam I will be euen to you: this is my cogitations, I will indite the Ladies & Miniuer caps to a dinner of Plumbes, and I shall desire you M. Horace, to speake or raile; you can raile I hope in God a mighty.

Hor. You meane to speake bitterlie:

Sir Vaughan. Right, to spitte bitterlie vpon baldnes, or the thinnes of haire; you fall eate downe Plumbes to sweeten your mouth, and heere is a good Anfell to defend you: Peter Salamander follow me.

Flash. With hue and crie and you will Sir.

Sir Vau. Come M. Horace, I will goe pull out the Ladies.

Ho. And Ile fet out my wits, Baldnes the Theame ? My words shall flow hye in a filver streame. Excunt.

Enter Tucca brushing off the crumbes.

Tuc. Wher's my most costly and sumptuous Shorthofe?

Sir Quint. Is the King rifen from table Captaine

Tucca?

How? rifen? no my noble Quintilian, kings Tuc. are greater men then we Knights and Caualliers, and therefore must eate more then lesser persons; Godamercy good Diues for these crummes: how now? has not Frier Tucke din'd yet? he falles fo hard to that Oyster-pye yonder.

Sir quin. Oyster-pye Captaine? ha, ha, he loues her, and I loue her and feare both shall goe without her.

Doft loue her, my finest and first part of the Mirrour of Knighthood? hange her she lookes like a bottle of ale, when the corke flyes out and the Ale fomes at mouth, shee lookes my good button-breech like the figne of Capricorne, or like Tiborne when it is couer'd with fnow.

Sir quin. All's one for that, she has a vizard in a bagge, will make her looke like an Angell; I wod I had her, vpon condition, I gaue thee this chaine manlie Tucca.

Tuc. I? faift thou fo Friskin? I have her ath hip for fome causes, I can found her, she'll come at my becke.

Wod I could found her too Noble com-Sir quin.

maunder.

Thou shalt doo't; that Lady ath Lake is thine Sir Triftram, lend mee thy chaine, doe, lend it, Ile make her take it as a token, Ile lincke her vnto thee; and thou shalt weare hergloue in thy Worshipfull hatte like to a leather brooch; Nay and thou mistrusts thy coller, be tyed in 't still.

Sir quin. Mistrust Captaine? no, heere tis, giue it her if she 'll take it, or weare it thy felfe if shee 'll take mee, Ile watch him well enough too.

Tuc. No more, Ile shoote away yonder Prickshaft, and then belabour her, and flye you after yonder Cucko: doft heere me my noble Gold-finch? ——

Sir qui. No more.

Tuc. How dost thou my smug Belimperia? how dost thou? hands off my little bald Derricke, hands off: harke hether Susanna, beware a these two wicked Elders, shall I speake well or ill of thee?

Min. Nay, eene as you please Captaine, it shal be at your choice.

Tuc. Why well faid, my nimble Short-hofe.

Sir quin. I heare her, I heare her.

Tuc. Art angry father time? art angrie because I tooke mother-Winter aside? He holde my life thou art strucke with Cupids Birde-bolt, my little prick-shaft, art? dost loue that mother Mumble-crust, dost thou? dost long for that whim-wham?

Sir Ada. Wod I were as fure to lye with her, as to loue her.

Tuc. Haue I found thee my learned Dunce, haue I found thee? If I might ha my wil, thou shouldst not put thy spoone into that bumble-broth (for indeede Ide taste her my selse) no thou shouldst not; yet if her beautie blinde thee, she's thine, I can doo't, thou heardst her say eene now, it should bee at my choice.

Sir Ada. She did so, worke the match and Ile bestow-

Tuc. Not a filke point vpon mee, little Adam shee shall be thy Eeue, for lesse then an Apple; but send, bee wise, send her some token, shee's greedie, shee shall take it, doe, send, thou shalt sticke in her (Prickeshaft) but send.

Sir Adam. Heer's a purse of golde, thinke you that wil be accepted?

Tuc. Goe to, it shall bee accepted, and twere but filuer, when that Flea-bitten Short-hofe steppes hence: vanish too, and let mee alone with my Grannam in Gutter-Lane there, and this purse of golde doe, let me alone.

Sir quin. The King, gods Lord, I doe forget the King;

Widdow, thinke on my wordes, I must be gone To waite his rising, Ile returne anone.

Sir Ad. Stay Sir Quintilian, Ile be a waiter too.

Sir quint. Widdow wee'll trust that Captaine there with you.

Exeunt.

Tuc. Now, now, mother Bunch how dost thou? what dost frowne Queene Gwyniuer? dost wrinckle? what made these paire of Shittle-cockes heere? what doe they sumble for? Ile ha none of these Kites sluttering about thy carkas, for thou shalt bee my West Indyes, and none but trim Tucca shall discouer thee.

Min. Discouer me? discouer what thou canst of me.

Tuc. What I can? thou knowst what I can discouer, but I will not lay thee open to the world.

Min. Lay me open to the world?

Tuc. No I will not my moldie decay'd Charing-croffe, I will not.

Mi. Hang thee patch-pannell, I am none a thy Charing-crosse: I scorne to be Crosse to such a scab as thou makst thy selfe.

Tuc. No, tis thou makft me fo, my Long Meg a

Westminster, thou breedst a scab, thou—

Min. I? dam thee filthie Captaine, dam thy felfe. Tuc. My little deuill a Dow-gate, Ile dam thee, thou knowst my meaning) Ile dam thee vp; my wide mouth at Bishops-gate.

Min. Wod I might once come to that damming.

Tuc. Why thou fhalt, my fweet dame Annis a cleere thou shalt, for Ile drowne my felfe in thee; I, for thy loue, Ile sinke, I, for thee.

Min. So thou wilt I warrant, in thy abhominable finnes; Lord, Lord, howe many filthy words hast thou to answere for.

Tuc. Name one Madge-owlet, name one, Ile anfwer for none; my words shall be foorth comming at all times, & shall answer for them selues; my nimble Cat-a-mountaine: they shall Sisle Bum-trincket, for Ile giue thee none but Suger-candie words, I will not Pusse: goody Tripe-wife, I will not.

Min. Why dost call mee such horrible vngodlie names then?

Tuc. Ile name thee no more Mother Red-cap vpon paine of death, if thou wilt Grimalkin, Maggot-apye I will not.

Min. Wod thou shouldst wel know, I am no Mag-got, but a meere Gentlewoman borne.

Tu. I know thou art a Gentle, and Ile nibble at thee, thou shalt be my Cap-a-maintenance, & Ile carrie my naked sword before thee, my reuerend Ladie Lettice-cap.

Mi. Thou shalt carry no naked swords before me to fright me, thou—

Tuc. Go too, let not thy tongue play fo hard at hot-cockles; for, Gammer Gurton, I meane to bee thy needle, I loue thee, I loue thee, because thy teeth stand like the Arches vnder London Bridge, for thou't not turne Satyre & bite thy husband; No, come my Cub, doe not scorne mee because I goe in Stag, in Buffe, heer's veluet too; thou seest I am worth thus much in bare veluet.

Min. I fcome thee not, not I.

Tuc. I know thou dost not, thou shat see that I could march with two or three hundred linkes before me, looke here, what? I could shew golde too, it that would tempt thee, but I would not make my selfe a Gold-smithes shall I; I scorne to goe chain'd my Ladie ath Hospitall, I doe; yet I will and must bee chain'd to thee.

Min. To mee? why Master Captaine, you know that I have my choise of three or source payre of Knights, and therefore have small reason to slye out I know not how in a man of war.

Tuc. A man a warre? come thou knowst not what a worshipfull focation tis to be a Captaines wife:

three or foure payre of Knights? why dost heare Ioane-a-bedlam, Ile enter into bond to be dub'd by what day thou wilt, when the next action is layde vpon me, thou shalt be Ladified.

Min. You know I am offered that by halfe a dozen.

Tuc. Thou shalt little Miniuer, thou shalt, Ile ha this frocke turn'd into a foote-cloth: and thou shalt be carted drawne I meane, Coacht, Coacht, thou shalt ryde Iigga-Iogge; a Hood shall slap vp and downe heere, and this shipskin-cap shall be put off.

Mini. Nay perdie, Ile put off my cap for no mans pleafure.

Tuc. Wut thou be proude little Lucifer? well, thou shalt goe how then thou wilt Maide-marian; come buffe thy little Anthony now, now, my cleane Cleopatria; fo, fo, goe thy waies Alexis fecrets, th'ast a breath as sweet as the Rose, that growes by the Bearegarden, as sweete as the proud'st head a Garlicke in England: come, wut march in, to the Gentle folkes?

Mini. Nay trulie Captaine you shall be my leader.

Tuc. I fay Mary Ambree, thou shalt march formost,

Because Ile marke how broad th'art in the heeles.

Mini. Perdie, I will be set ath last for this time.

Tuc. Why then come, we'll walke arme in arme, As tho we were leading one another to Newgate.

Enter Blunt, Crifpinus, and Demetrius, with papers, laughing.

Cri. Mine's of a fashion, cut out quite from yours. Dem. Mine has the sharpest tooth, yonder he is.

Blu. Captaine Tucca.

All hold vp papers.

Tuc. How now? I cannot fland to read supplications now.

Crif. They're bitter Epigrams compof'd on you By Horace.

Dem. And disperst amongst the gallants

In feuerall coppies, by Afinius Bubo.

Tuc. By that live Eele? read, Lege Legito, read thou Iacke.

Blu. Tucca's growne monstrous, how! rich? that I feare,

He's to be feene for money every where.

Tuc. Why true, shall not I get in my debts, nay and the roague write no better I care not, farewell blacke Iacke farewell.

Cri. But Captaine heer's a nettle.

Tuc. Sting me, doe.

Cri. Tucca's exceeding tall and yet not hye,

He fights with skill, but does most vilye lye.

The. Right, for heere I lye now, open, open, to make my aduerfarie come on; and then Sir, heere am I in's bosome: nay and this be the worst, I shal hug the poore honest face-maker, Ile loue the little Atheist, when he writes after my commendation, another whip? come yerke me.

Dem. Tucca will bite, how I growne Satiricall,

No, he bites tables, for he feedes on all.

Tuc. The whorefon clouen-foote deuill in mans apparell lyes,

There flood aboue forty dishes before me to day, That I nere toucht, because they were empty.

Min. I am witnes young Gentlemen to that.

Tuc. Farewell stinckers, I smel thy meaning Screech-owle, I doe, tho I stop my nose: and Sirra Poet, we'll have thee vntrust for this; come, mother Mum-pudding, come.

Execunt.

Trumpets found a florish, and then a fennate: Enter King with Cælestine, Sir Walter Terrill, Sir Quintilian, Sir Adam, Blunt and other Ladies and attendants: whilst the Trumpets found the King takes his leave of the Bridegroome, and Sir Quintilian, and last of the Bride.

Kin. My fong in parting doth this burden beare

A kiffe the Ditty, and I fet it heere. Your lips are well in tune, strung with delight, By this faire Bride remember soone at night; Sir Walter.

Ter. My Leige Lord, we all attend, The time and place.

Kin. Till then my leaue commend.

They bring him to the doore: Enter at another doore Sir Vaughan.

Sir Vau. Ladies, I am to put a verie easie suite vpon you all, and to desire you to fill your little pellies at a dinner of plums behinde noone; there be Suckets, and Marmilads, and Marchants, and other long white plummes that saine would kisse your delicate and sweet lippes; I indite you all together, and you especially my Ladie Pride; what doe you saie for your felles? for I indite you all.

Cal. I thanke you good Sir Vaughan, I will come. Sir Vau. Say Sentlewomen will you fland to me too?

All. Wee'll fit with you fweet Sir Vaughan.

Sir Vau. God a mightie pleffe your faces, and make your peauties laft, when wee are all dead and rotten:—you all will come.

I Lady. All will come.

Sir Vaug. Pray God that Horace bee in his right wittes to raile now.

Exit.

Crif. Come Ladie, you shall be my dauncing guest.

To treade the maze of musicke with the rest.

Dem. Ile lead you in.

Dicach. A maze is like a doubt:

Tis easie to goe in, hard to get out. Blun. We follow close behinde.

Philoca. That measure's best.

Now none markes vs, but we marke all the rest.

Exeunt.

Exeunt all fauing Sir Quintilian, Cælestine, and Sir Walter Terrill.

Ter. Father, and you my Bride; that name to day Wife comes not till to-morrow: but omitting This enterchange of language; let vs thinke Vpon the King and night, and ca'l our fpirits To a true reckoning: first to Arme our wittes With compleat steele of Indgement, and our tongs With found artillery of Phrases: then Our Bodies must bee motions; mooning first What we fpeake: afterwards, our very knees Must humbly seeme to talke, and sute out speech; For a true furnisht Cortyer hath such force, Though his tongue faints, his very legs discourse.

Sir quin. Sonne Terrill, thou hast drawne his picture right,

For hee's noe full-made Courtier, nor well ftrung, That hath not every joynt stucke with a tongue. Daughter, if Ladies fay, that is the Bride, that's she, Gaze thou at none, for all will gaze at thee.

Cal. Then, ô my father must I goe ! O my husband

Shall I then goe ? O my felfe, will I goe ? Sir quin. You must.

You fhall. Ter.

I will, but giue me leaue,

To fay I may not, nor I ought not, fay not Still, I must goe, let me intreate I may not.

Ter. You must and shall, I made a deede of gift, And gaue my oath vnto the King, I fwore

By thy true constancy.

Then keep that word To fweare by, O let me be constant still.

Ter. What shall I cancell faith, and breake my $C\alpha l$. If breaking constancie, thou breakst them both.

Ter. Thy conflancie no euill can pursue.

Cæl. I may be constant still, and yet not true.

Ter. As how?

Cæ. As thus, by violence detain'd, They may be conftant flill, that are conftrain'd.

Ter. Constrain'd? that word weighs heavy, yet my oath

Weighes downe that word; the kinges thoughts are at oddes,

They are not euen ballanft in his breft;
The King may play the man with me; nay more,
Kings may vfurpe; my wife's a woman; yet
Tis more then I know yet, that know not her,
If she should prooue mankinde, twere rare, fye, fye,
See how I loose my felse, amongst my thoughts,
Thinking to finde my felse; my oath, my oath.

Sir quin. I fweare another, let me fee, by what, By my long flocking, and my narrow skirtes, Not made to fit vpon, fhe shall to Court. I haue a tricke, a charme, that shall lay downe The spirit of lust, and keep thee vndeslowred; Thy husbands honor sau'd, and the hot King, Shall haue enough too. Come, a tricke, a charme.

Exit.

Cal. God keep thy honour fafe, my bloud from harme.

Ter. Come, my ficke-minded Bride, Ile teach thee how,

To relish health a little: Taste this thought,
That when mine eyes feru'd loues commission,
Vpon thy beauties I did seise on them,
To a Kings vse; cure all thy griefe with this,
That his great seale was grauen vpon this ring,
And that I was but Steward to a King.

Exeunt.

A banquet fet out: Enter Sir Vaughan, Horace, Afinius Bubo, Lady Petula, Dicache, Philocalia, Miftris Miniuer and Peter Flash.

Sir Vaugh. Ladies and Sentlemen, you are almost all welcome, to this sweet nuncions of Plums.

Dicach. Almost all Sir Vaughan? why to which of vs are you so niggardly, that you cut her out but a peice of malaome.

of welcome.

Sir Vaugh. My interpretations is that almost all are welcome, because I indited a brace or two more that is not come, I am forrie my Lady Pride is not among you.

Asi. Slid, he makes hounds of vs Ningle, a brace quoth a ?

Sir Vaug. Peter Salamanders draw out the pictures of all the ioynt flooles, & Ladies fit downe vpon their wodden faces.

Flash. I warrant Sir, Ile giue euerie one of them a good stoole.

Sir Vau. Master Horace, Master Horace, when I pray to God, and defire in hipocritnes that bald Sir Adams were heer, then, then begin to make your railes at the pouertie and beggerly want of haire.

Hor. Leaue it to my judgment.

Sir Van. M. Bubo fit there, you and I wil thinke vpon our ends at the Tables: M. Horace, put your learned bodie into the midst of these Ladies; so tis no matter to speake graces at nuncions, because we are all past grace since dinner.

Afini. Mas I thanke my definie I am not past grace, for by this hand full of Carrawaies, I could neuer abide to fay grace.

Dica. Mistris Miniuer, is not that innocent Gentleman a kinde of foole?

Min. Why doe you aske Madam?

Dicach. Nay for no harme, I aske because I thought you two had been of acquaintanc.

Min. I thinke he's within an Inch of a foole.

Dicach. Madam Philocalia, you fit next that fpare Gentleman, wod you heard what Miftris Miniuer faies of you.

Philo. Why what faies fhe Madam Dicache.

Dica. Nay nothing, but wishes you were married to that finall timber'd gallant.

Philo. Your wish and mine are twinnes, I wish so too, for then I should be sure to lead a merrie life.

Afini. Yes faith Ladie, Ide make you laugh, my bolts now and then should be soone shot; by these comfits, weed let all slide.

? Petu. He takes the fweetest oathes that euer I heard a gallant of his pitch sweare; by these Comfits, & these Carrawaies, I warrant it does him good to sweare.

Afin. Yes faith tis meate and drinke to me. I am glad Ladie Petula (by this Apple) that they please you.

Sir Vau. Peter Salamanders wine, I befeech you Master Asinius Bubo, not to sweare so deeplie, for there comes no fruite of your oathes; heere Ladies, I put you all into one corners together, you shall all drinke of one cup.

Así. Peter I prethee fill me out too.

Flash. Ide fling you out too and I might ha my will, a pox of all fooles.

Sir Vau. Mistris Miniuers, pray bee lustie, wod

Sir Adams Prickshaft stucke by you.

Hor. Who, the balde Knight Sir Vaughan?

Sir Vau. The fame M. Horace, he that has but a remnant or parcell of haire, his crowne is clipt and par'd away; me thinkes tis an excellent quallitie to bee balde; for and there flucke a nose and two nyes in his pate, he might weare two faces vnder one hood.

Afi. As God faue me la, if I might ha my will, Ide rather be a balde Gentleman then a hairy; for I am fure the best and tallest Yeomen in England haue balde heads: me thinkes haire is a scurule lowie commodity.

Hor. Bubo, herein you blaze your ignorance. Sir Vau. Pray flop and fill your mouthes, and giue M. Horace all your eares.

Hor. For, if of all the bodies parts, the head Be the most royall: if difcourfe, wit, Iudgement, And all our understanding faculties, Sit there in their high Court of Parliament,

Sit there in their high Court of Faritament, Enacting lawes to fway this humorous world: This little He of Man: needes must that crowne, Which stands upon this supreame head, be faire, And helde invaluable, and that crowne's the Haire: The head that wants this honour stands awry, Is bare in name and in authority.

Sir Van. He meanes balde-pates Miftris Miniuers. Hor. Haire, tis the roabe which curious nature weaues,

To hang vpon the head: and does adorne, Our bodies in the first houre we are borne: God does bestow that garment: when we dye, That (like a foft and filken Canopie) Is still spred ouer vs; In spight of death Our hayre growes in our grave, and that alone Lookes fresh, when all our other beauty's gone. The excellence of Haire, in this shines cleere, That the foure Elements take pride to weare -The fashion of it: when Fire most bright does burne, The flames to golden lockes doe strine to turne; When her lascinious armes the Water hurles, About the shoares wast, her sleeke head she curles: And rorid cloudes being fuckt into the Ayre, When downe they melt, hangs like fine filuer hayre. You fee the Earth (whofe head fo oft is shorne) Frighted to feele her lockes fo rudely torne, Stands with her haire an end, and (thus afraide) Turnes cuery haire to a greene naked blade. Besides, (when strucke with griefe) we long to dye, We spoile that most, which most does beautifie, We rend this Head-tyre off. I thus conclude, Cullors fet cullors out; our eyes indge right, Of vice or vertue by their opposite: So, if faire haire to beauty ad fuch grace, Baldnes must needes be vgly, vile and base.

Sir Vau. True M. Horace, for a bald reason, is a reason that has no haires vpon't, a scuruy scalded reason.

Mi. By my truely I neuer thought you could ha pickt fuch flrange things out of haire before.

Afini. Nay my Ningle can tickle it, when hee comes too't.

Min. Troth I shall neuer be enameld of a bareheaded man for this, what shift so euer I make.

Sir Vaug. Then Mistris Miniuer S. Adams Prick-shaft must not hit you; Peter take vp all the cloathes at the table and the Plums.

Enter Tucca and his boy.

Tuc. Saue thee my little worshipfull Harper; how doe yee my little cracknels? how doe ye?

Sir Vau. Welcome M. Tucca, fit and shoote into your belly fome Suger pellets.

Tuc. No, Godamercy Cadwallader, how doe you Horace?

Ho. Thankes good Captaine.

Tu. Wher's the Sering thou carriest about thee? O haue I found thee my scowring-sticke; what's my name Bubo?

Afini. Wod I were hang'd if I can call you any names but Captaine and Tucca.

Tuc. No Fye'st; my name's Hamlet reuenge; thou hast been at Parris garden hast not?

Hor. Yes Captaine, I ha plaide Zulziman there. Sir Vau. Then M. Horace you plaide the part of an honest man.

Tuc. Death of Hercules, he could neuer play that part well in's life, no Fulkes you could not: thou call'ft Demetrius Iorneyman Poet, but thou putst vp a Supplication to be a poore Iorneyman Player, and hadst beene still so, but that thou couldst not set a good face vpon't: thou hast forgot how thou amblest (in leather pilch) by a play-wagon, in the high way, and took'st mad Ieronimoes part, to get service among the Mimickes: and when the Stagerites banisht thee into the Ile of Dogs, thou turn'dst Ban-dog (villanous Guy) & euer since bitest therefore I aske if th'ast been at Parris-garden, because thou hast such a good mouth; thou baitst well, read, lege, saue thy selfe and read.

Hor. Why Captaine these are Epigrams compos'd on you.

Tuc. Goe not out Farding Candle, goe not out, for trufty Damboys now the deed is done, Ile pledge this Epigram in wine, Ile fwallow it, I, yes.

Sir Vau. God bleffe vs, will he be drunke with nittigrams now.

Tuc. So, now arise sprite ath Buttry; no Herringbone Ile not pull thee out, but arise deere Eccho rise, rise deuill or Ile coniure thee vp.

Min. Good Master Tucca lets ha no conjuring

heere.

Sir Vau. Vddes bloud you feald gouty Captaine, why come you to fet encombrances heere betweene the Ladies.

Tuc. Be not fo tart my precious Metheglin, be not (my old whore a Babilon, fit fast.)

Min. O Iefu if I know where abouts in-London

Babilon flands.

Tuc. Feede and be fat my faire Calipolis, ftir not my beauteous wriggle-tailes, Ile difease none of you, Ile take none of you vp, but onely this table-man, I must enter him into some filthy sincke point, I must.

Hor. Captaine, you doe me wrong thus to difgrace me.

Tuc. Thou thinkst thou maist be as fawcy with me as my Buffe Ierkin, to sit vpon me, dost?

Ho. Dam me, if euer I traduc'd your name,

What imputation can you charge me with?

Sir Vau. Sblud, I, what coputations can you lay to his farge? answer, or by Sefu Ile canuas your coxcombe Tucky.

Min. If they draw fweet hearts, let vs shift for our felues.

Tuc. My noble fwaggerer, I wil not fall out with thee, I cannot my mad Cumrade, finde in my heart to fled thy bloud.

Sir Vau. Cumrade? by Sefu call me Cumrade againe, and ile Cumrade ye about the finnes and fhoulders; ownds, what come you to fmell out heere? did you not dine and feede horribly well to day at dinner, but you come to munch heere, and give vs winter-plummes? I pray depart, goe marfe, marfe, marfe out a doores.

Tuc. Adew Sir Eglaniour, adew Lute-stringe, Curtin-rod, Goose-quill; heere, giue that full-nos d Skinker, these rimes; & harke Ile tagge my Codpeece point with thy legs, spout-pot Ile empty thee.

Asin. Dost threaten mee? Gods lid Ile binde thee to the good forbearing.

Sir Vau. Will you amble Hobby-horfe, will you trot and amble?

Tuc. Raw Artichocke I shall sauce thee. Exit.

Min. I pray you Master Tucca, will you send me the siue pound you borrowed on me; O you cannot heare now, but Ile make you heare me and seele me too in another place, to your shame I warrant you, thou shalt not conny-catch mee for siue pounds; he tooke it vp Sir Vaughan in your name, hee swore you fent for it to Mum withall, twas siue pound in gold, as white as my kercher.

Sir Vaughan. Ownds, fine pound in my name to Mum about withall.

Min. I, to Mum withall, but hee playes mum-budget with me.

Sir Vau. Peter Salamander, tye vp your great and your little fword, by Sefu Ile goe fing him while tis hot. Ile beate fiue pound out of his leather pilch: Master Horace, let your wittes inhabite in your right places; if I fall fansomely vpon the Widdow, I haue some cossens Garman at Court, shall beget you the reuer-fion of the Master of the Kings Reuels, or else be his Lord of Mis-rule nowe at Christmas: Come Ladyes, whoreson Stragling Captaine, Ile pound him. Exeunt.

Manet Horace and Afinius.

Hor. How now, what ail'st thou, that thou look'st fo pale?

Afin. Nay, nothing, but I am afraide the Welsh

Knight has given me nothing but purging Comfits: this Captaine Rickes pockily in my flomack; read this fcroule, he faies they'r rimes, and bid me give them you.

Hor. Rimes? tis a challenge fent to you.

Afin. To me?

Hor. He faies heere you divulg'd my Epigrams.

Afin. And for that dares he challenge me?

Hor. You fee he dares, but dare you answer him?

Asin. I dare answer his challenge, by word of mouth, or by writing, but I fcorne to meete him, I hope he and I are not Paralels.

Hor. Deere Bubo, thou shalt answere him; our credites

Lye pawn'd vpon thy refolution,

Thy vallor must redeeme them; charge thy spirits, To waite more close, and neere thee: if he kill thee Ile not suruiue; into one Lottery

We'll cast our fates; together live and dve.

Afi. Content, I owe God a death, and if he will make mee pay't against my will, Ile say tis hard dealing.

Execunt.

Enter Sir Adam, Tucca, with two piflols by his fides, his boy laden with fwords and bucklers.

Tuc. Did Apolloes Freeze gowne watchman (boy, doft heare Turkie-cockes tayle, haue an eye behinde, leaft the enemie affault our Rere-ward) on proceede Father Adam; did that fame tiranicall-tongu'd rag-amuffin Horace, turne bald-pates out fo naked?

Sir Ad. He did, and whipt them so with nettles, that

The Widdow fwore that a bare-headed man, Should not man her: the Ladie Petula Was there, heard all, and tolde me this.

Tuc. Goe too. Thy golde was accepted, it was, and the thall bring thee into her Paradice, the thall fmall Adam, the thall.

Sir Ada. But how? but how Capten?

Tuc. Thus, goe, couer a table with fweet meates, let all the Gentlewomen, and that fame Pafquils-madcap (mother Bee there) nibble, bid them bite: they will come to gobble downe Plummes; then take vp that paire of Basket hiltes, with my commission, I meane Crispinus and Fannius; charge one of them to take vp the Bucklers, against that hayre-monger Horace, and haue a bout or two, in defence of baldepates: let them cracke euerie crowne that has haire on't: goe, let them list vp baldenes to the skie, and thou shalt see, twill turne Miniuers heart quite against the haire.

Sir Ada. Excellent, why then M. Tucca—

Tuc. Nay, whir, nymble Prickshaft; whir, away, I goe vpon life and death, away, flie Scanderbag flie.

Exit.

Enter Afinius Bubo, and Horace aloofe.

Boy. Arme Captaine, arme, arme, arme, the foe is come downe.

Tucca offers to shoote.

Asi. Hold Capten Tucca holde, I am Bubo, & come to answer any thing you can lay to my charge.

Tuc. What, doft fummon a parlie my little Drumflicke? tis too late; thou feeft my red flag is hung out, He fill thy guts with thine owne carrion carcas, and then eate them vp in fleed of Sawfages.

Afin. Vse me how you will; I am resolute, for I ha made my Will.

Tuc. Wilt fight Turke-a-ten-pence? wilt fight then?

Afini. Thou shalt finde Ile fight in a Godly quar-

rell, if I be once fir'd.

Tuc. Thou shalt not want fire, Ile ha thee burnt when thou wilt, my colde Cornelius: but come: Refpice funem; looke, thou seest; open thy selse my little Cutlers Shoppe, I challenge thee thou slender Gentleman, at source sundrie weapons.

Afi. Thy challenge was but at one, and Ile answere but one.

Boy. Thou shalt answer two, for thou shalt answer me and my Capten.

Tac. Well faid Cockrell out-crowe him: art hardy noble Huon? art Magnanimious? licke-trencher; looke, fearch least some lye in ambush; for this man at Armes has paper in's bellie, or some friend in a corner, or else hee durst not bee so cranke.

Boy. Capten, Capten, Horace stands fneaking

heere.

Tuc. I fmelt the foule-fifted Morter-treader, come my most damnable fastidious rascall, I have a suite to both of you.

Asi. O holde, most pittifull Captaine holde.

Hor. Holde Capten, tis knowne that Horace is valliant, & a man of the fword.

Tuc. A Gentleman or an honest Cittizen, shall not Sit in your pennie-bench Theaters, with his Squirrell by his side cracking nuttes; nor sneake into a Tauerne with his Mermaid; but he shall be Satyr'd, and Epigram'd vpon, and his humour must run vpo'th Stage: you'll ha Euery Gentleman in's humour, and Euery Gentleman out on's humour: wee that are heades of Legions and Bandes, and seare none but these same shoulder-clappers, shall seare you, you Serpentine rascall.

Hor. Honour'd Capten.

Tuc. Art not famous enough yet, my mad Hora-flratus, for killing a Player, but thou must eate men aliue? thy friends? Sirra wilde-man, thy Patrons?

thou Anthropophagite, thy Mecænaffes?

Hor. Captaine, I'm forry that you lay this wrong. So close vnto your heart: deare Captaine thinke I writ out of hot bloud, which (now) being colde, I could be pleas'd (to please you) to quasse downe, The poyson'd Inke, in which I dipt your name.

Tuc. Saift thou fo, my Palinodicall rimefter?

Hor. Henceforth He rather breath out Solwcifmes.
(To doe which Ide as foone speake blasphemie)

Than with my tongue or pen to wound your worth,

Beleeue it noble Capten; it to me

Shall be a Crowne, to crowne your actes with praize,

Out of your hate, your loue Ile stronglie raize.

Tuc. I know now th'ast a number of these Quiddits to binde men to'th peace: tis thy fashion to slirt Inke in euerie mans face; and then to craule into his bosome, and damne thy selfe to wip't off agen: yet to giue out abroad, that he was glad to come to composition with me: I know Monsteur Machiauell tis one a thy rules; My long-heel'd Troglodite, I could make thine eares burne now, by dropping into them, all those hot oathes, to which, thy selfe gau'st voluntarie fire, (when thou wast the man in the Moone) that thou wouldst neuer squib out any new Salt-peter Iestes against honest Tucca, nor those Maligo-tasters, his Poetasters; I could Cinocephalus, but I will not, yet thou knowst thou hast broke those oathes in print, my excellent infernall.

Ho. Capten.

Tuc. Nay I fmell what breath is to come from thee, thy answer is, that there's no faith to be helde with Heritickes & Infidels, and therfore thou swear'st anie thing: but come, lend mee thy hand, thou and I henceforth will bee Alexander and Lodwicke, the Gemini: sworne brothers, thou shalt be Perithous and Tucca Thefeus; but Ile leaue thee 'i'th lurch, when thou mak'st thy voiage into hell: till then, Thine-assuredly.

Hor. With all my foule deare Capten.

Tuc. Thou'lt shoote thy quilles at mee, when my terrible backe's turn'd for all this, wilt not Porcupine? and bring me & my Heliconistes into thy Dialogues to make vs talke madlie, wut not Lucian?

Hor. Capten, if I doe-

Tuc. Nay and thou doft, hornes of Lucifer, the Parcell-Poets shall Sue thy wrangling Muse, in the Court of Pernassus, and neuer leave hunting her, till she pleade in Forma Pauperis: but I hope th'ast more grace; come: friendes, clap handes tis a bargaine; amiable Bubo, thy fift must walke too: so, I loue thee, now I see th'art a little Hercules, and wilt fight; Ile Sticke thee now in my companie like a sprig of Rosemary.

Enter Sir Rees ap Vaughan and Peter Flash.

Fla. Draw Sir Rees he's yonder, shall I vpon him?

Sir Vau. Vpon him? goe too, goe too Peter Salamander; holde, in Gods name holde; I will kill him to his face, because I meane he shall answer for it; being an eye-witnes; one vrde Capten Tucky.

Tuc. Ile give thee ten thousand words and thou wilt, my little Thomas Thomasius.

Sir Vau. By Sefu, tis best you give good vrdes too, least I beate out your tongue, and make your vrde nere to bee taken more; doe you heare, five pounds, five pounds Tucky.

Tuc. Thou shalt ha fiue, and fiue, and fiue, and thou wantst money my Iob.

Sir Vau. Leaue your fetches and your fegaries, you tough leather-Ierkins; leaue your quandaries, and trickes, and draw vpon me y' are beft: you connycatch Widdow Miniuer-caps for fiue pounds, and fay tis for me to cry Mum, and make mee run vp and downe in dishonors, and discredites; is 't not true, you winke-a-pipes rascall? is not true?

Tuc. Right, true, guilty, I remember 't now; for when I fpake a good word to the Widdow for thee my young Sampson ----

Sir Vau. For five pounds you cheating scab, for

5. pounds, not for me.

Tuc. For thee ô Cæfar, for thee I tooke vp fiue pounds in golde, that lay in her lap, & faid Ide giue it thee as a token from her: I did it but to fmell out how fhe flood affected to thee, to feele her; I, and I know what fhe faid, I know how I carried away the golde.

Sir Vau. By Sefu, I ha not the mercy to fall vpon him now: M. Tucky, did widdow Miniuers part quietly from her golde, because you lyed, and said it was for me?

Tuc. Quietly, in peace, without grumbling; made no noife. I know how I tempted her in thy behalfe, my little Trangdo.

Sir Vau. Capten Tucky, I will pay back her 5. £. (vnles you be damn'd in lyes) & hold you, I pray you pocket vp this; by the crosse a this sword & dagger, Capten you shall take it.

Tuc. Dost fweare by daggers? nay then He put vp more at thy hands then this.

Flash. Is the fray done fir?

Sir Vau. Done Peter, put vp your fmeeter.

Tuc. Come hether, my foure-fac'd Poet; fling away that beard-brush Bubo, casheere him and harke: Knight attend: So, that raw-head and bloudy-bones Sir Adam, has fee'd another brat (of those nine common wenches) to defend baldnes and to raile against haire: he'll haue a fling at thee, my noble Cock-Sparrow.

Sir Vau. At mee ! will hee fling the cudgels of his witte at mee?

Tuc. And at thy button-cap too; but come, Ile be your leader, you shall stand, heare all, and not be seene; cast off that blew coate, away with that slawne, and follow, come:

Exit.

Hor. Bubo, we follow Captaine.

Sir Vau. Peter, leaue comming behinde me, I pray any longer, for you and I must part Peter.

Flash. Sounds Sir, I hope you will not ferue me fo, to turne me away in this cafe.

Sir Vau. Turne you into a fooles coate; I meane I will go folus, or in folitaries alone; ounds y-are best giue better words, or Ile turne you away indeed; where is Capten Tucky? come Horace; get you home Peter.

Flash. Ile home to your cost, and I can get into the Wine-Seller.

Exit.

Hor. Remember where to meete mee.

Afin. Yes Ile meete; Tucca should ha found I dare meete.

Ho. Dare defend baldnes, which our conquering

Has beaten downe fo flat? Well, we will goe, And fee what weapons theyr weake wittes doe bring; If sharpe, we'll spred a large and nobler wing; Tucca, heere lyes thy Peace: warre roares agen; My Swoord shall neuer cutte thee, but my pen. Exit.

Enter Sir Adam, Crifpinus, Fannius, Blunt, Miniuer, Petula, Philocalia and Dicace.

Ladies. Thankes good Sir Adam. Sir Ada. Welcome red-cheekt Ladies, And welcome comely Widdow; Gentlemen, Now that our forry banquet is put by, From stealing more sweete kisses from your lips Walke in my garden: Ladyes let your eyes Shed life into these flowers by their bright beames, Sit, Sit, heere's a large bower, heere all may heare, Now good Crispinus let your praize begin. There, where it left off Baldnes.

I shall winne

No praife, by praifing that, which to depraue, All tongues are readie, and which none would haue. To prooue that best, by strong and armed reafon,

Whose part reason feares to take, cannot but prooue, Your wit's fine temper, and from these win loue.

Min. I promife you has almost converted me, I pray bring forward your bald reafons M. Poet.

Cri. Mistris you give my Reasons proper names, For Arguments (like Children) should be like, The fubiect that begets them; I must striue, To crowne Bald heades, therefore must baldlie thriue; But be it as it can: To what before, Went arm'd at table, this force bring I more, If a Bare head (being like a dead-mans scull)

Should beare vp no praife els but this, it fets
Our end before our eyes; fhould I dispaire,
From giuing Baldnes higher place then haire?

Minima Nau partie haire has the higher place

Mini. Nay perdie, haire has the higher place. Cri. The goodlieft & most glorious strange-built wonder,

Which that great Architect hath made, is heauen; For there he keepes his Court, It is his Kingdome, That's his best Master-piece; yet tis the roose, And Seeling of the world: that may be cal'd The head or crowne of Earth, and yet that's balde, All creatures in it balde; the louely Sunne, Has a face sleeke as golde; the full-cheekt Moone, As bright and smooth as siluer: nothing there Weares dangling lockes, but sometime blazing Starres, Whose slaming curles, fet realmes on fire with warres. Descend more low; looke through mans flue-folde fence,

Of all, the Eye, beares greatest eminence; And yet that's balde, the haires that like a lace, Are sticht vnto the liddes, borrow those formes, Like Pent-houses to saue the eyes from stormes.

Sir Adam. Right, well faid.

Crif. A head and face ore-growne with Shaggie droffe,

O, tis an Orient pearle hid all in Mosse, But when the head's all naked and vncrown'd, It is the worlds Globe, euen, smooth and round; Baldnes is natures But, at which our life, Shootes her last Arrow: what man euer lead His age out with a staffe, but had a head Bare and vncouer'd? hee whose yeares doe rise, To their full height, yet not balde, is not wise. The Head is Wisedomes house, Haire but the thatch, Haire? It's the basest stubble; in scorne of it, This Prouerbe sprung, he has more haire then wit: Marke you not in derision how we call, A head growne thicke with haire, Bush-naturall? Min. By your leave (Master Poet) but that Bushnaturall, is one a the trimmest, and most intanglingst beautie in a woman.

Crif. Right, but beleeue this (pardon me most faire) You would have much more wit, had you lesse haire: I could more wearie you to tell the proofes, (As they passe by) which fight on Baldnes side, Then were you taskt to number on a head, The haires: I know not how your thoughts are lead, On this strong Tower shall my opinion rest, Heades thicke of haire are goode, but balde the best.

Whilst this Paradox is in speaking, Tucca Enters with Sir Vaughan at one doore, and secretly placeth him: then Exit and brings in Horace mussled, placing him: Tucca sits among them.

Tuc. Th' art within a haire of it, my fweete Wit whether wilt thou? my delicate Poeticall Furie, th' aft hit it to a haire.

Sir Vaughan steps out.

Sir Vau. By your fauour Master Tucky, his balde reasons are wide aboue two hayres, I befees you pardon mee Ladies, that I thrust in so malepartly among you, for I did but mych heere, and see how this cruell Poet did handle bald heades.

Sir Ad. He gaue them but their due Sir Vaughan;

Widdow did he not?

Mini. By my faith he made more of a balde head, than euer I shall be able: he gaue them their due truely.

Sir Vaugh. Nay vds bloud, their due is to bee a the right haire as I am, and that was not in his fingers to give, but in God a Mighties: Well, I will hyre that humorous and fantasticall Poet Master Horace, to breake your balde pate Sir Adam.

Sir Ada. Breake my balde pate?

Tuc. Dost heare my worshipfull block-head?

Sir Vaug. Patience Captaine Tucky, let me abfolue him; I meane he shal pricke, pricke your head or fconce a little with his goofe-quils, for he shal make another Thalimum, or croffe-flickes, or fome Polinoddyes, with a fewe Nappy-grams in them that shall list vp haire, and fet it an end, with his learned and harty commendations.

This is excellent, all will come out now. Hor.

Dica. That fame Horace me thinkes has the most vngodly face, by my Fan; it lookes for all the world, like a rotten ruffet Apple, when tis bruiz'd: Its better then a spoonefull of Sinamon water next my heart, for me to heare him fpeake; hee foundes it fo i' th nose, and talkes and randes for all the world, like the poore fellow vnder Ludgate: oh fye vpon him.

By my troth fweet Ladies, it's Cake and pudding to me, to fee his face make faces, when hee reades his Songs and Sonnets.

Ile face fome of you for this, when you shall not budge.

Its the stinckingst dung-farmer-foh vpon Tuc. him.

Sir Vau. Foh? oundes you make him vrse than olde herring: foh? by Sefu I thinke he's as tidy, and as tall a Poet as euer drew out a long verse.

Tuc. The best verse that euer I knew him hacke out, was his white necke-verfe: noble Ap Rees thou wouldst fcorne to laye thy lippes to his commendations, and thou fmeldst him out as I doe, hee calles thee the burning Knight of the Salamander.

Sir Vaugh. Right, Peter is my Salamander; what of him? but Peter is neuer burnt: howe now? fo, goe too now.

And fayes because thou Clipst the Kinges Tucca.

English.

Sir Vaughan. Oundes mee ? that's treason: clip? horrible treasons, Sefu holde my handes; clip? he baites moufe-trappes for my life.

Right little Twinckler, right: hee fayes because thou speak'st no better, thou canst not keepe a good tongue in thy head.

Sir Vaug. By God tis the best tongue, I can buy for loue or money.

Tuc. He shootes at thee too Adam Bell, and his arrowes flickes heere; he calles thee bald-pate.

Sir Vaugh. Oundes make him prooue these intollerabilities.

Tuc. And askes who shall carry the vineger-bottle? & then he rimes too't, and fayes Prickshaft: nay Miniuer hee cromples thy Cap too; and ——

Cri. Come Tucca, come, no more; the man's wel knowne, thou needst not paint him, whom does he not wrong?

Tuc. Mary himfelfe, the vglie Pope Boniface, pardons himfelfe, and therefore my iudgement is, that prefently he bee had from hence to his place of execution, and there bee Stab'd, Stab'd, Stab'd.

He stabs at him.

Hor. Oh gentlemen, I am flaine, oh flaue art hyr'd to murder me, to murder me, to murder me?

Ladies. Oh God!

Sir Vaugh. Ounds Capten, you have put all Poetrie to the dint of fword, blow winde about him: Ladies for our Lordes fake you that have fmocks, teare off peeces to shoote through his oundes: Is he dead and buried? is he? pull his nose, pinch, rub, rub, rub, rub, rub.

Tu. If he be not dead, looke heere; I ha the Stab and pippin for him: if I had kil'd him, I could ha pleaf'd the great foole with an Apple.

Crif. How now? be well good Horace, heer's no wound;

Y'are flaine by your owne feares; how dost thou man? Come, put thy heart into his place againe; Thy out-fide's neither peir's, nor In-fide flaine.

Sir Vau. I am glad M. Horace, to fee you walking.

Ho. Gentlemen, I am blacke and blewe the breadth of a groate.

Tuc. Breadth of a groate? there's a teflon, hide thy infirmities, my feuruy Lazarus; doe, hide it, leaft it prooue a fcab in time: hang thee desperation, hang thee, thou knowst I cannot be sharpe set against thee: looke, seele (my light-vptailes all) seele my weapon.

Mi. O most pittifull as blunt as my great thumbe. Sir Vau. By Sefu, as blunt as a Welsh bag-pudding.

Tuc. As blunt as the top of Poules; tis not like thy Aloe, Cicatrine tongue, bitter: no, tis no flabber, but like thy goodly and glorious nose, blunt, blunt, blunt: dost roare bulchin? dost roare? th'ast a good rounciuall voice to cry Lanthorne & Candle-light.

Sir Va. Two vrds Horace about your eares: how chance it paffes, that you bid God boygh to an honest trade of building Symneys, and laying downe Brickes, for a worse handicraftnes, to make nothing but railes; your Muse leanes vpon nothing but filthy rotten railes, fuch as fland on Poules head, how chance ?

Hor. Sir Vaughan.

Sir Va. You lye fir varlet fir villaine, I am fir Salamanders, ounds, is my man Master Peter Salamanders face as vrse as mine? Sentlemen, all and Ladies, and you say once or twice Amen, I will lap this little Silde, this Booby in his blankets agen.

Omnes. Agree'd, agree'd.

Tuc. A blanket, these crackt Venice glasses shall fill him out, they shall tosse him, holde fast wag-tailes: so, come, in, take this bandy with the racket of patience, why when? dost stampe mad Tamberlaine, dost stampe? thou thinkst th'ast Morter vnder thy seete, dost?

Ladies. Come, a bandy ho.

Hor. O holde most facred beauties.

Sir Vau. Hold, filence; the puppet-teacher fpeakes.

Ho. Sir Vaughan, noble Capten, Gentlemen, Crifpinus, deare Demetrius ô redeeme me, Out of this infamous — by God by Iefu ——

Cri. Nay, fweare not fo good Horace, now these Ladies,

Are made your executioners: prepare,

To fusfer like a gallant, not a coward; Ile trie t' vnloose, their hands, impossible. Nay, womens vengeance are implacable.

Hor. Why, would you make me thus the ball of fcorne?

Tuc. Ile tell thee why, because th' ast entred Actions of assault and battery, against a companie of honourable and worshipfull Fathers of the law: you wrangling rascall, law is one of the pillers ath land, and if thou beest bound too't (as I hope thou shalt bee) thou't prooue a skip-Jacke, thou't be whipt. Ile tell thee why, because thy sputtering chappes yelpe, that Arrogance, and Impudence, and Ignoraunce, are the effentiall parts of a Courtier.

Sir Vau. You remember Horace they will puncke, and pincke, and pumpe you, and they catch you by the coxcombe: on I pray, one lash, a little more.

Tuc. Ile tell thee why, because thou cryest ptrooh at worshipfull Cittizens, and cal'st them Hat-caps, Cuckolds, and banckrupts, and modest and vertuous wives punckes & cockatrices. Ile tell thee why, because th' ast arraigned two Poets against all lawe and conscience; and not content with that, hast turn'd them amongst a company of horrible blacke Fryers.

Sir Vau. The fame hand still, it is your owne another day, M. Horace, admonitions is good meate.

Tuc. Thou art the true arraign'd Poet, and shoulds have been hang'd, but for one of these part-takers, these charitable Copper-lac'd Christians, that setcht thee out of Purgatory, (Players I meane) Theaterians pouch-mouth, Stage-walkers; for this Poet, for this, thou must lye with these sources, in that blancket, for this ——

Hor. What could I doe, out of a iuft reuenge, But bring them to the Stage? they enuy me because I holde more worthy company.

Deme. Good Horace, no; my cheekes do blush for thine,

As often as thou fpeakst so, where one true

And nobly-vertuous spirit, for thy best part Loues thee, I wish one ten, euen from my heart.] I make account I put vp as deepe share In any good mans loue, which thy worth earnes, As thou thy selfe; we enuy not to see, Thy friends with Bayes to crowne thy Poesie. No, heere the gall lyes, we that know what stuffe Thy verie heart is made of; know the stalke On which thy learning growes, and can giue life To thy (once dying) basenes; yet must we Dance Antickes on your Paper.

Hor. Fannius.

Cri. This makes vs angry, but not enuious, No; were thy warpt foule, put in a new molde, Ide weare thee as a Iewell fet in golde.

Sir Vau. And Iewels Master Horace, must be hang'd you know.

Tuc. Good Pagans, well faid, they have fowed vp that broken feame-rent lye of thine, that Demetrius is out at Elbowes, and Crifpinus is falne out with Sattin heere, they have; but bloate herring dost heere?

Hor. Yes honour'd Captaine, I have eares at will. Tuc. Is not better be out at Elbowes, then to bee a bond-slave, and to goe all in Parchment as thou dost?

Horace. Parchment Captaine? tis Perpetuana I affure you.

Tuc. My Perpetuall pantaloone true, but tis waxt ouer; th'art made out of Wax; thou must answere for this one day; thy Muse is a hagler, and weares cloathes vpon best-be-trust: th'art great in some bodies books for this, thou knowst where; thou wouldst bee out at Elbowes, and out at heeles too, but that thou layest about thee with a Bill for this, a Bill—

Ho. I confesse Capten, I followed this suite hard.

Tuc. I know thou didft, and therefore we have Hiren heere, fpeake my little difh-washers, a verdit Piffe-kitchins.

Omnes. Blancket.

Sir Vau. Holde I pray, holde, by Sefu I haue put vpon my heade, a fine deuice, to make you laugh, tis not your fooles Cap Master Horace, which you couer'd your Poetasters in, but a fine tricke, ha, ha, is iumbling in my braine.

Tuc. Ile beate out thy braines, my whorson hanfome dwarfe, but ile haue it out of thee.

Omnes. What is it good Sir Vaughan?

Sir Vau. To conclude, tis after this manners, because Ma. Horace is ambition, and does conspire to bee more hye and tall as God a mightie made him, wee'll carry his terrible person to Court, and there before his Masestie Dub, or what you call it, dip his Muse in some licour, and christen him, or dye him, into collours of a Poet.

Omnes. Excellent.

Tuc. Super Super-excellent Reuellers. goe, proceede you Masters of Arte in kissing these wenches, and in daunces, bring you the quiuering Bride to Court, in a Maske, come Grumboll, thou shalt Mum with vs; come, dogge mee skneakes-bill.

Hor. O thou my Mufe!

Sir Vau. Call vpon God a mighty, and no Muses, your Muse I warrant is otherwise occupied, there is no dealing with your Muse now, therefore I pray marse, marse, marse, oundes your Moose?

Execunt.

Cri. We shal have sport to see them; come bright beauties,

The Sunne floops low, and whifpers in our eares,
To haften on our Maske, let's crowne this night,
With choife composed wreathes of fweet delight.

Exeunt.

Enter Terrill and Cælestine fadly, Sir Quintilian flirring and migling a cup of wine.

Ter. O Night, that Dyes the Firmament in blacke, And like a cloth of cloudes doft firetch thy limbes; Vpon the windy Tenters of the Ayre:

O thou that hang'ft vpon the backe of Day,
Like a long mourning gowne: thou that art made Without an eye, because thou shouldst not see
A Louers Reuels: nor participate
The Bride-groomes heauen; ô heauen, to me a hell:
I haue a hell in heauen, a blessed cursse;
All other Bride-groomes long for Night, and taxe
The Day of lazie slouth; call Time a Cripple,
And say the houres limpe after him: but I Wish Night for euer banisht from the skie,
Or that the Day would neuer sleepe: or Time,
Were in a swound; and all his little Houres,
Could neuer lift him vp with their poore powers.

Enter Cælestine.

But backward runnes the courfe of my delight; The day hath turn'd his backe, and it is night: This night will make vs odde; day made vs eeuen, All elfe and damb'd in hel, but I in heauen.

Cæ. Let loose thy oath, so shal we still be euen.

Ter. Then am I damb'd in hell, and not in heauen.

Cal. Must I then goe? tis easie to say no, Must is the King himselfe, and I must goe; Shall I then goe? that word is thine; I shall, Is thy commaund: I goe because I shall; Will I then goe? I aske my selfe; ô ill, King, saies I must: you, I shall; I, I will.

Ter. Had I not fworne. Cæl. Why didft thou fweare?

Ter. The King

Sat heavy on my refolution,

Till (out of breath) it panted out an oath,

Cal. An oath? why, what's an oath? tis but the fmoake,

Of flame & bloud; the blifter of the spirit, Which rizeth from the Steame of rage, the bubble That shootes vp to the tongue, and scaldes the voice, (For oathes are burning words, thou swor'st but one, Tis frozen long agoe: if one be numbred, What Countrimen are they? where doe they dwell, That speake naught else but oathes?

Ter. They're men of hell.

An oath? why tis the trafficke of the foule,
Tis law within a man; the feale of faith,
The bond of euery confcience; vnto whom,
We fet our thoughts like hands: yea fuch a one
I fwore, and to the King: A King containes
A thousand thousand; when I fwore to him,
I fwore to them; the very haires that guard
His head, will rife vp like sharpe witnesses
Against my faith and loyalty: his eye
Would straight condemne me: argue oathes no more,
My oath is high, for to the King I fwore.

Enter Sir Quintilian with the cup.

Cæ. Muft I betray my Chastity? So long
Cleane from the treason of rebelling lust;
O husband! O my Father! if poore I
Must not liue chast, then let me chastly dye.
S. qui. I, heer's a charme shall keep thee chaste, come, come,

Olde Time hath left vs but an houre to play
Our parts; begin the Sceane, who shall fpeake first?
Oh, I, I play the King, and Kings speake first;
Daughter stand thou heere, thou Sonne Terrill there,
O thou standst well, thou lean'st against a poast,
(For thou't be posted off I warrant thee:)
The King will hang a horne about thy necke,
And make a poast of thee; you stand well both,
We neede no Prologue, the King entring first,
He's a most gracious Prologue: mary then
For the Catastrophe, or Epilogue,
Ther's one in cloth of Siluer, which no doubt,

Will pleafe the hearers well when he steps out;
His mouth is fil'd with words: fee where he stands;
He'll make them clap their eyes besides their hands.
But to my part; suppose who enters now,
A King, whose eyes are set in Siluer; one
That blusheth golde, speakes Musicke, dancing walkes,

Now gathers neerer takes thee by the hand, When fraight thou thinkft, the very Orbe of heauen, Mooues round about thy fingers, then he fpeakes, Thus—thus—I know not how.

Cæl. Nor I to answer him.

Sir Quint. No girle? knowst thou not how to answer him?

Why then the field is lost, and he rides home, Like a great conquerour; not answer him? Out of thy part already? foylde the Sceane? Difranckt the lynes? difarm'd the action?

Ter. Yes, yes, true chastity is tongu'd fo weake, Tis ouer-come ere it know how to speake.

Sir qui. Come come, thou happy close of euery wrong,

Tis thou that canst dissolue the hardest doubt; Tis time for thee to speake, we are all out. Daughter, and you the man whom I call Sonne, I must confesse I made a deede of gist; To heaven and you and gave my childe to both: When on my blessing I did charme her soule, In the white circle of true Chastity, Still to run true, till death: now Sir is not, She forseyts my rich blessing, and is Fin'd With an eternall cursse; then I tell you, She shall dye now, now whilst her soule is true.

Ter. Dye!

Cæl. I, I am deaths eccho. Sir quin. O my Sonne,

I am her Father; euery teare I shed, Is threescore ten yeere olde; I weepe and smile Two kinde of teares: I weepe that she must dye, I finile that she must dye a Virgin: thus
We ioyfull men mocke teares, and teares mocke vs.

Ter. What speakes that cup?

Sir quin. White wine and poison

Sir quin. White wine and poison.

Ter. Oh:

That very name of poison, poisons me;

Thou Winter of a man thou walking or

That very name of poinon, poinons me;
Thou Winter of a man, thou walking graue,
Whofe life is like a dying Taper: how Canst thou define a Louers labouring thoughts?
What Sent hast thou but death? what taste but earth?
The breath that purles from thee. is like the Steame
Of a new-open'd vault: I know thy drist,
Because thou art trauelling to the land of Graues,
Thou couest company, and hether brings,
A health of poison to pledge death: a poison
For this sweete spring; this Element is mine,
This is the Ayre I breath; corrupt it not;
This heauen is mine, I bought it with my soule,
Of him that selles a heauen, to buy a soule.

Sir quin. Well, let her goe; she's thine thou cal'st her thine,

Thy Element, the Ayre thou breath'ft; thou knowst The Ayre thou breath'st is common, make her so: Perhaps thou't say; none but the King shall weare Thy night-gowne, she that laps thee warme with loue; And that Kings are not common: Then to shew, By consequence he cannot make her so, Indeede she may promoote her shame and thine, And with your shames, speake a good word for mine: The King shining so cleare, and we so dim, Our darke disgraces will be seene through him. Imagine her the cup of thy moist life, What man would pledge a King in his own wise?

Ter. She dyes: that sentence poisons her: O life!

What flaue would pledge a King in his owne wife?

Ceel. Welcome, ô poyfon, phificke againft luft,

Thou holesome medicine to a constant bloud;

Thou rare Apothecary that canst keepe,

My chastity preseru'd, within this boxe;

Of tempting dust, this painted earthen pot,
That stands upon the stall of the white soule,
To set the shop out like a flatterer;
To draw the customers of Sinne: come, come,
Thou art no poison, but a dyet-drinke,
To moderate my bloud: White-innocent Wine,
Art thou made guilty of my death? oh no,
For thou thy selfe art poison'd, take me hence,
For Innocence, shall murder Innocence.

Drinkes.
Ter. Holde, holde, thou shalt not dye, my Bride,

my wife,

O ftop that speedy messenger of death; O let him not run downe that narrow path, Which leades vnto thy heart; nor carry newes To thy remooning soule, that thou must dye.

Cal. Tis done already, the Spirituall Court, Is breaking vp; all Offices difcharg'd, My foule remooues from this weake flanding house, Of fraile mortallity; Deare Father, blesse Me now and euer: Dearer Man, farewell, I ioyntly take my leaue of thee and life, Goe, tell the King thou hast a constant wife.

Ter. I had a constant wife, I le tell the King; Varill the King what dost thou smile? Let they Virtill the King—what dost thou smile? art thou A Father?

Sir quin. Yea, fmiles on my cheekes arife, To fee how fweetly a true virgin dyes.

Enter Blunt, Crispinus, Fannius, Philocalia, Dicache, Petula, lights before them.

Cref. Sir Walter Terrill gallants are all ready, Ter. All ready.

Dem. Well faid, come, come, wher's the Bride? Ter. She's going to forbid the Banes agen. She'll dye a maide: and fee she keeps her oath.

All the men. Faire Cælestine!

Ladies. The Bride!

Ter. She that was faire, Whom I cal'd faire and Cæleftine.

Omnes. Dead!
Sir quin. Dead, she's deathes Bride, he hath her maidenhead.

Cri. Sir Walter Terrill. Onmes. Tell vs how.

Ter. All ceafe,

The fubicct that we treate of now is Peace.

If you demand how: I can tell: if why,
Aske the King that; he was the caufe, not I.

Let it fuffice, she's dead, she kept her vow,
Aske the King why, and then Ile tell you how:
Nay giue your Reuels life, tho she be gone,
To Court with all your preparation;
Leade on, and leade her on; if any aske
The mistery, say death presents a maske,
Ring peales of Musicke, you are Louers belles,
The losse of one heaven, brings a thousand hels.

Exeunt.

Enter an arm'd Sewer, after him the fervice of a Banquet: the King at another doore meetes them, they Exeunt.

Kin. Why fo, euen thus the Mercury of Heauen, Viners th' ambrofiate banquet of the Gods, When a long traine of Angels in a ranke, Serue the first course, and bow their Christall knees, Before the Siluer table; where Ioues page Sweet Ganimed filles Nectar: when the Gods Drinke healthes to Kings, they pledge them; none but Kings

Dare pledge the Gods, none but Gods drinke to

Kings.

Men of our houfe are we prepar'd?

Enter Scruants.

Ser. My Leige,
All waite the prefence of the Bride.

Kin. The Bride?

Yea, euery fenceles thing, which she beholdes,

Wil looke on her agen, her eyes reflection,
Will make the walles all eyes, with her perfection:
Observe me now, because of Maskes and Revels,
And many nuptiall ceremonies: Marke,
This I create the Presence heere the State,
Our Kingdomes seate, shall sit in honours Pride,
Like pleasures Queene, there will I place the Bride:
Be gone, be speedy, let me see it done.

A King in Loue, is Steward to himselse,
And never scornes the office, my selfe buy,
All glances from the Market of her eye.

Soft Musicke, chaire is set under a Canopie.

Kin. Sound Musicke, thou sweet suiter to the ayre, Now wooe the ayre agen, this is the houre, Writ in the Calender of time, this houre, Musicke shall spend, the next and next the Bride; Her tongue will read the Musicke-Lecture: Wat I loue thee Wat, because thou art not wise; Not deep-read in the volume of a man, Thou neuer saws a thought, poore soule thou thinks, The heart and tongue is cut out of one peece, But th'art deceau'd, the world hath a salse light, Fooles thinke tis day, when wise men know tis night.

Enter Sir Quintilian.

Sir quint. My Leige they're come a maske of gallants,

King. Now —— the fpirit of Loue vihers my bloud.

Sir quin. They come.

The Watch-word in a Maske is the bolde Drum.

Enter Blunt, Crifpinus, Demetrius, Philocalia, Petula, Dicache, all maskt, two and two with lights like maskers: Cælestine in a chaire.

Ter. All pleasures guard my King, I heere present, My oath vpon the knee of duety: knees Are made for Kings, they are the subjects Fees.

King. Wat Terrill, th'art ill suited, ill made vp,

In Sable collours, like a night peece dyed, Com'st thou the Prologue of a Maske in blacke; Thy body is ill shapt; a Bride-groome too? Looke how the day is drest in Siluer cloth, Laide round about with golden Sunne-beames: so (As white as heauen) should a fresh Bride-groome goe. What? Cælestine the Bride, in the same taske? Nay then I see ther's mistery in this maske, Prethee resolue me Wat?

Ter. My gracious Lord,

That part is hers, she actes it; onely I Present the Prologue, she the misterie.

Kin. Come Bride, the Sceane of blushing entred first.

Your cheekes are fetled now, and past the worst;

Vinnasks her.

A miftery? oh none plaies heere but death, -This is deaths motion, motionles; fpeake you, Flatter no longer; thou her Bride-groome; thou Her Father fpeake, Sir quint. Dead.

Ter. Dead.

Kin. How?

Sir quin. Poyfon'd. King. And poyfon'd?

What villaine durst blaspheme her beauties, or

Prophane the cleare religion of her eyes.

Ter. Now King I enter, now the Sceane is mine, My tongue is tipt with poifon: know who fpeakes, And looke into my thoughts; I blufth not King, To call thee Tyrant: death hath fet my face, And made my bloud bolde: heare me fpirits of men, And place your eares vpon your hearts; the day (The fellow to this night) faw her and me, Shake hands together: for the booke of heauen, Made vs eternall friends: thus, Man and Wife, This man of men (the King) what are not kings? Was my chiefe gueft, my royall gueft, his Grace Grac'd all the Table, and did well become

The vpper end, where fate my Bride: in briefe, He tainted her chaste eares; she yet vnknowne, His breath was treason, tho his words were none. Treason to her and me, he dar'd me then, (Vnder the couert of a flattering smile,) To bring her where she is not as she is, Aliue for lust, not dead for Chastity: The resolution of my soule, out-dar'd, I swore and taxt my faith with a fad oath; Which I maintaine; heere take her, she was mine, When she was liuing, but now dead, she's thine.

Kin. Doe not confound me quite; for mine owne guilt,

Speakes more within me then thy tongue containes; Thy forrow is my shame: yet heerein springs, Ioy out of forrow, boldnes out of shame; For I by this haue found, once in my life, A faithfull subject, thou a constant wife.

Cæl. A constant wife.

Kin. Am I confounded twice? Blasted with wonder.

Ter. O delude me not.
Thou art too true to liue agen, too faire
To be my Cælestine, too constant farre
To be a woman.

Cal. Not to be thy wife, But first I pleade my duetie, and salute The world agen.

Sir quin. My King, my Sonne, know all, I am an Actor in this mifterie,
And beare the chiefest part. The Father I,
Twas I that ministred to her chaste bloud,
A true fomniferous potion, which did steale
Her thoughts to sleepe, and flattered her with death:
I cal'd it a quick poison'd drug, to trie
The Bride-groomes loue, and the Brides constancie.
He in the passion of his loue did sight,
A combat with affection; so did both,
She for the poison stroue, he for his oath:

Thus like a happie Father, I haue won, A conflant Daughter, and a louing Sonne.

Kin. Mirrour of Maidens, wonder of thy name, I giue thee that art giuen, pure, chaste, the same Heere Wat: I would not part (for the worlds pride) So true a Bride-groome, and so chaste a Bride.

Cri. My Leige, to wed a Comicall euent,
To presupposed tragicke Argument:

Vouchfafe to exercife your eyes, and fee A humorous dreadfull Poet take degree.

Kin. Dreadfull in his proportion or his pen?
Crif. In both, he calles himselfe the whip of men.

Kin. If a cleare merrit fland vpon his praife, Reach him a Poets Crowne (the honour'd Bayes) But if he claime it, wanting right thereto, (As many baftard Sonnes of Poefie doe) Race downe his vfurpation to the ground.

True Poets are with Arte and Nature Crown'd. But in what molde fo ere this man bee cast, We make him thine Crispinus, wit and iudgement, Shine in thy numbers, and thy soule I know, Will not goe arm'd in passion gainst thy soe: Therefore be thou our felse; whilst our selse sit. But as spectator of this Sceane of wit.

Cri. Thankes royall Lord, for these high honors

done,

To me vnworthie, my mindes brightest fires Shall all consume themselues in purest slame, On the Alter of your deare eternall name.

Kin. Not vnder vs, but next vs take thy Seate, "Artes nourished by Kings make Kings more great, Vse thy Authority.

Crif. Demetrius.

Call in that felfe-creating Horace, bring Him and his shaddow foorth.

Dem. Both shall appeare,

"No black-eyed star must sticke in vertues Spheare.

Enter Sir Vaughan.

Sir Va. Ounds did you fee him, I pray let all his Masesties most excellent dogs, be set at liberties, and haue their freedoms to smell him out.

Dem. Smell whom?

Sir Vaugh. Whom? the Composer, the Prince of Poets, Horace, Horace, he's departed: in Gods name and the Kinges I farge you to ring it out from all our eares, for Horaces bodie is departed: Master hue and crie shall——God blesse King Williams, I crie you mercy and aske forgiuenes, for mine eyes did not finde in their hearts to looke vppon your Maiessie.

Kin. What news with thee Sir Vaughan?

Sir Vau. Newes? God tis as vrse newes as I can defire to bring about mee: our vnhansome-fac'd Poet does play at bo-peepes with your Grace, and cryes all-hidde as boyes doe.

Officers. Stand by, roome there, backe, roome for the Poet.

Sir Va. He's reprehended and taken, by Sefu, I reioyce very neere as much as if I had discouer'd a New-found Land, or the North and East Indies.

Enter Tucca, his boy after him with two pictures vnder his cloake, and a wreath of nettles: Horace and Bubo pul'd in by th' hornes bound both like Satyres, Sir Adam following, Mistris Miniuer with him, wearing Tuccaes chaine.

Tuc. So, tug, tug, pull the mad Bull in by' th hornes; So, baite one at that flake my place-mouth yelpers, and one at that flake Gurnets-head.

King. What bufie fellow's this?

Tuc. Saue thee, my most gracious King a Harts saue thee, all hats and caps are thine, and therefore I vaile: for but to thee great Sultane Soliman, I fcorne to be thus put off or to deliuer vp this fconce I wud.

Kin. Sir Vaughan, what's this iolly Captaines name ?

Sir Va. Has a very fufficient name, and is a man has done God and his Country as good and as hot Seruice (in conquering this vile Monster-Poet) as euer did S. George his horse-backe about the Dragon.

Tuc. I fweate for 't, but Tawfoone, holde thy tongue Mon du, if thou't praife mee, doo't behinde my backe: I am my weighty Soueraigne one of thy graines, thy valliant vaffaile; aske not what I am, but read, turne ouer, vnclaspe thy Chronicles: there thou shalt finde Buffe-Ierkin; there read my points of war; I am one a thy Mandilian-Leaders; one that enters into thy royall bands for thee; Pantilius Tucca; one of thy Kingdomes chiefest quarrellers; one a thy most faithfull—fy—fy—fy—

Sir Vau. Drunkerds I holde my life.

Tuc. No whirligig, one of his faithfull fighters; thy drawer ô royall Tamor Cham.

Sir Vau. Goe too, I pray Captaine Tucca, giue vs all leaue to doe our bufines before the King.

Tuc. With all my heart, shi, shi shake that Beare-whelp when thou wut.

Sir Vau. Horace and Bubo, pray fend an anfwere into his Masesties eares, why you goe thus in Ouids Morter-Morphesis and strange fashions of apparell.

Tuc. Cur why?

Afini. My Lords, I was drawne into this beaftly fuite by head and shoulders onely for loue I bare to my Ningle.

Tuc. Speake Ningle, thy mouth's next, belch out,

belch, why ——

Hor. I did it to retyre me from the world; And turne my Muse into a Timonist, Loathing the general Leprozie of Sinne,

Which like a plague runs through the foules of men:

Tu. But to bite euery Motley-head vice by'th nofe, you did it Ningle to play the Bug-beare Satyre, & make a Campe royall of fashion-mongers quake at your paper Bullets; you Nastie Tortois, you and your Itchy Poetry breake out like Christmas, but once a yeare, and then you keepe a Reuelling, & Araigning & a Scratching of mens faces, as tho you were Tyber the long-tail'd Prince of Rattes, doe you?

Cri. Horace.

Sir Vaughan. Silence, pray let all vrdes be strangled, or held fast betweene your teeth

Vnder controule of my dreade Soueraigne, We are thy Iudges; thou that didft Arraigne, Art now prepar'd for condemnation; Should I but bid thy Mufe stand to the Barre, Thy felfe against her wouldst give evidence: For flat rebellion gainft the Sacred lawes Of divine Poefie: heerein most she mist, Thy pride and fcorne made her turne Saterift, And not her love to vertue (as thou Preachest) Or should we minister strong pilles to thee: What lumpes of hard and indigefted fluffe, Of bitter Satirifme, of Arrogance, Of Selfe-love, of Detraction, of a blacke And flinking Infolence should we fetch vp? But none of thefe, we give thee what's more fit, With flinging nettles Crowne his flinging wit.

Tuc. Wel faid my Poeticall huckster, now he's in thy handling rate him, doe rate him well.

Hor. O I befeech your Maiefty, rather then thus to be netled, Ile ha my Satyres coate pull'd ouer mine eares, and be turn'd out a the nine Mufes Seruice.

Afin. And I too, let mee be put to my shiftes with myne Ningle.

Sir Vau. By Sefu fo you shall M. Bubo; flea off this hairie skin M. Horace, fo, fo, fo, vntruffe, vntruffe.

Tuc. His Poeticall wreath my dapper punckefetcher.

Hor. Ooh-

Sir Va. Nay, your oohs, nor your Callin-oes cannot ferue your turne; your tongue you know is full of blifters with rayling, your face full of pockey-holes and pimples, with your fierie inuentions: and therefore to preferue your head from aking, this Biggin is yours,—nay by Sefu you shall bee a Poet, though not Lawrefyed, yet Nettlefyed, so:

Tuc. Sirra stincker, thou'rt but vntruss'd now, I owe thee a whipping still, and Ile pay it: I haue layde roddes in Pisse and Vineger for thee: It shall not bee the Whipping a' th Satyre, nor the Whipping of the blinde-Beare, but of a counterfeit Iugler, that steales the name of Horace.

Kin. How? counterfeit? does hee vsurpe that name?

Sir Vau. Yes indeede ant please your Grace, he does fup vp that abhominable name.

Tuc. Hee does O King Cambifes, hee does; thou hast no part of Horace in thee but's name, and his damnable vices: thou haft fuch a terrible mouth, that thy beard's afraide to peepe out: but, looke heere you flaring Leuiathan, heere's the sweete visage of Horace; looke perboylde-face, looke; Horace had a trim longbeard, and a reafonable good face for a Poet, (as faces goe now-a-dayes) Horace did not skrue and wriggle himfelfe into great Mens famyliarity, (impudentlie) as thou dooft: nor weare the Badge of Gentlemens company, as thou dooft thy Taffetie fleeues tackt too onely with fome pointes of profit: No, Horace had not his face puncht full of Oylet-holes, like the couer of a warming-pan: Horace lou'd Poets well, and gaue Coxcombes to none but fooles; but thou lou'st none. neither Wifemen nor fooles, but thy felfe: Horace was a goodly Corpulent Gentleman, and not fo leane a hollow-cheekt Scrag as thou art: No, heere's the Coppy of thy countenance, by this will I learne to make a number of villanous faces more, and to looke scuruily vpon'th world, as thou doft.

Sir Vaughan will you minister their oath?

Sir Vau. Mafter Afinius Bubo, you shall sweare as little as you can, one oath shall damme vp your Innocent mouth.

Afin. Any oath Sir, Ile fweare any thing.

Sir Va. You shall sweare by Phabus (who is your Poets good Lord and Master,) that heere-after you will not hyre Horace, to give you poefies for rings, or hand-kerchers, or kniues which you vnderstand not, nor to write your Loue-letters; which you (in turning of a hand) fet your markes vpon, as your owne: nor you shall not carry Lattin Poets about you, till you can write and read English at most; and lastlye that you shall not call Horace your Ningle.

Asin. By Phabus I sweare all this, and as many oathes as you will, fo I may trudge.

Sir Vau. Trudge then, pay your legs for Fees, and bee diffarg'd.

Tprooth . . runne Red-cap, ware hornes there. Exit Afi.

Sir Va. Now Master Horace, you must be a more horrible fwearer, for your oath must be (like your wittes) of many collours; and like a Brokers booke of many parcels.

Read, read; th'inuentory of his oath.

Hor. Ile fweare till my haire stands up an end, to bee rid of this fling, oh this fling.

Sir Vau. Tis not your sting of conscience, is it? Tuc. Vpon him: Inprimis.

Sir Vaugh. Inprimis, you shall sweare by Phæbus and the halfe a fcore Muses lacking one: not to fweare to hang your felfe, if you thought any Man, Ooman or Silde, could write Playes and Rimes, as well-fauour'd ones as your felfe.

Well fayd, haft brought him toth gallowes Tuc.

already?

Sir Vaugh. You shall sweare not to bumbast out a new Play, with the olde lynings of Iestes, stolen from the Temples Reuels.

Tuc. To him olde Tango.

Sir Va. Moreouer, you shall not sit in a Gallery, when your Comedies and Enterludes have entred their Actions, and there make vile and bad saces at euerie lyne, to make Sentlemen have an eye to you, and to make Players assaide to take your part.

Tuc. Thou shalt be my Ningle for this.

Sir Vau. Besides, you must forsweare to venter on the stage, when your Play is ended, and to exchange curtezies, and complements with Gallants in the Lordes roomes, to make all the house rise vp in Armes, and to cry that's Horace, that's he, that's he, that pennes and purges Humours and diseases.

Tuc. There boy, agen.

Sir Vau. Secondly, when you bid all your friends to the marriage of a poore couple, that is to fay: your Wits and neceffities, alias dictus, to the rifling of your Muse: alias, your Muses vp-sitting: alias a Poet Whitfon-Ale; you shall sweare that within three dayes after, you shall not abroad, in Booke-binders shops, brag that your Vize-royes or Tributorie-Kings, have done homage to you, or paide quarterage.

Tuc. Ile busse thy head Holosernes.

Sir Vaugh. Moreouer and Inprimis, when a Knight or Sentlemen of vrship, does give you his passe-port, to travaile in and out to his Company, and gives you money for Gods sake; I trust in Sesu, you will sweare (tooth and nayle) not to make scalde and wry-mouth Iestes vpon his Knight-hood, will you not?

Hor. I neuer did it by Parnassus.

Tuc. Wut fweare by Parnaffus and lye too, Doctor

Doddipol?

Sir Va. Thirdly, and last of all sauing one, when your Playes are misse-likt at Court, you shall not crye Mew like a Pusse-cat, and say you are glad you write out of the Courtiers Element.

Tuc. Let the Element alone, tis out a thy reach.

Sir Vau. In brieflynes, when you Sup in Tauernes, amongst your betters, you shall sweare not to dippe your Manners in too much sawce, nor at Table to sling Epigrams, Embleames, or Play-speeches about you (lyke Hayle-stones) to keepe you out of the terrible daunger of the Shot, vpon payne to sit at the vpper ende of the Table, a'th left hand of Carlo Buffon: sweare all this, by Apollo and the eight or nine Muses.

Hor. By Apollo, Helicon, the Muses (who march three and three in a rancke) and by all that belongs to Pernassus, I sweare all this.

Tuc. Beare witnes.

Crif. That fearefull wreath, this honour is your due,

All Poets shall be Poet-Apes but you;

Thankes (Learnings true Meccenas, Poefies king) Thankes for that gracious eare, which you have lent, To this most tedious, most rude argument.

Kin. Our spirits have well been seasted; he whose pen

Draws both corrupt, and cleare bloud from all men: (Careles what veine he prickes) let him not raue, When his owne fides are ftrucke, blowes, blowes, doe craue.

Tuc. Kings-truce, my noble Hearbe-a-grace; my Princely fweet-William, a boone—Stay first, Ist a match or no match, Lady Furniuall Ist?

Sir Ad. & Sir quint. A match?

Mini. I, a match, fince he hath hit the Mistris so often i'th fore-game, we'll eene play out a rubbers.

Sir Ada. Take her for me.

Sir quin. Take her for thy felfe, not for me.

Sir Vau. Play out your rubbers in Gods name, by Sefu Ile neuer boule more in your Alley, Iddow. Sir Quin. My Chaine.

Sir Adam. My Purse.

Tuc. Ile Chaine thee presently, and give thee ten pound and a purse: a boone my Leige: daunce ô my delicate Rufus, at my wedding with this reuerend Antiquary; ift done? wut thou?

Kin. Ile giue thee Kingly honour: Night and Sleepe,
With filken Ribands would tye vp our eyes,
But Mistris Bride, one measure shall be led,
In scorne of Mid-nights hast, and then to bed.

Execut.

EPILOGUS.

Tucca. Entlemen, Gallants, and you my little Swaggerers that fight lowe: my tough hearts of Oake that stand too't fo valliantly, and are still within a yard of your Capten: Now the Trumpets (that fet men together by the eares) haue left their Tantara-ragboy, let's part friends. I recant, beare witnes all you Gentle-folkes (that walke i'th Galleries) I recant the opinions which I helde of Courtiers, Ladies, & Cittizens, when once (in an affembly of Friers) I railde vpon them: that Hereticall Libertine Horace, taught me fo to mouth it. Besides, twas when stiffe Tucca was a boy: twas not Tucca that railde and roar'd then, but the Deuill & his Angels: But now, Kings-truce, the Capten Summons a parlee, and deliuers himselfe and his prating company into your hands, vpon what composition you wil. Are you pleaf'd? and Ile dance Friskin for ioy, but if you be not, by'th Lord Ile fee you all --heere for your two pence a peice agen, before Ile loofe your company. I know now fome be come hyther with cheekes fwolne as big with hiffes, as if they had the toot-ach: vds-foote, if I flood by them, Ide bee fo bold as --- intreate them to hiffe in another place. Are you aduiz'd what you doe when you hiffe? you blowe away Horace's reuenge: but if you fet your hands and Seales to this, Horace will write against it, and you may haue more sport: he shall not loose his labour, he shall not turne his blanke verses into wast paper: No, my Poetasters will not laugh at him, but will vntrusse him agen, and agen, and agen. Ile tell you what you shall doe, cast your little Tucca into a Bell: doe, make a Bell of me, and be al you my clappers, vpon condition, wee may haue a lustie peale, this colde weather: I haue but two legs left me, and they are both yours: Good night my two penny Tenants

Good night.

(proiected downe, but till now not publisht,) that should have served at his Maiesties first accesse to the Cittie.

He forrow and amazement, that like an earthquake began to shake the distempered body of this Ilād (by reason of our late Soueraigns departure,) being wisely and miraculously preuented, and the feared wounds of a ciuill sword, (as Alexanders sury was with Musicke) being stopt from bursting forth, by the sound of Trompets that proclaimed King Iames: All mens eyes were presently turnd to the North, standing euen stone still in their Circles, like the poynts of some-were prefently turnd to the North, itanding even itone fill in their Circles, like the poynts of fo many Geometricall needles, through a fixed & Adamantine defire to behold this 45. yeares wonder now brought forth by Tyme: their tongues neglecting all language elfe, faue that which spake zealous prayers, and vnceasable wishes, for his most speedy and longd-for arrivall. Infomuch that the Night was thought vnworthy to be crownd with sleepe, and the day not fit to be lookt vpon by the Sunne, which brought not some fresh tydings of his Maiesties more neare and neerer approach.

At the length Expectation (who is euer waking) and that fo long was great, grewe neare the time of her deliuery, Rumor comming all in a fweate to play the Midwife, whose first comfortable words were, that this Treasure of a Kingdome (a Man Ruler) hid so many yeares from vs, was now brought to light, and at hand.

Martiall. Et populi vox erat vna, Venit.

And that he was to be conducted through fome vtter part of this his Citie, to his royall Castle the Tower, that in the age of a man (till this very minute) had not bene acquainted nor borne the name of a Kings Court. Which Entrance of his (in this maner) being fam'de abroad, Because his louing Subiects the Citizens would giue a taste of their dutie and affection: The Device following was suddeinly made vp, as the first service, to a more royall and serious ensuing Entertainment; And this (as it was then purposed) should have bene performed about the Barres beyond Bishops-gate.

The Device.

Aint George, Saint Andrew, (the Patrons of both Kingdomes) having along time lookt vpon each other, with countenances rather of meere strangers, then of such neare Neighbours, vpon the present aspect of his Maieslies approach toward London, were (in his sight) to issue from two severall places on horsebacke, and in compleate Armour, their Brestes and Caparisons suited with the Armes of England and Scotland, (as they are now quartered) to testifie their leagued Combination, and news sworne Brother-hood. These two armed Knights, encountring one another on the way, were to ride hand in hand, till they met his Maieslie. But the strangenesse of this newly-begotten amitie, slying ouer the earth, It calles vp the Genius of the Cittie, who (not so much mazde, as wondring at the Noueltie) Intersepts their Passage.

And most aptly (in our Iudgement) might this Domesticum Numen (the Genius of the place) lay iust clayme to this preheminence of first bestowing Salutations and welcomes on his Maiestie, Genius being held (Inter sictos Deos), to be God of Hospitalitie and Pleafure: and none but such a one was meet to receive so excellent and princely a Gueft.

Or if not worthy, for those two former respects: Yet being Deus Generationis, and having a power as-well ouer Countries, hearbs and trees, as ouer men, and the Cittie having now put on a Regeneration, or new birth; the induction of such a Person, might (without a Warrant from the court of Critists) passe very currant.

To made a false florish here with the borrowed weapons of all the old Maisters of the noble Science of Poesie, and to keepe a tyrannicall coyle, in Anatomizing Genius, from head to foote, (only to shew how nimbly we can carue vp the whole messe of the Poets) were to play the Executioner, and to lay our Cities houshold God on the rack, to make him confesse, how many paire of Latin sheets, we have shaken & cut into shreds to make him a garment. Such feates of Actiuitie are stale, and common among Schollers, (before whome it is protested we come not now (in a Pageant) to Play a Maisters prize) For Nunc ego ventofæ Plebis fuffragia venor.

The multitude is now to be our Audience, whose heads would miserably runne a wooll-gathering, if we doo but offer to breake them with hard words. But suppose (by the way) contrary to the opinion of all the Doctors) that our Genius (in regarde the place is Feminine, and the person it selfe, drawne Figura Humana, fed Ambiguo fexu) should at this time be thrust into womans apparrell. It is no Schisme: be it so our Genius is then a female, Antique; and reuerend both in yeares and habit: a Chaplet of mingled flowres, Inter wouen with branches of the Plane Tree (crowning her Temples: her haire long and white: her Vesture a loofe roabe, Changeable and powdred with Starres: And being (on horsebacke likewise) thus surnished, this was the tune of her voyce.

When every tongue speakes Musick: when each Pen (Dul'd and dyde blacke in Galle) is white agen, And dipt in Nectar, which by Delphick fire Being heated, melts into an Orphean-quire. When Troyes proud buildings shew like Fairie-bowers, And Streets (like Gardens) are perfum'd with Flowers; And Windowes glazde onely with wondring eyes; (In a Kings looke fuch admiration lyes!) And when foft handed Peace, fo fweetly thrines, That Bees in Souldiers Helmets build their Hines: When Ioy a tip-toe flands on Fortunes Wheele, In filken Robes: How dare you shine in Steele?

This Iewell of the Land; Englands right Eye: Altar of Loue; and Spheare of Maiestic: Greene Neptunes Minion, bou't whose Virgin-walle, Ifis is like a Cristall girdle cast. Of this are we the Genius; here have I, Slept (by the fauour of a Deity) Fortie-foure Summers and as many Springs, Not frighted with the threats of forraine Kings. But held up in that gowned State I have, By twice Twelue-Fathers politique and graue: Who with a sheathed Sword, and filken Law, Do keepe (within weake Walles) Millions in awe.

I charge you therefore fay, for what you come? What are you?

Y this time Imagine, that Pocts (who drawe fpeaking Pictures) and Painters (who make dumbe Poesie) had their heads & hands full; the one for natiue and fweet Inuen-tion; the other for lively Illustration of what the former should deuise: Both of them emulously contending (but not firiuing) with the proprest and brightest Colours of Wit and Art, to set out the beautie of the great Triumphant day.

For more exact and formall managing of which Bufinesse, a Select number both of Aldermen and Commoners (like fo many Romane Ædiles) were (Communi Confilio) chosen forth, to whose discretion, the Charge, Contriuings, Proiects, and all other Dependences, owing to fo troublesome a worke, was intirely, and Iudicially committed.

Many dayes were thriftily confumed, to molde the bodies of these Tryumphes comely, and to the honour of the Place: & at last, the stuffe whereof to frame them, was beaten out. The Soule that should give life, & a tongue to this Entertainment, being to breathe out of Writers Pens. The Limmes of it to lye at the hard-handed mercy of Mychanitiens.

Not a finger but had an Office: He was held vn worthy euer after to fucke the Hony dew of Peace, that (against his comming, by whom our Peace weares a triple Wreathe) would offer to play the Droane. Streets are furueyed; heigthes, breadths, and distances taken, as it were to make Fortifications, for the Solem-Seauen pieces of ground, (like fo many fieldes for a battaile) are plotted foorth, vppon which these Arches of Tryumph must shew themselues in their glorie: aloft, in the ende doe they aduance their proude fore-heads.

Virg:—Circum pueri, Innuptæque Puellæ, Sacra Canunt, funemq; manu contingere gaudent.

Euen childrê (might they haue bin fuffred) would gladly haue fpent their little strength, about the Engines, that mounted up the Frames: Such a fire of loue and ioy, was kindled in euery breft.

The day (for whose fake, these wonders of Wood, clymde thus into the clowdes) is now come; being so earely vp by reason of Artificiall Lights, which wakened it, that the Sunne ouer slept himselse, and rose not in many houres after, yet bringing with it into the very bosome of the Cittie, a world of people. The Streets seemde to bee paued with men: Stalles in stead of rich wares were set out with children, open Casements fild vp with women.

All Glasse windowes taken downe, but in their places, sparkeled so many eyes, that had it not bene the day, the light which reslected from them, was sufficient to have made one: hee that should have compared the emptie and vntroden walkes of London, which were to be seen in that late mortally-destroying Deluge, with the thronged streetes now, might have believed, that vpon this day, began a new Creation, & that the Citie was the onely Workhouse wherein fundry Nations were made.

A goodly and ciuil order was observed, in Martialling all the Companies according to their degrees: The first beginning at the vpper end of Saint Marks Lane, and the last reaching about the Conduit in Fleetstreet: their Seats, being double-railde: vpon the vpper part wheron they leaned, the Streamers, Ensignes, and Bannerets, of each particular Company decently fixed: And directly against them, (euen quite through the body of the Citie, so hie as to Temple-Barre) a fingle Raile (in faire diffance from the other) was likewife erected to put off the multitude. Amongst whose tongues (which in such Consorts neuer lye still,) tho there were no Musicke, yet as the Poet sayes:

Mart. Vox diverfa fonat, populorum est vox tamen vna.

Othing that they speake could bee made any thing, yet all that was spoken, sounded to this purpose, that still his Maiestie was comming. They have their longings: And behold, A farre off they spie him, richly mounted on a white Iennet, under a rich Canopy, sustained by eight Barons of the Cinqueports; the Tower serving that morning but for his with-drawing Chamber, wherein hee made him ready: and from thence stept presently into his Citie of London, which for the time might worthily borrow the name of his Court Royall: His passage alongst that Court, offering it selfe for more State) through selections.

Thus prefenting it felfe.

I T was an vpright Flat-fquare, (for it contained fiftie foote in the perpendiculer, and fiftie foote in the Ground-lyne) the vpper roofe thereof (one diffinct Gricas) bore vp the true moddells of all the notable Houses, Turrets, and Steeples, within the Citie. The Gate vnder which his Maiestie did passe, was 12. soote wide, and 18. soote hie: A Posterne likewise (at one side of it) being soure foote wide, and 8. soote in height: On either side of the Gate, stood a great French Terme, of slone, advanced vpon wodden Pedestalls; two half Pilasters of Rustick, standing over their heads. I could shoote more Arrowes at this marke, and teach you without the Carpenters Rule how to measure all the proportions belonging to this Fabrick. But an excellent hand being at this inftant curioufly defcribing all the feuen, and beflowing on them their faire prospective limmes, your eye shall hereafter rather be delighted in beholding those Pictures, than now be wearied in looking vpon mine.

The Perfonages (as well Mutes as Speakers) in this Pageant, were thefe: viz.

1 He highest Person was The Brittayne Monarchy.

At her feet, fate Divine Wifdome.

3 Beneath her, flood The Genius of the City, A man.

4 At his right hand was placed a Personage, figuring, The Counsell of the City.

5 Vnder all there lay a person representing Thamesis the River.

Sixe other perfons (being daughters to Genius) were aduaunced aboue him, on a fpreading * Afcent, of which the first was,

I Gladneffe.

2 The fecond, Veneration.

3 The third, Promptitude.
4 The fourth, Vigilance.

5 The fift, Louing affection.

6 The fixth, Vnanimity.

Of all which perfonages, Genius and Thamesis were the only Speakers: Thamesis being presented by one of the children of her Maiesties Reuels: Genius by M. Allin (servant to the young Prince) his gratulatory speach (which was delivered with excellent Action, and a well tun'de audible voyce) being to this essect:

That London may be prowd to behold this day, and therefore in name of the Lord Maior and Aldermen, the Councell, Commoners and Multitude, the heartiest Welcome is tendered to his Maiesty, that euer was bestowed on any King, &c.

The Which Banquet being taken away with Wayts & found of Musicke, there, ready for the purtors of pose, his Maiestie made his entrance into this his Court Royall: vnder this first Gate, vpon the Battlements of the worke, in great Capitalls was infcribed, thus:

LONDINIVM.

And vnder that, in a smaller (but not different) Caracter, was written,

CAMERA REGIA: The Kings Chamber.

Too short a time (in their opinions that were glewed there together so many houres, to behold him) did his Maiestie dwell vpon this first place: yet too long it seemed to other happy Spirits, that higher vp in these Elizian fields awaited for his presence: he sets on therefore (like the Sunne in his Zodiaque) bountifully dispersing his beames amongst particular Nations: the brightnesse and warmth of which, was now spent first vpon the Italians, & next vpon the Belgians: The space of ground, on which their magnificent Arches were builded, being not vnworthy to beare the name of the great Hall to this our Court Royal: wherein was to be heard & seene the sundry languages & habits of Strangers, which vnder Princes Rooses tender excellent harmony.

In a paire of Scales doe I weigh these two Nations, and finde them (neither in hearty loue to his Maiestie, in aduancement of the Cities honor, nor in forwardnesse to gloriste these Triumphes) to differ one graine.

To diffute which have done best, were to doubt that one had done well. Call their inventions therefore Twynnes: or if they themselues doe not like that name, (for happily they are emulous of one glory) yet thus may we speake of them.

282 The Kings Entertainment

Because, whosoeuer (fixis oculis) beholds their proportions,

Virg. Expleri mentem nequit, ardefcitq; tuendo.

The ftreet, vpon whose breast, this Italian Gracious Iewell was worne, was neuer worthy of that freet. name which it carries, till this houre: For here did the Kings eye meete a fecond Obiect, that inticed him by tarrying to giue honor to the place. And thus did the queintnesse of the Engine seeme to discouer it felse before him.

The Italians Pageant.

He building tooke vp the whole bredth of the Street, of which, the lower part was a Square, garnished with foure great Columnes: In the midst of of which Square, was cut out a fayre and spacious high Gate, arched, being twenty feuen foot in the perpendicular lyne, and eyghteene at the ground lyne: ouer the Gate, in golden Caracters, these verses (in a long fquare) were inscribed:

Tu Regere Imperio populos Iacobe memento, Hæ tibi erunt Artes, Pacig; imponere morem, Parcere Subjectis, & debellare superbos.

And directly aboue this, was advanc'd the Armes of the Kingdome, the Supporters fairely cut out to the life: ouer the Lyon (some prety distance from it) was written.

IACOBO REGI MAGN.

And aboue the head of the Vnicorne, at the like distance, this,

HENRICI VII. ABNEP.

In a large Square erected aboue all thefe, King Henry the feuenth was royally feated in his Imperiall Robes, to whome King Iames (mounted on horfebacke) approches, and receiues a Scepter, ouer both their heads thefe words being written,

HIC VIR, HIC EST.

Betweene two of the Columnes, (on the right hand) was fixed up a Square table, wherein, in liuely and excellent colours, was lim'd a woman, figuring Peace, her head fecurely leaning on her left hand, her body modefly bestowed (to the length) vpon the earth: In her other hand, was held an Olive branch, the Enfigne of Peace, her word was out of Virgil, being thus,

—— Deus nobis hæc otia fecit.

Beneath that peece, was another fquare Table, reaching almost to the Bases of the two Columnes: In which, 2. (feeming) Sea personages, were drawne to the life, both of them lying, or rather leaning on the bosome of the earth, naked; the one a woman, her backe onely seene; the other a man, his hand stretching and fastning it selfe vpon her shoulder: the word that this dead body spake, was this,

I Decus, I Nostrum.

Vpon the left-hand fide of the Gate, betweene the other two Columnes, were also two fquare Tables: In the one of which were two persons portrayed to the life, naked, and wilde in lookes, the word, Expectate folo Trinobanti.

And ouer that, in another fquare, carying the fame proportion, floode a woman vpright, holding in her hand a Shield, beneath whom was inferibed in golden Caraclers,

---- Spes ô fidifsima rerum.

And this was the shape and front of the first great Square, whose top being flat, was garnished with Pelasters, and vpon the roose was directed a great Padeslall, on which stood a Person carued out to the life (a woman) her left hand leaning on a sword, with the poynt downeward, and her right hand reaching foorth a Diadem, which shee seemde by bowing of her knee and head, to bestow vpon his Maiestie.

On the foure corners of this upper part, floode foure naked portraytures (in great) with artificiall

Trumpets in their hands.

In the Arch of the Gate, was drawne (at one fide) a companie of Palme trees, young, and as it were but newly fpringing, ouer whose branches, two naked winged Angels, flying, held foorth a Scroll, which feem'd to fpeake thus,

Spes altera.

On the contrarie fide, was a Vine, fpreading it felfe into many branches, and winding about Oliue, and

Palme trees: two naked winged Angels hanging likewife in the Ayre ouer them, and holding a Scrol betweene them, fild with this infeription, Vxor tua, sicut vitis abundans, Et filii tui, sicut palmites Oliuarum.

If your imaginations (after the beholding of these obiects) will suppose, that his Maiestie is now gone to the other side of this Italian Trophice; doe but cast your eyes backe, and there you shall finde inst the same proportions, which the fore-part, or Brest of our Arch carrieth, with equal number of Columnes, Pedestals, Pilasters, Lim'd peeces, and Carued Statues. Ouer the Gate, this Distriction presents it selfe.

Nonne tuo Imperio fatis est Iacobe potiri? Imperium in Musas, Aemule quæris? Habes.

Vnder which verses, a wreathe of Lawrell seem'd to be ready to be let fall on his Maiesties head, as hee went vnder it, being held betweene two naked Antique women, their bodies stretching (at the full length) to compasse ouer the Arch of the Gate. And aboue those verses, in a faire Azure table, this inscription was aduanc'd in golden Capitals:

EXPECTATIONI ORBIS TERRARVM, REGIB. GENITO NVMEROSISS. REGVM GENITORI FÆLICISS. REGI MARTIGENARVM AVGVSTISS. REGI MVSARVM GLORIOSISS.

Itali slatuerunt lætitiæ & cultus Signum.

On the right hand of this backe-part, betweene two of the Columnes was a fquare table, in which was drawne a Woman, crown'd with beautifull and fresh slowres, a Caducœus in her hand: All the notes of a plenteous and liuely Spring being caried about her, the soule that gaue life to this speaking picture, was:

^{———} Omnis feret omnia Tellus.

The Kings Entertainment

Aboue this peece, in another fquare, was portrayed a Tryton, his Trumpet at his mouth, feeming to vtter this much.

Dum Cælum stellas.

286

Vpon the left hand of this back-part, in most excellent colours, Antikely attir'd, stood the 4. kingdoms, England, Scotland, France and Ireland, holding hands together; this being the language of them all,

Concordes slabili Fatorum Numine.

The middle great Square, that was aduaunced ouer the Freeze of the Gate, held Apollo, with all his Enfignes and properties belonging vnto him, as a Sphere, Bookes, a Caducaus, an Octoedron, with other Geometricall Bodies, and a Harpe in his left hand: his right hand with a golden Wand in it, poynting to the battel of Lepanto fought by the Turks, (of which his Maiestie hath written a Poem) and to doe him Honour, Apollo himselfe doth here seeme to take vpon him to deferibe: his word, Fortunate Puer.

These were the Mutes, and properties that helpt to furnish out this great Italian Theater: vpon whose Stage, the found of no voice was appointed to be heard, but of one, (and that, in the presence of the Italians themselues) who in two little opposite galleries vnder & within the Arch of the gate, very richly and neately hung, deliuered thus much Latine to his Maiestie:

The Italians speach.

Alue, Rex magne, falue. Salutem Maiestati tuæ Itali, sælicissimum Aduentum læti, sælices sub Te futuri, precamur. At nec Atlas, qui Cælum sustinet, nec ipsa Cæli conuexa, altitudinem attingant meritorum Regis optimi; Hoc est, cius, quem de Teipso expressisti doctissimo (Deus!) et admirabili penicillo: Beatissimos populos, vbi & Philosophus regnat, & Rex Philosophatur. Salue, Rex nobilissime, salue, viue, Rex potentissime, sæliciter. Regna, Rex sapientissime, sæliciter, Itali optamus omnes, Itali clamamus omnes: Omnes, omnes.

Hauing hoysted vp our Sailes, and taken leaue of this Italian shore, let our next place of casting anker, be vpon the Land of the 17. Prouinces; where the Belgians, (attired in the costly habits of their own natiue Countrey, without the fantasticke mixtures of other Nations) but more richly furnished with loue, stand ready to receyue his Maiestie: who (according to their expectation) does most gratiously make himfelse & his Royall traine their Princely ghests. The house which these Strangers haue builded to entertaine him in, is thus contriu'de.

The Pageant of the Dutch-men, by the Royall Exchange.

The Foundation of this, was (as it were by Fate) layd neere vnto a royall place; for it was a royall and magnificent labour: It was bounded in with the houses on both sides the street, so prowdly (as all the rest also did) did this extend her body in bredth. The passage of State, was a Gate, large, ascending eighteene foot high, aptly proportion'd to the other lymmes, and twelve foot wyde, arched; two lesser Posternes were for common feet, cut out and open'd on the sides of the other.

Within a fmall Freeze, (and kiffing the very forhead of the Gate) the Aedifice spake thus,

Vnicus à Fato furgo non Degener Hæres.

Whil'ft lifting vp your eye to an vpper larger Freeze, you may there be enriched with these golden Capitalls, IACOBO, ANGL. SCOT. FRANC. HIBERN. REGI OPT. PRINC. MAX. BELGAE ded.

But bestowing your fight vpon a large Azure Table, lyned quite through with Caracters of gold, likewise you may for your paynes receive this inscription,

Aboue which (being the heart of the Trophee) was a fpacious fquare roome, left open, Silke Curtaines drawne before it, which (vpon the approch of his Maiestie) being put by, 17. yong Damfels, (all of them fumptuously adorned, after their countrey fashion,) sate as it were in so many Chaires of State, and figuring in their persons, the 17. Provinces of Belgia, of which every one caried in a Scutchion (excellently pencilde) the Armes and Coate of one.

Aboue the vpper edge of this large Square Roome, and ouer the first Battlement, in another front, aduanc'd for the purpose, a square Table was sastened vpright, in which was drawne the liuely picture of the King, in his Imperial Robes; a Crowne on his head, the Sword and Scepter in his handes: vpon his left side stood a woman, her sace fixed vpon his, a burning hart in her right hand, her left hanging by, a Heron standing close vnto her: vpon his other side stood vpright (with her countenance directed likewise vpon him) another woman, winged, and in a Freeze beneath them, which tooke vp the sull length of this Square: this inscription set out it selfe in golden wordes;

--- Vtroque Satellite Tutus.

Suffer your eyes to be wearied no longer with gazing vp fo high at those Sun-beams, but turne the afide to looke below through the little Posternes: whose State sweld quickly vp to a greatnes, by reason of 2. Columnes, that supported them on either side. In a Table, ouer the right-hand Portall, was in perfect colours, drawne a Serpêt, pursude by a Lion: betweene them, Adders and Snakes, chasing one another, the Lion scornfully casting his head backe, to behold the violence of a blacke storme, that heaven powred downe, to ouertake them: the found that came from all this, was thus:

- Sequitur gravis Ira feroces.

The opposite body to this (on the other side, and directly ouer the other Portall, whose pompe did in like maner leane vpon, and vphold it selfe by two mayne Columnes) was a square peece, in which were to be seene, Sheepe browzing, Lambes nibbling, Byrds slying in the Ayre, with other arguments of a ferene and vntroubled season, whose happinesse was proclaymed in this maner,

- Venit alma Cicuribus Aura.

Directly aboue this, in a fquare Table, were portrayed two Kings, reuerently and antiquely attyrde, who feem'd to walke vpon these golden lines, Nafcitur in nostro Regum par Nobile Rege Alter Iesiades, Alter Amoniades.

From whome, leade but your eye, in a straight line, to the other fide, (ouer the contrary Posterne) and there in a fecond vpper Picture, you may meete with two other Kings, not fully so antique, but as rich in their Ornaments; both of them, out of golden letters, composing these wordes, Lucius ante alios, Edwardus, & inde IACOBVS Sextus, & hic fanxit, fextus & ille fidem.

And these were the Nerues, by which this great Triumphall Body was knit together, in the inseriour parts of it, vpon the shoulders whereof, (which were garnished with rowes of Pilasters, that supported Lions, rāpant, bearing vp Banners) there should another lesser Square, the head of which wore a Coronet of Pilasters also; and aboue the, vpon a Pedestal, curiously closed in betweene the tayles of two Dolphins, was advanced a Woman, holding in one hand, a golden Warder, and poynting with the fore-finger of the other hand vp to heaven. She figur'd Divine Providence, for so at her feete was written.

Prouida Mens Cali.

Somewhat beneath which, was to bee seene an Imperiall Crowne, two Scepters being sastened (crossewise) vnto it, and deliuering this speach,

----Sceptra hæc concredidit vni.

At the elbowes of this vpper Square, flood vpon the foure corners of a great Pedeflall, foure Pyramides, hollow, and fo neately contriu'de, that in the night time (for anger that the Sunne would no longer looke vpon these earthly beauties) they gaue light to themselues, and the whole place about them: the windowes, from whence these artificiall beames were throwne, being cut out in such a fashion, that (as Ouid, describing the Palace of the Sunne, sayes)

Clara micante Auro, Flammasq; imitante Pyropo,

So did they shine asarre off, like Crysolites, and sparkled like Carbuncles: Betweene those two Pyramides that were listed up on the right hand, stood Fortitude; her Piller resting it selfe upon this golden line, Perfero curarum pondus, Diferimina temno.

Betweene the two Pyramides on the other fide, Iuftice challenged her place, being knowne both by her habit and by her voyce, that fpake thus,

Aufpice me Dextra solium Regale perennat.

Wee haue held his Maiestie too long from entring this third Gate of his Court Royall; It is now hie time, that those eyes, which on the other side ake with rolling vp and downe for his gladfome prefence, should iniov that happinesse. Beholde, hee is in an instance passed thorough; The Obiects that there offer themfelues before him, being thefe:

Our Belgick Statue of Triumph, weares on her backe, as much riches, as fhe caried vpon her breft, being altogether as glorious in Columnes, standing on Tiptoe, on as loftie and as proude Pyramides; her walkes encompa'st with as strong and as neate Pilasters: the colours of her garments are as bright, her adorne-ments as many: For,

In the fquare Field, next and lowest, ouer one of the Portals, were the Dutch Countrey people, toyling at their Husbandrie; women carding of their Hemp, the men beating it, fuch excellent Art being exprest in their faces, their stoopings, bendings, sweatings, &c. that nothing is wanting in them but life (which no colours can giue) to make them bee thought more than the works of Paynters.

Lift vp your eyes a little aboue them, and beholde their Exchange; the countenaunces of the Marchants there being fo liuely, that bargaines feeme to come from their lippes.

But in flead of other speach, this is onely to bee had,

PIO INVICTO, R. IACOBO,

OVOD FEL. EIVS AVSPICIIS VNIVERSVM IMPERIVM PACAT, MARE TVTVM PORTVS APERIT.

Ouer the other Portall, in a fquare (proportion'd, to the bignes of those other) men, women, & childrê (in Dutch habits) are busie at other workes: the men

Weauing, the women Spinning, the children at their Hand-loomes, &c. Aboue whose heads, you may with little labour, walke into the Mart, where as well as the Froe, as the Burger, are buying and selling, the praise of whose industrie (being worthy of it) stands publisht in gold, thus,

QVOD MVTVIS COMMERCIIS, ET ARTIFI-CVM NAVTARVMQVE SOLERTIA CRES-CAT, DESIDIA EXVLAT, MVTVAQVE AMI-CITIA CONSERVETVR.

Inft in the midft of these squares, and directly ouer the Gate, in a large Table, whose seete are fastned to the Freeze, is their fishing & shipping lively and sweetely set downe: The Skipper (even though he be had tugging at his Net) loudly singing this:

Quod Celeb: hoc Emporium prudenti industria fuos, Quouis Terrarum Negotiatores emittat, exteros Humaniter admittat, foris famam, domi divitias augeat

Let vs now clime vp to the vpper battlementes; where, at the right hand Time flandes: at the left (in a direct line) his daughter Trueth; vnder her foote is written, Sinecra.

And vnder his,

Durant.

Sincera Durant.

In the midst of these two, three other persons are rancked togeather, Art, Sedulitie, and Labour: beneath whom, in a Freeze rouing along the whole breadth of that Square, you may find these wordes in gold.

Artes, Perfecit, Sedulitate, Labor.

Sine Cæde at Sanguine.

And thus haue we bestowed vpon you, all the dead Cullours of this Picture, (wherein notwithstanding, was left so much life) as can come from Art. The speaking instrument, was a Boy, attyred all in white Silke, a wreath of Lawrell about his temples: from his voyce came this found.

Whilst the tongnes of the Strangers were imployed in extolling the gracious Afpect of the King, and his Princely behaviour towardes them, his Maiestie (by the quicknes of Time, and the earnestnesse of expectation, whose eyes ran a thousand wayes to finde him) had won more ground, and was gotten fo far as to \acute{S} . Mildreds Church in the Poulterie: close to the fide of which, a Scaffold was erected; where (at the Citties cost) to delight the Queene with her owne country Muficke, nine Trumpets, and a Kettle Drum, did very fprightly & actively found the Danish march: Whose cunning and quicke stops, by that time they had toucht the last Ladyes eare in the traine, behold, the King was advaunced vp fo hie as to Cheapefide: into which place (if Loue himselfe had entered, and seene fo many gallant Gentlemen, fo many Ladyes, and beautifull creatures, in whose eyes glaunces (mixt with modeft lookes) feemed to daunce courtly Measures in their motion) he could not have chosen, to have given the Roome any other name, then, The Prefence Chamber.

Two Posternes stoode wide open on the two sides, either of them being 4. soote wide, and 8. soote high. The two Portals that ietted out before these Posternes, had their sides open foure seuerall wayes, and served as Pedestalles (of Rusticke) to support two Pyramides, which stoode vpon soure great Balles, and soure great Lions: the Pedestalles, Balles, and Pyramides, deuowing in their sull vpright height, from the ground line to the top, iust 60. soote. But burying this Mechanicke Body in scilence, let vs now take note in what sashion it stood attyred. Thus then it went appareled.

The Deuice at

Soper-lane end.

VIII Ithin a large Compartiment, mounted aboue the forehead of the Gate, ouer the Freeze, in Capitalles was infcribed this Title:

NOVA FÆLIX ARABIA.

Vnder that shape of Arabia, this Iland being sigured: which two names of New, and Happie, the Countrey could by no merit in it selfe, challenge to be her due, but onely by meanes of that secret insuence accompanying his Maiestie wheresoeuer hee goes, and working such effectes.

The most worthy personage aduaunced in this place, was Arabia Britannica, a Woman, attyred all in White, a rich Mantle of Greene cast about her, an imperiall Crowne on her head, and a Scepter in one hand, a Mound in the other: vpon which she sadly leaned: a rich Veyle (vnder the Crowne) shadowing her eyes, by reason that her countenaunce (which till his Maiesties approach, could by no worldly object be drawne to looke vp) was pensiuely dejected: her ornamentes were markes of Chasteie and Youth: the Crowne, Mound, and Scepter, badges of Soueraigntie.

Directly vnder her in a Cant by her felfe, Fame flood vpright: A Woman in a Watchet Roabe, thickly fet with open Eyes, and Tongues, a payre of large golden Winges at her backe, a Trumpet in her hand, a Mantle of fundry cullours trauerfing her body: all these Ensignes desplaying but the propertie of her swiftnesse, and aptnesse to disperse Rumors.

In a Descent beneath her, being a spatious Concaue roome, were exalted fine Mounts, swelling vp with different ascensions; vpon which sate the fine Sences, drooping: Viz.

I	Auditus,	Hearing.
2	Vifus,	Sight.
3	Tactus,	Feeling.
4	Olfactus.	Smelling
5	Gustus.	Taste.

Appareled in Roabes of distinct cullours, proper to their natures; and holding Scutchions in their handes: vpon which were drawne Herogliphicall bodyes, to expresse their qualities.

Some prettie diflaunce from them (and as it were in the midfl before them) an artificiall Lauer or Fount was erected, called the Fount of Arate (Vertue.) Sundry Pipes (like veines) branching from the body of it: the water receiuing libertie but from one place, and that very flowly.

At the foote of this Fount, two perfonages (in greater shapes then the rest) lay sleeping: vpon their brestes stucke their names, Detractio, Obliuio: The one holdes an open Cuppe; about whose brim, a wreath of curled Snakes were winding, intimating that whatsoeuer his lippes toucht, was poysoned: the other helde a blacke Cuppe couerd, in token of an enuious desire to drowne the worth and memorie of Noble persons.

Vpon an Afcent, on the right hand of these, slood the three Charites or Graces, hand in hand, attyred like three Sifters.

Aglaia.

Thalia, Figuring Sightness, or Maiestie.

Youthfulnes, or florishing.

Chearfulnes, or gladnes.

They were all three Virgins: their countenaunces laboring to fmother an innated fweetnes and chearefulnes, that appareled their cheekes; yet hardly to be hid: their Garmentes were long Roabes of fundry coloures, hanging loofe: the one had a Chaplet of fundry Flowers on her head, clustard heere and there with the Fruites of the earth. The feconde, a Garland of eares of Corne. The third, a wreath of Vinebranches, mixt with Grapes and Oliues.

Their haire hung downe ouer their shoulders loose, and of a bright cullour, for that Epithite is properly bestowed vpon them, by Homer in his Himne to Apollo.

PVLCHRICOMÆ CHARITES.

The Bright Hayrde Graces.

They helde in their handes penfild Shieldes: vpon the first, was drawne a Rose: on the second, 3. Dyce: on the third, a branch of Mirtle.

Figuring $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Pleafantneffe.} \\ \textit{Accord.} \\ \textit{Florishing.} \end{array} \right.$

In a direct line against them, stoode the three Howres, to whom in this place we give the names of Love, Inslice, and Peace: they were attyred in loofe Roabes of light cullours, paynted with Flowers: for fo Ouid apparrels them.

This Presenter was a Boy, one of the Choristers, belonging to Paules.

His Speech.

Great Monarch of the West, whose glorious Stem, Doth now support a triple Diadem, Weying more that that of thy grand Grandfire Brute, Thou that maift make a King thy substitute, And doest besides the Red-rose and the white, With the rich flower of France thy garland dight, Wearing aboue Kings now, or those of olde, A double Crowne of Lawrell and of gold, O let my voyce paffe through thy royall eare, And whifper thus much, that we figure here, A new Arabia, in whose spiced nest A Phænix liu'd and died in the Sunnes breft, Her losse, made fight, in teares to drowne her eyes, The Eare grew deafe, Tastelike a sick-man lyes, Finding no rellish: euery other Sence, Forgat his office, worth and excellence, Whereby this Fount of Vertue gan to freeze,

At the shutting vp of this Speech, his Maiestie (being readie to goe on.) did most graciouslie feede the eyes of beholders with his presence, till a Song was spent: which to a loude and excellent Musicke (composed of Violins & an other rare Artificiall Instrumet, wherein besides sundrie seuerall sounds essued (all at one time) were also sensibly distinguisht the chirpings of birds, was by two Boyes (Choristers of Paules) deliuered in sweete and rauishing voyces.

Cant.

Troynouant is now no more a Citie:
O great pittie! is't not pittie!
And yet her Towers on tiptoe fland,
Like Pageants built on Fairie land,
And her Marble armes,
Like to Magicke charmes,
binde thousands fast vnto her,
That for her wealth & beauty daily wooe her,
yet for all this, is't not pittie!
Troynouant is now no more a Cittie.

2

Troynouant is now a Sommer Arbour, or the neft wherein doth harbour The Eagle, of all birds that flie, The Soueraigne, for his piercing eie If you wifely marke, Tis befides a Parke,
Where runnes (being newly borne)
With the fierce Lyon, the faire Vnicorne, or elfe it is a wedding Hall,
Where foure great Kingdomes holde a Festivall.

3

Troynouant is now a Bridall Chamber, whose roose is gold, sloore is of Amber, By vertue of that holy light,
That burnes in Hymens hand, more bright,
Than the filuer Moone,
or the Torch at Noone,
Harke what the Ecchoes say!
Brittaine till now nere kept a Holiday:

for Ioue dwels heere: And tis no pittie,

If Troynouant be now no more a Cittie.

Nor let the fcrue of any wresting comment vpon thefe words.

Troynouant is now no more a Citie.

Enforce the Authors inuention away fro his owne cleare straight and harmelesse meaning: all the scope of this fiction stretching onely to this point, that London (to doo honour to this day, wherein springs vp all her happines) beeing rauished with vnutterable ioyes, makes no account (for the present) of her ancient title, to be called a Citie, (because that during these tryumphes, shee puts off her formall habite of Trade and Commerce, treading euen Thrist it selse vnder soote, but now becomes a Reueller and a Courtier. So that, albeit in the end of the first Stanza tis said,

Yet for all this, is't not pittie Troynouant is now no more a Cittie.

By a figure called Castigatio or the mender, heere followes prefently are proofe; wherein tytles of Sommer Arbor; The Eagles neft, a wedding Hall, &c. are throwne voon her, the least of them being at this time by vertue of Poeticall Heraldrie, but especiallie in regard of the State that now vpholds her, thought to be names of more honour, than that of her owne. this short Apologie, doth our verse make for it selfe, in regard that fome, (to whofe fetled judgement and authoritie the cenfure of these Deuises was referred.) brought though not bitterly the life of those lines into question: But appealing with Machætas to Phillip, now these reasons have awakend him: let vs followe King Iames, who having passed vnder this our third gate, is by this time, graciously receauing a gratulatorie Oration from the mouth of Sir Henry Mountague, Recorder of the Citie, a fquare lowe gallorie, fet round about with pilasters, beeing for that purpose erected some 4. foote from the ground, and joyned to the front of the Crosse in Cheape; where likewise stood all the Aldermen, the Chamberlaine, Towne-clarke, and Counfell of the Citie.

The Recorders Speech.

High Imperiall Maiestie, it is not yet a yeere in dayes since with acclamation of the People, Citizens, and Nobles, auspitiouslie heere at this Crosse was proclaimed your true succession to the Crowne. If then it was ioyous with Hats, hands, and hearts, lift vp to heauen to crie King Iames, what is it now to see King Iames? Come therefore O worthiest of Kings as a glorious Bridegroome through your Royall Chamber: But to come neerer, Adest quem querimus. Twentie and more are the Soueraignes wee haue served since our conquest, but Conquerour of hearts it is you and your Posteritie, that we haue vowed to loue and wish to serve whilst London is a Citie. In pledge whereof my Lord Maior, the Aldermen, and Commons of this

Citie, wishing a golden Reigne vnto you, present your Greatnes with a little cup of gold.

At the end of the Oration three Cups of gold were giuen (in the name of the Lord Maior, and the whole Body of the Citie,) to his Maieslie, the young Prince, and the Queene.

All which but aboue all (being gifts of greater value) the loyall hearts of the Citizens, beeing louingly receaued; his Grace was (at least it was appointed he should haue beene) met on his way neere to the Crosse, by Syluanus drest vp in greene Iuie, a Cornet in his hand, being attended on by source other Syluans in Iuie likewise, their bowes and quiuers hanging on their shoulders, and winde Instruments in their hands.

Vpon fight of his Maiestie, they make a stand, Syluanus breaking forth into this abrupt passion of ioy.

Syluanus.

Stay Syluans, and let the loudest voyce of Musicke proclayme it (euen as high as Heauen) that hee is come.

Alter Apollo redit, Nouus En, iam regnat Apollo.

Which acclamation of his was borne vp into the ayre, and there mingled with the breath of their muficall Instruments: whose found beeing vanished to nothing, Thus goes our Speaker on.

Syluanus.

Most happie Prince, pardon me, that being meane in habite, and wilde in apparance, (for my richest liuorie is but leaues, and my stateliest dwelling but in the woodes,) thus rudely with piping Syluanes. I prefume to intercept your royall passage. These are my walkes: yet stand I heere, not to cut off your way, but to giue it a full and a bounteous welcome, beeing a Meffenger fent from the Lady Eirene my Mistresse, to deliuer an errand to the best of all these Worthies, your royall selfe. Many Kingdomes hath the Lady fought out to abide in, but from them all, hath shee beene most churlishly banished: not that her beautie did deserve such vnkindnes, but that (like the eye of Heauen) hers were too bright, and there were no Eagles breeding in those ness, that could truly beholde them.

At last heere she ariued, Destinie subscribing to this Warrant, that none but this Land should be her Inheritance. In contempt of which happines, Enuie shootes his impossoned stings at her heart, but his Adders (being charmed) turne their daungerous heads vpon his owne bosome. Those that dwell far off, pine away with vexing to see her prosper, because all the acquaintance which they have of her, is this, that they know there is such a goodly Creature as Eirene, in the world, yet her face they know not: whilst all those that heere sleepe vnder the warmth of her wings, adore her by the facred & Cœlestiall name of Peace, for number being (as her blessings are) infinite.

Her daughter Euporia (well knowne by the name of Plentie, is at this present with her, (being indeede neuer from her side) vnder yonder Arbour they sit, which after the daughters name is called, Hortus Euporia (Plenties Bower:) Chast are they both, and both maydens in memorie of a Virgine, to whom they were nurse children: for whose sake (because they were bound to her for their life,) mee, have they charged to lay at your imperiall seete, (being your hereditatie due) the tribute of their loue: And with it thus to fav.

That they have languished many heavie moneths for your presence, which to them would have beene, (& proud they are that it shall be so now,) of the same operation and influence, that the Sunne is to the spring, and the spring to the earth: hearing therefore what trebble preserment you have bestowed upon this day, wherein besides the beames of a glorious Sunne, two other cleare and gracious starres shine cheerefullie on these her homely buildings: Into which (because no dutie should bee wanting) shee hath given leaue euen to Strangers, to bee Sharers in her happines, by fuffering them to bid you likewife welcome. By mee (once hers now your vaffaile,) shee entreates, and with a knee finking lower than the ground on which you tread, doo I humbly execute her pleafure, that ere you passe surther, you would deigne to walke into yonder Garden; the Hesperides live not there but the Muses, and the Muses no longer than vnder your protection. Thus farre am I fent to conduct you thither, proftrately begging this grace, (fince I dare not, as beeing vnwoorthie, lackey by your royall fide) in that yet these my greene Followers and my selfe may bee joyfull fore-runners of your expected approch. away Syluanus.

And being (in this their returne) come neare to the Arbor, they gaue a figne with a fhort florish from all their Cornets, that his Maiestie was at hand: whose princely eye whilest it was delighting it selfe with the quaint object before it, a sweete pleasure likewise courted his eare in the shape of Musicke, sent from the voyces of nine Boyes (all of them Queristers of Paules) who in that place presenting the nine Muses sang the dittie sollowing to their Viols and other Instruments.

But, least leaping too bluntly into the midst of our Garden at first, we deface the beautie of it, let vs send you round about it, and survey the Walles, Allies, and quarters of it as they lye in order.

This being the fashion of it.

The paffages through it were two gates, arched and grated Arbor-wife, their height being 16. foote, their breadth 10. from the roofe, and fo on the fides, downe to the ground, Cowcumbers, Pompions, Grapes, and all other fruits growing in the land, hanging artificially in clusters: Betweene the two gates, a payre of stayres were mounted with some 20 affents: at the bottome of them (on two pillers) were fixed two Satiers carued out in wood; the sides of both the gates, being strengthened with source great French frames standing upon pedestals, taking up in their sull height 20. foote.

The vpper part also caried the proportion, of an Arbor, being clofde with their round tops, the midst whereof was exalted aboue the other two, Fortune standing on the top of it. The garnishments for the whole Bower, being Apples, Peares, Cheries, Grapes, Rofes, Lillies, and all other both fruits and flowers most artificially molded to the life. The whole frame of this fomer banqueting house stood (at the ground line) vpon 4 foote; the Perpendicular stretching it felse Wee might (that day) have called it, The Musicke roome, by reason of the chaunge of tunes, that danced round about it; for in one place were heard a noyfe of cornets, in a fecond, a confort, the third, (which fate in fight) a fet of Viols, to which the Muses fang.

The principall persons advanced in this Bower, were, Eirene (Peace) and Euporia (Plenty) who sate together.

Eierene.

Peace: Was richly attired, her vpper garment of carnation, hanging loofe, a Robe of White vnder it, powdred with Starres, and girt to her: her haire of a bright colour, long, and hanging at her back, but interwouen with white ribbands, and Iewels; her browes were encompast with a wreath compounded of the Oliuc, the Lawrell, & the Date tree: In one hand shee held a Caducæus, (or Mercuries rod, the god of eloquence:) In the other, ripe eares of corne gilded: on her lap sate a Doue: All these being ensignes, and furnitures of Peace.

Euporie.

Plenty: Her daughter fate of the left hand, in changable colours, a rich mantle of Gold trauerfing her bodie: her haire large and loofely fpreading ouer her shoulders: on her head a crowne of Poppy & Mustard feede; the antique badges of Fertilitie & Abundance, In her right hand a Cornucopia, filde with flowers, fruits, &c.

Chrufos.

Directly under these, sate Chrusos, a person figuring Gold, his dressing, a tinsell Robe of the colour of Gold.

Argurion.

And close by him, Argurion, Siluer, all in white tinsell; both of them crownde, and both their hands supporting a Globe, betweene them, in token that they commaunded ouer the world.

Pomona.

Pomona, the goddeffe of garden fruits; fate at the one fide of Gold and Siluer; attirde in greene, a wreath of frutages circling her temples: her armes naked: her haire beautifull, and long.

Ceres.

On the other fide fate Ceres, crowned with ripened eares of Wheate, in a loofe ftraw-coloured roabe.

In two large defcents (a little belowe them) were placed at one end,

The nine Muses.

Holding fhieldes in their hands, expressing their feuerall offices.

Vpon the verie vpper edge of a faire large Freeze, running quite along the full breadth of the Arbor, and iuft at their feete were planted rankes of artificiall Artichocks and rofes.

To describe what apparrell these Arts, and Muses wore, were a hard labour, and when it were done, all were but idle. Few Taylors know how to cut out their garments: they have no Wardrob at all, not a Mercer, nor Merchant, though they can all write and read verie excellently well, will fuffer them to bee great in their bookes. But (as in other countries) fo in this of ours, they goe attirde in such thin clothes, that the winde euerie minute is readie to blowe through them: happy was it for them, that they tooke vp their lodging in a fummer arbour, and that they had fo much musicke to comfort them, their ioies (of which they do not euerie daie taft,) being notwithflanding now infinitelie multiplied, in this, that where before they might have cryed out till they grew horfe, & non would heare them, now they fing.

Aderitque vocatus Apollo.

Chorus in full voices answering it thus.

Syluanus (as you may perceiue by his office before) was but fent of an errand; there was another of a higher calling, a Trauailer, and one that had gon ouer much grownd, appointed to fpeake to his Maiesty, his name Vertumnus, the maister Gardner, and husband to Pomona: To tell you what cloathes hee had on his backe were to doo him wrong, for hee had (to fay truth) but one fuite: homelie it was, yet meete and fit for a Gardener: In fleade of a hat, his browes were bound about with flowers, out of whose thicke heapes, here and there peeped a queene apple, a cherie, or a peare, this boon-grace hee made of purpose to keepe his face from heate, (because he defired to looke louelie) yet the funne found him out, and by casting a continual eye at him, whilst the old man was dreffing his arbours, his cheekes grew tawnie, which colour for the better grace, he himfelfe interpreted blushing. A white head he had, & funneburnt hands: in the one he held a weeding hooke, in the other a grafting knife: and this was the tenor of his speech. That he was bound to give thanks to heauen. In that the arbour and trees which growing in that fruitfull Cynthian garden, began to droop and hang downe their greene heades, and to vncurle their crifped forlocks, as fearing and in fome fort, feeling the sharpenesse of Autumnian malice, are now on the fudden by the deuine influence apparelled with a fresh and more liuely verdure than euer they were

And make heauen ring, His welcomes showted loudelie, For Heauen it selfe lookes proudly, That earth has such a King. Chor. Earth has not such a King.

His Maiestie dwelt here a reasonable long time, giuing both good allowance to the song & Musick, and liberally bestowing his eye on the workemanship of the place: from whence at the length departing, his next entrunce was, as it were, into the closet or rather the priny chamber to this our Court royall: through the windowes of which he might behold the Cathedrall Temple of Saint Paule: vpon whose lower batlements an Antheme was sung, by the Quiristers of the Church to the musicke of loud instruments: which being finisht, a latine Oration was Viua voce deliuered to his grace, by one of maister Mulcasters Schollers, at the dore of the free-schole sownded by the Mercers.

Dixi.

Our next Arch of triumph, was erected aboue the Conduit in Fleetstreete, into which (as into the long and beauteous gallery of the Citie) his Maiestie being entered; a farre off (as if it had beene some swelling Promentory, or rather some inchanted Castle guarded by tenne thousand harmelesse spirits) did his eye encounter another Towre of Pleasure.

Prefenting it felfe.

Fourefcore and ten foote in height, and fiftie in breadth; the gate twentie foote in the perpendicular line, and fourteene in the ground line: The two Posternes were answerable to these that are set downe before: ouer the posternes riz vp in proportionable measures, two turrets, with battlementes on the tops: The middest of the building was laid open to the world, and great reason it should be so, for the Globe of the world, was there seene to mooue, being fild with all the degrees, and states that are in the land: and these were the mechanicall and dead limmes of this carued bodie. As touching those that had the vse of motion in it, and for a neede durst haue spoken, but that there was no stuffe fit for their mouthes.

The principall and worthiest was Astraa, (Iustice) fitting aloft, as being newly descended from heauen, gloriously attirde; all her garments being thickely strewed with starres; a crowne of starres on her head: a Siluer veile couering her eyes. Hauing tolde you that her name was Iustice; I hope you will not put mee to describe what properties she held in her hands, sithence euery painted cloath can informe you.

Directly vnder her, in a Cant by her felfe, was Arate (vertue) inthronde, her garments white, her head crowned, and vnder her Fortura: her foote treading on the Globe, that moude beneath her: Intimating, that his Maiesties fortune, was aboue the world, but his vertues aboue his fortune.

Invidia.

Enuy, vnhandfomely attirde all in blacke, her haire of the fame colour, filletted about with fnakes, flood in a darke and obscure place by her selfe, neere vnto Vertue, but making shew of a fearefulnesse to approach her and the light; yet still & anon, casting her eyes, sometimes to the one side beneath, where on severall Greeces sate the source cardinall vertues;

And fometimes throwing a difforted and repining countenance to the other opposite seate, on which, his Maiesties source kingdomes were aduanced.

All of them, in rich Robes and Mantles; crownes on their heads, and Scepters with penfild fcutchions in their hands, lined with the coats of the particuler kingdomes: for very madnesse, that she beheld these glorious obiects, she stood feeding on the heads of Adders.

The foure Elements in proper shapes, (artificially and aptly expressing their qualities) vpon the approach of his Maiestie, went round in a proportionable and euen circle, touching that cantle of the Globe, (which was open) to the full view of his Maiestie, which being done, they bestowed themselues in such comely order, and stood so, as if the Eronie had beene held up on the tops of their fingers.

Vpon distinct Ascensions, (neatly raised within the hollow wombe of the Globe) were placed all the states of the land, from the Nobleman to the Ploughman, among whom there was not one word to bee heard, for you must imagine as Virgil saith:

Ægl. 4. Magnus ab integro fectorum nafcitur ordo.

Iam redit at * virgo redeunt Saturnia regna. Atræa.

That it was now the golden world, in which there were few parts.

All the tongues that went in this place, was the tongue of Zeale, whose personage was put on by W. Bourne, one of the servants to the young Prince.

And thus went his fpeach.

He populous Globe of this our English Ile, Seemde to mooue backward, at the funerall pile, Of her dead female Maiestie. All states From Nobles downe to fpirits of meaner Fates, Mooude opposite to Nature and to Peace, As if these men had bin Th' Antipodes, But fee, the vertue of a Regall eye, Th' attractive wonder of mans Maiestie, Our Globe is drawne in a right line agen, And now appeare new faces, and new men. The Elements, Earth, Water, Ayre, and Fire, (Which euer clipt a naturall defire, To combat each with other, being at first,) Created enemies to fight their worft, See at the peacefull presence of their King, How quietly they moude, without their fting: Earth not deuouring, Fire not defacing, Water not drowning, & the Ayre not chafing: But proping the queint Fabrick that heere flands, Without the violence of their wrathfull hands.

Mirror of times, lo where thy Fortune fits, Aboue the world, and all our humaine wits, But thy hye Vertue aboue that: what pen, Or Art, or braine can reach thy vertue then? At whose immortall brightnes and true light, Enuies infectious eyes have loft their fight, Her fnakes (not daring to shoot-forth their stings Gainst fuch a glorious object) downe she flings Their forkes of Venome into her owne mawe, Whilst her ranke teeth the glittering poisons chawe, For tis the property of Enuies blood, To dry away at euery kingdomes good, Especially when shee had eyes to view, These foure maine vertues figurde all in you. Iustice in causes, Fortitude gainst foes, Temprance in spleene, and Prudence in all those, And then fo rich an Empyre, whose fayre breft, Contaynes foure Kingdomes by your entrance bleft By Brute divided, but by you alone, All are againe vnited and made One, Whose fruitfull glories shine fo far and euen, They touch not onely earth, but they kiffe heaven, From whence Astraa is descended hither, Who with our last Oueenes Spirit, fled vp thither. Fore-knowing on the earth, fhe could not reft, Till you had lockt her in your rightfull breft. And therefore all Estates, whose proper Arts, Liue by the breath of Majestie, had harts Burning in holy Zeales immaculate fires, With quenchles Ardors, and vnftaind defires, To fee what they now fee, your powerful Grace, Reflecting joyes on every fubjects face. These paynted flames and yellow burning Stripes, Vpon this roab, being but as showes and types, Of that great Zeale. And therefore in the name Of this glad Citie, whither no Prince euer came,

More lou'd, more long'd for, lowely I intreate. You'ld be to her as gracious as y' are great: So with reuerberate shoutes our Globe shall ring, The Muficks close being thus: God faue our King.

If there be any glorie to be won by writing these lynes, I do freelie bestow it (as his due) on Tho. Middleton, in whose braine they were begotten, though they were deliuered heere: Quæ nos non fecimus ipfi, vix ea nostra voco.

But having peiced vp our wings now againe with our owne feathers: fuffer vs a while to be pruning them, and to lay them fmooth, whilft this fong, which went foorth at the found of Hault-boyes, and other lowde instruments, flyes along with the trayne.

Cant.

Where are all these Honors owing? Why are feas of people flowing?

Tell mee, tell me Rumor, Though it be thy Humor More often to be lying,

Than from thy breath to have trueth flying;

Yet alter, now that fashion. And without the streame of passion, Let thy voyce fwim fmooth and cleare.

When words want gilding, then they are most deere.

Behold where Ioue and all the States.

Of Heau'n, through Heau'ns feauen filuer gates,

All in glory riding (Backs of Clowds bestriding) The milky waie do couer,

Which flarry Path being meafur'd ouer,

The Deities conuent,

In Ioues high Court of Parliament. Rumor thou doest loose thy aymes,

This is not Ioue, but One, as great, King IAMES.

And now take we our flight vp to Temple-bar, (the other ende of this our Gallery) where by this time, his Majeftie is vpon the poynt of giuing a gratious and Princely Fare-well to the Lord Major, and the Citie. But that his eye meeting a feauenth beautifull obfect, is invited by that, to delay awhile his (lamented) departure.

The Building being fet out thus.

The Front or Surface of it was proportioned in euery respect like a Temple, being dedicated to Ianus, as by this inscription ouer the Ianus head may appear.

Iano Quadri fronti

Sacrum.

The height of the whole Aedifice, from the grownd line to the top, was 57. foote, the full bredth of it 18. foote: the thicknes of the Pafsage 12.

The perfonages that were in this Temple, are thefe.

1. The principall person, Peace.

2. By her flood, Wealth.

3. Beneath the feet of Peace, lay Mars (War) groueling.

 And vpon her right hand (but with fome little defcent) was feated Quiet, the first hand-maid of Peace.

5. Shee had lying at her feete, Tumult.

6. On the other fide was the feconde hand-mayd, Libertie at whose feete lay a Catte.

7. This person trod vpon Seruitude.

8. The third handmaid was Safety.

9. Beneath her was Danger,

10. The fourth attendant was, Falicitie:

11. At her feete, Vnhappines.

Within the Temple was an Altar, to which, vpon the approach of the King, a Flamin appeares, and to him, the former Genius of the Citie. The effect of whose speech was, that whereas the Flamin came to performe rites there, in honour of one Anna a goddesse of the Romaines, the Genius vowes, that none shall doe Sacrifice there, but himselfe, the offring that he makes being, the Heart of the Citie, &c.

And thus have wee (lowely and aloofe) followed our Soueraigne through the feauen Triumphal gates of this his Court Royall, which name, as London receiued at the ryfing of the Sunne; fo now at his going from her (euen in a moment) She lost that honour: And being (like an Actor on a Stage) stript out of her borrowed Majestie, she resignes her former shape & title of Citie; nor is it quite loft, confidering it went along with him, to whom it is due: For fuch Vertue is begotten in Princes, that their verie presence hath power to turne a Village to a Citie, and to make a Citie appeare great as a Kingdome. Behold how glorious a Flower, Happinesse is, but how fading. The Minutes (that lackey at the heeles of Time) run not faster away then do our joyes. What tongue could have exprest the raptures on which the foule of the Citie was carried beyond it felfe, for the space of manie houres? What wealth could have allurde her to have closed her eies, at the comming of her King, and yet See, her Bridegrome is but stept from her, and in a Minute (nay in shorter time, then a thought can be borne) is the made a Widdow. All her confolation being now, to repeate ouer by roate those Honors, which lately she had perfectly by hart: And to tell of those joyes, which but euen now, shee reallie behelde; yet thus of her abfent, beloued, do I heare her gladly and heartily fpeaking.

Infreta dum Fluvii Current: dum montibus vmbræ, Lustrabvnt Conuexa, Polus dum sidera pascit, Semper Honos Nomenque tuum, Laudesque manebunt.

The Pageant in the Strond.

THE Citie of Westminster and Dutchy of Lancaster, perceiving what preparation their neighbor citie made to entertain her Soueraigne; though in greatnes they could not match her, yet in greatnes of Loue and Duetie, they gaue testimonie, that both were equall. And in token they were so, hands and hearts went together: and in the Strond, erected vp a Monument of their affection.

The Inuention was a Rayne-bowe, the Moone, Sunne, and the feauen Starres, called the Pleiades, being aduaunced betweene two Pyramides: Electra (one of those feauen hanging in the aire, in figure of a Comet) was the speaker, her words carrying this effect.

That as his Majestie had left the Citie of London, happy, by deliuering it frô the noyfe of tumult: so he would crowne this place with the like joyes; which being done, shee reckons vp a number of blessings, that will follow vpon it.

The worke of this was thought vpon, begun and made perfect in xij. daies.

As touching those fiue which the Citie builded, the Arbor in Cheap-fide, and the Temple of Ianus, at Temple-bar, were both of them begun and finisht in fixe weekes. The rest were taken in hande, first in March last, after his Majestie was proclaymed, vpon which, at that time, they wrought till a Moneth after S. Iames his day following, and then gaue ouer by reason of the sicknes: At this second setting vpon the, fix weekes more were spent.

The Shomakers Holiday.

On what authority is this play fometimes afcribed to Barten Holiday and to others? That Dekker was the author, even if Henflowe's testimony were wanting, is, as will be feen, abundantly proved by internal evidence.

The original edition of this comedy, as also that of Old Fortunatus, is printed in black letter.

wher's Cifly Bumtrinket your maid?

The same term is used by Richard Brome in the Beggars' song, in the comedy of The Jovial Crew. Dekker also uses it in Satiromastix (p. 220).

The Comedie of Old Fortunatus.

Hazlitt fays that this play "has the idle garrulity of age, with the frefhnefs and gaiety of youth ftill upon its cheek and in its heart." The plan is founded on an old German romance, which was reprinted and translated a great many times during the fixteenth century. Dekker has preferved the original names and the main outline of the ftory.

Some cal her Pandora.

From the evils Pandora is said to have brought on mortals, and the fense in consequence generally attached to her name, this seems a somewhat equivocal compliment; but Dekker alludes only to her name, which signifies all-accomplished, and perhaps to the corresponding description of her in the "Theogony" of Hesiod. Gloriana, Cynthia, Belphœbe, and Astrea, were undoubtedly appellations applied to Elizabeth by the Poets of her time, although there is probably no other instance in which she is praised under the name of Pandora.

This is probably an allusion to a line found in Lyly's Grammar:

Effodiuntur opes, irritamenta malorum. as by chinks, in the first instance, money is meant, and the holes in his dress in the second.

PAGE 89.

My tongue speakes no language but an Almond for Parrat, and cracke me this Nut.

It is fomewhat difficult to affix any precise meaning to these phrases, which, however, occur not unfrequently in the writings of the time. There is a scarce black letter work named "An Almond for a Parrot;" and a play called "Crack me this Nut," was performed at the Rose Theatre in 1595. This latter is also one of the titles of a pamphlet of Lyly's.

aftes, ix. 14, sqq. "The poor man's wifdom is defpifed, and his words are not heard."

thou wilt repent That for the love of droffe thou hall despised Wiscdomes divine embrace.

It is evident that many of the fentiments in this scene were drawn by our poet from the choice made by Solomon in the beginning of his reign, of wisdom, in preference to riches, or honour, or power over his enemies, or length of life, as recorded in the First Book of Kings: and it should be remembered to their honour that many noble images and illustrations were derived from the same divine source by the dramatic poets of that age.

Gold is the strength, the sunrewes of the world.

"No wonder," fays Campbell, who quotes this Scene in his Specimens, "poor Dekker could rife a degree above the level of his ordinary genius in defcribing the bleffings of Fortunatus's inexhauftible purfe: he had probable felt but too keenly the force of what he expresses in the misanthropy of Ampedo,

"I'm not enamour'd of this painted idol," &c.

PAGE 97.

"Music with her filver found" is a quotation from a poem by Richard Edwards, in The Paradise of Dainty Devices, 1576, 1597. The stanza containing these words is also quoted in Romeo and Juliet, towards the end of the fourth act. A similar expression "Musicke with her silver tongue" occurs again in the Comedy of Old Fortunatus. Dekker seems indeed to have had a special fondness for this phrase, for we read also in Satiro-massix.

"Muficke talke lowder, that thy filver voice," &c.

Whether it were lead or lattin that hafpt downe those winking casements.

The word latten, which occurs in act 1. of The Merry Wives of Windfor has been differently explained by the commentators.

Theobald fupposes it to have been the old orichalc; Malone that it was made of copper and calimini, and Steevens, who quotes the passage in the text, seems inclined to think it tin. Chaucer says in The Frankeleines Tale:

"And this was, as the bookes me remember, The colde frofty fefon of December. Phebus waxe old and hewed like laton, That in his hote declination Shone as the burned gold with ftremes bright: But now in Capricorne adoun he light, When as he from ful pale, I dare wel fain."

"Infected with the fashions" is one of the diforders of Petruchio's horse, as described by Biondello in act 3. of Taming of the Shrew. "It is so called in the West of England," says Grey, but by the best writers on farriery, farcens or farcy. "Steevens, among other instances of its use by the old writers, adduces the passage in the text.

In the original the word in parenthesis is misprinted dread. For the very obvious correction made in the text I have the high authority of Charles Lamb, who says of the scene which these lines close:—"The humour of a frantic lover is here done to the life. Orleans is as passionate an inamorato as any which Shakespeare ever drew. He is just such another adept in love's reasons. He talks 'pure Biron and Romeo,' he is almost as poetical as they, quite as philofophical, only a little madder." Specimens (1808) p. 62-63.

The pavan, which is here spoken of, is said in the Alchemist of Ben Jonson, to be a Spanish dance. It is also mentioned in the last scene of Twelsth Night. It seems to have been a majestic and stately dance, and is particularly described by Sir John Hawkins in a note on Twelsth Night.

This play is an answer to Ben Jonson's Poetaster, which had been brought out at the Blackfriars by the children of the Queen's chapel in the previous year. Marston and Dekker had, it feems, perfifted for fome years in ridiculing Jonfon on the stage, till he found it necessary to draw up the Poetaster, in which, together with the untruffing, the whipping, and the ftinging, he anticipated and answered many of the accusations subsequently brought against him in the Satiro-mastix. As Marston and Dekker had headed the cabal against him, he introduced them under the respective names of Crispinus and Demetrius; Marston is very diffinctly marked: Dekker might, perhaps, have "fat still unquestioned "-at least with posterity-had not the justice of the fatire filled him with rage, and induced him to appropriate the character of Demetrius to himfelf in an angry recrimination. He was (apparently to his own fatisfaction) put forward by the rest as their defender. Jonson must have been aware of this, for he makes one of the players fay of Dekker, "his doublet's a little decayed, otherwife he is a very fimple honest fellow, fir, one Demetrius, a dreffer of plays about the town here; we have hired him to abuse Horace, and bring him in in a play."

Dekker, being both a rapid and a popular writer, the choice of a champion was not injudicious. The Satiro-maflix was produced in 1602. Jonfon had played with his fubject; but Dekker writes in downright paffion, and foams through every page. He makes no pretentions to invention, but takes up the characters of his predeceffor, turns them the Jeany Jide without, and produces a coarfe and ill-wrought caricature. Tucca who, in Jonfon's hands, is amufing with all his infolence and rapacity, degenerates with Dekker into a mere candidate for Tyburn. Nor is this the worft. In transferring the feene from the court of Augustus to England, Dekker has the inconceivable folly to fix on William Rusus, a rude and ignorant foldier, whom he ridiculously terms "learning's true Mæcenas, poesy's king," for the champion of literature, when his brother, Henry I., who aspired to the reputation of a scholar, would have entered into his plot with equal facility.—GIFFORD, Memoir of Ben Jonson.

"William Rufus, 'learning's true Mæcenas, poefy's king,' it may be prefumed, was the ignorant William Shakefpeare, "fkilled in the hawking and hunting languages;" fo that Dekker's felection appears to have been peculiarly appropriate. The wits of Elizabeth were not afleep.

In this comedy Shakespeare is King William, and Lyly is Sir Vaughan ap Rees; the remark of Tucca, "be not so tart my precious Metheglin," identifies Lyly with Amorphus, reminding us of the Metheglin and Pythagorical breeches in Cynthia's Revels, which, I hold, are fatirical allusions to the transmigrations through Sir Hugh Evans and Captain Fluellen; whilst in the remark, "you nasty Tortois, you and your itchy poetry break out like Christmas, but once a year," we have probably the germ of Caliban."

The two plays of Shakespeare, in which the character here alluded to, appears—i. e., the Second Part of K. Henry IV. and The Merry Wives of Windsor—were brought out in 1600—1602. The allusion in the text seems to prove that the samous justice had already become a household word.

"The beauty and force of this fcene," fays Charles Lamb," "are much diminished to the reader of the entire play, when he comes to find that this solemn preparation is but a sham contrivance of the father's, and the potion which Coelestina swallows nothing more than a sleeping draught, from the effects of which she is to awake in due time, to the surprise of her husband, and the great mirth and edification of the king and his courtiers. As Hamlet says, they do but 'poison in jest.' The sentiments are worthy of a real martyrdom, and an Appian sacrifice in earnest." But as Terrill and his bride both believed the facrifice to be real, we cannot concur in these strictures of the gentle Elia.

Sane thee, my most gracious King a Harts sane thee, all hats and caps are thine, and therefore I vaile: for but to thee great Sultane Soliman, &c.

Compare the final scenes of The Shomakers Holiday, where Simon Eyre talks in much the same way to the King. "Sim Eyre knowes how to speake to a Pope, to Sultan Solyman, to Tamberlaine, and he were here." Both Eyre and Tucca ask of their Sovereign the boon of his presence to grace a banquet. The difference is that the bonhonnie of the former is genuine and natural, and that of the latter assumed and artificial.

In the Epilogue to Dekker's Satiro-malix, Tucca addreffes the audience generally as "two penny tenants," having previously told them, "Ill see you all here for your two-pence apiece again, before I'll lose your company," as if the price had been, for some reason, temporarily lowered to that rate. This play was performed before 1602, by the Lord Chamberlain's fervants and by the Children of St. Pauls. In the body of it, Tucca speaks degradingly of "penny-bench theatres," where "a gentleman or an honest citizen" might fit "with his squirrel by his side cracking nuts;" which agrees with a passage in his Gull's Horn-Book, 1609, where he remarks, "your groundling and gallery commoner buys his sport for a penny," as if the admission to the yard, where people stood, and to the gallery, where they sat, were the same.

Dekker uses the word again in his Pageant of Troia Nova Triumphans (vol. III., p. 243).

Gracious-street.

See also The Shomakers Holiday, p. 69: "the great new hall in Gracious streete corner." The present name, Gracechurchstreet, is but little more correct than the corrupted appellation of Dekker's time. St. Bennet Grass-church, at the south-west corner of Fenchurch-street, was so called from its vicinity to the Grass-market, formerly held close by. The customs or duties of this market, in the reign of Edward III., are printed in Stow's Survey, ed. 1603, p. 214.

Jefiades, i.e., Solomon, the grandfon of Jeffe. It is almost needless to observe how much the King admired this agnomen, or how often it was attributed to him. In the Presace to his Works, by Bishop Montacute, we read "God hath given us a Solomon, and God above all things gave Solomon wisdom," &c. Amoniades probably signifies Apollo, the son of Jupiter (Ammon).

Troynouant is now no more a Citie.

The name of Troynovant here given to London, and also in a Pageant by Dekker, entitled Troia Nova Triumphans (1612), is derived from the once popular fable of Geoffry of Monmouth, who declares that Brute, a lineal descendant of Æneas, "the grandson of Jupiter, by his daughter Venus, builded this citie about the year of the world 2885," (or 1008 years before the nativity of Christ), and named it Trinovantum, Troy-novant, (or New Troy), in remembrance of Troy, from whence he came, calling the country Britain after his own name.

After spending more than five years at Oxford, he made so great a proficiency in several forts of learning, that he was unanimously chosen master of the school erected in 1561 in the parish of St. Laurence, Pountney, by the Worshipful Company of Merchant-taylors of that City. In 1596 he succeeded one Joh. Harrison in the Chief Mastership of St. Pauls School in London, and soon after had the rich parsonage of Stamford Rivers in Effex bestowed on him by Queen Elizabeth.
